The young man on the cover is up in the air over winter sports, sharing the spirit of the season with growing numbers like him all over the country. There was a time, not many years ago, when commercial ski slopes could be found with difficulty anywhere but the northernmost parts of the east coast, and the renowned resorts like Sun Valley in the West. Today, slopes are growing like winter icicles, and the fans love them, broken bones and all.

REPORT

from the General President

SAL MASO

In this past month each Secretary of each local union should have received a sample copy of the constitution and by-laws for local unions. I urge you to compare your existing by-laws and constitution with the sample received and make whatever changes are necessary.

As I visit the local unions and meet with the members, it is gratifying to me to see the spirit of our members and the efforts they are exercising to meet their responsibilities as local unions and members of the International Union. I have also noticed that lathing systems are being used more extensively in construction today; and our job opportunity potential is becoming more increasingly apparent. In consideration of these facts, I wholeheartedly agree with the views of General Secretary-Treasurer J. Earl Ferguson on the importance of active and effective apprenticeship programs. The local union requirement for apprentices is specifically spelled out in Section 194 (b) of the LIU Constitution, which states "The ratio of apprentices to journeymen shall be one apprentice to each local plus one apprentice to each five journeymen."

Our best source of qualified and competent lathers is our apprenticeship program. It is while we are apprentices that we not only learn related math, blueprinting reading, and theory but it is at this time that we should be instilled with good basic trade union principles.

It is most important, that all apprentices be encouraged to take part in their union meetings and union activities. Your Local agreements and working rules should be explained to the apprentices, so that they will see the benefits of organization, and realize that hard work and sacrifice are necessary to maintain the advances that have already been made.

The National Lathing Industry's Joint Apprenticeship Program is directed by Leo Schultz, 6401 New Hampshire Avenue, Hyattsville, Md., who will be very pleased to send your local unions any information about the program.

All of you I know are completely familiar with the court litigation that has taken place with reference to the Dr. Dunlop Hearings Panel decision on ceiling systems. Since my last report, our attorneys have filed supplemental affidavits and briefs in opposition to motions filed by the Attorneys for the Hearings Panel, N.A.C.A., participating speciality contractors, and the Building Trades Department, all of which are reproduced as a part of my report. You will note that the Sheet Metal Workers International Association has joined in our efforts to prove that in our efforts to prove that the National Joint Board and Hearings Panel has exceeded their authority by rendering a national decision in the face of governing agreements and decisions of record.

I know that these reports are lengthy, but I urge each and everyone of you to read it in its entirety so that you are completely informed on all details involved in this extremely important matter.

Sincerely and fraternally,

Civil Action No. 1221-66

ADDITIONAL AFFIDAVIT OF SAL MASO

STATE OF MARYLAND }
COUNTY OF PRINCE GEORGE'S } ss:

SAL MASO, being first duly sworn, does depose and says as follows:

1. Annexed hereto as Exhibits 1-6 are additional decisions of the Building and Construction Trades Department demonstrating the Department's application of the 1903 agreement and 1920 decision to light iron work in ceiling systems where no plaster is involved, rejecting defendant Carpenters' contention that that agreement and decision are not applicable to such work on such systems.

2. Since 1948, every successive publication of the Green Book has contained the 1903 agreement and the 1920 decision. The 1903 agreement has always been published under the same caption which appears in the 1965 Green Book, to wit:

"JURISDICTIONAL AGREEMENTS ENTERED INTO BETWEEN AFFILIATED INTERNATIONAL UNIONS AND DECISIONS RENDERED AFFECTING THE BUILDING INDUSTRY THAT ARE HELD TO BE OPERATIVE BY THE BUILDING AND CONSTRUCTION TRADES DEPARTMENT

By the

American Federation of Labor, Building and Construction Trades Department, A. F. of L., National Board for Jurisdictional Awards."

3. Article X of the Building and Construction Trades Department Constitution, as it appears in the 1966 edition, as amended December, 1965 (Comp., Exh. 3), was originally adopted by a special convention of the Department in 1957 and its language has remained intact since that date. At the same time that convention also adopted a new preamble, that which appears in the 1966 edition, carrying forward and recognizing "all official decisions, rulings and agreements of record" (Comp., Exh. 3, pp. 2-3; Memorandum of Points and Authorities in Support of Plaintiff's Motion for Summary Judgment, p. 3, par. 4). Article X was plainly intended to be, and must be, construed and applied in conformity with the Preamble.

Indeed, as appears in the Report of Proceedings of the Special Convention of the Department in 1957, pages 19-20, 21-22, plaintiff Lathers submitted a Resolution to assure that decisions and agreements of record would be binding upon arbitrators under the Plan. The Resolution read as follows:

"WHEREAS, The Constitution in its present form does not specifically provide that the authorized tribunal for settlement of jurisdictional disputes shall adhere strictly to the decisions and agreements of record as contained in the Green Book and official publication of the Department; now there be it

Resolved, That Article X, Page 29, after the word "as" in the first line be amended to read as follows:
'the Official Plan of the Department and that the authorized Tribunal under this plan shall in making decisions or rulings adhere strictly to the decisions and agreements of record set forth in the Green Book or the official publication of the Department and any decision or ruling made contrary thereto shall not be used as a precedent for any future ruling or decision. Such plan shall be final and binding upon the Department and all affiliated national or international unions and their affiliated Local Unions.'"

The Committee on Laws recommended non-concurrence in this resolution (p. 21):

"because in the opinion of your Committee the purposes contained in the Resolution are already covered by the contents of the "Green Book" and the Procedural Rules and Regulations of the National Joint Board for the Settlement of Jurisdictional Disputes in the Building and Construction Industry."

The report of the Committee was adopted.

SUPPLEMENTAL STATEMENT OF MATERIAL FACTS

Plaintiff supplements as follows its Statement of Material Facts concerning which, it contends, there is no genuine issue:

1. Article III, Section 5, of the Plan provides that the Joint Board "may * * * refer a repetitive dispute which it finds not to be governed by a decision or agreement of record to the Impartial Umpire for * * * establishment of a hearings panel and a national decision." (Comp. Exh. 1.) Under this provision, the Joint Board is not authorized to refer, and a Hearings Panel is not authorized to make a national decision on, a dispute governed by a decision of record or an agreement of record. This limitation is designed to protect against infraction by national decision the interests of labor organizations affiliated with the Department in existing agreements and decisions of record. (Dept. Constitution, Preamble, Comp., Exh. 3).

2. Agreements and decisions of record recognized under the Department Constitution and considered operative by the Department are published in the 1965 Green Book as part of the Plan.

(a) The January 14, 1903 agreement entered into by the Carpenters and Lathers is published at page 17 under the caption (p. 11):

By the

American Federation of Labor, Building and Construction Trades Department, A. F. of L., National Board for Jurisdictional Awards."

(b) The April 28, 1920 decision which awards "the erection and installation of all light iron work, such as light iron furring, brackets, clips, hangers * * * and metallic lathing of all descriptions * * * solely to the Lathers" is set forth at page 87 of the Green Book under the general caption (p. 81):

"DECISIONS RENDERED BY THE NATIONAL BOARD FOR JURISDICTIONAL AWARDS IN THE BUILDING INDUSTRY."

The April 28, 1920 decision states that it is "based in conformity with the agreement entered into by the national officers of both organizations and endorsed by the Kansas City Convention of Structural Iron Workers and concurred in by the American Federation of Labor."

(c) The aforesaid agreement and decision have been published under the same rubric in every edition of the Green Book since 1948.

3. Publication in the Green Book reflects and results from repeated rejection by the Department and the parties of defendant Carpenters' contentions concerning the existence and efficacy of the 1903 agreement (Reply of Plaintiff Lathers to Statement of Defendants Dunlop, et al., of Points and Authorities in Opposition to Plaintiff Lathers Motion for Summary Judgment).

4. Defendants' decisions at issue are predicated upon adoption by defendants of the very Carpenter contentions concerning existence and scope of the 1903 agreement and 1920 decision which the Department and the parties to the 1965 Plan rejected (Statement of Defendants Dunlop, et al., of Points and Authorities in Opposition to Plaintiff Lathers' Motion for Summary Judgment, pp. 1-3).

5. There is no evidence that the parties to the Plan intended to authorize the arbitrators to reconsider and reverse their aforesaid decisions and determinations by finding that a decision and agreement of record published in the 1965 Green Book is not recognized or does not govern.

6. Whether a decision or agreement of record governs is a threshold question going to the power of the Joint Board and the Hearings Panel under Article III, Section 5. The Plan contains no provision making their determination of this question final and binding.

Civil Action No. 1221-66

REPLY OF PLAINTIFF LATHERS TO STATEMENT OF DEFENDANTS DUNLOP, ET AL., OF POINTS AND AUTHORITIES IN OPPOSITION TO PLAINTIFF LATHERS' MOTION FOR SUMMARY JUDGEMENT

1. Properly focused, the issue posed on defendants' Statement is whether the Joint Board and Hearings Panel are authorized under Article III, Section 5, to reconsider and reverse the Department's rejection of defendant Carpenters' contention that the 1903 agreement is not currently operative and should not be recognized. We contend that reversal is usurpation and "infidelity,"¹ for we deem conclusive the contracting parties' 1965 declaration that the 1903 agreement is "HELD TO BE OPERATIVE BY THE BUILDING AND CONSTRUCTION TRADES DEPARTMENT" (Comp., Exh. 1, Green Book, p. 11, Title). The question simply is whether Article III, Section 5, delegates to the Joint Board and the Hearings Panel authority to hold inoperative an agreement the parties hold operative.

Defendants do not address themselves to this issue at all. They blithely assume that the Joint Board and the Hearings Panel were empowered to entertain and evaluate the Carpenters' contentions res integra, as if the Department had not resolved Carpenters' claim but left it to arbitrators. Yet we have shown without contradiction that inclusion of the 1903 agreement under the rubric "operative" in the 1965 Green Book results from and reflects the Department's historic rejection on the merits of each and every one of Carpenters' contentions; the very contentions defendant arbitrators admit (pp. 1-3), they adopted.

The Department's statement in 1941 that the 1903 "agreement has been in full force and effect since [January 14, 1903] and is the guide for the Department" in jurisdictional disputes between Carpenters and Lathers (Maso Aff., Exh. 16(2)), pretermits Carpenters' argument (Statement, p. 2), that the agreement was temporary, not legally recognized or relied on, or unilaterally abrogated by Carpenters. Proof that the agreement and the 1920 decision were consistently printed in every edition since 1948 and were deemed applicable by the Department (as well as by the Joint Board as late as 1955), to disputes over items indistinguishable from those here in issue (P's Memo. of P. & A., par. 9, pp. 9-10; Maso Additional Affidavit), forecloses Carpenters' argument that the 1903 agreement was not recognized or relied on as a jurisdictional agreement or decision of record. Undisputed proof that the Department repeatedly rejected Carpenters' attempts, based upon precisely the same arguments the Joint Board and Hearings Panel accepted, to have the 1903 agreement removed from the Green Book (P's Memo. of P. & A., par. 11, pp. 11-12), precludes Carpenters' argument that the 1903 agreement should not be considered operative because it was superseded by negotiation of a specific ceiling systems agreement or disavowed by plaintiff Lathers.

Finally, the Department consistently and repeatedly rejected defendant Carpenters' construction of the agreement (Statement, p. 3), based upon Chairman Duffy's letter of 1912, that "where no plaster is used the Lathers have no jurisdiction." Rejection is shown not only by President John Donlin's letter of April 23, 1917: "the suspension of ceilings to receive wire or metal lath is properly" Lathers' work, but by the decision of July 25, 1919, published at page 93 of the 1953 Green Book (Maso Aff., Exh. 9), and page 108 of the 1965 Green Book (Comp., Exh. 1), as follows:

"The erection or construction of plaster board ceilings or partitions which are to receive plaster is the work of the Lather. This form of construction is fundamentally and primarily a lathing feature, as is wire lath attached to light iron furring. The studs or runners used in this form of construction are in principle similar to light iron furring as conceded to the Lather." (Emphasis added.)

It is to be emphasized that the July 25, 1919 decision is set forth under the caption: "DECISIONS RENDERED AND HELD TO BE OPERATIVE BY THE BUILDING AND CONSTRUCTION TRADES DEPARTMENT." Rejection is further shown, of course, by the demonstrated application of the 1903 agreement to light iron work involved in ceiling systems where no plaster or plaster board was used.

Accordingly, the question presented is not whether, as an initial proposition, there are "reasonable grounds" for defendant Carpenters' contentions (Statement, p. 3). The question rather is whether the Joint Board and the Hearings Panel were empowered to sustain those contentions in the face of their rejection by the Department.

Defendants' assertion (p. 3), that "there is nothing in these decisions which constitute a deletion or amendment of any decision or agreement of record" is mere word play. The decisions hold the 1903 agreement inoperative and assign to Carpenters light iron ceiling work which that agreement and the 1920 decision assign to Lathers. Unless set aside, defendants' decision will become "of record" pursuant to Article III, Section 1 (d), p. 7, of the Plan (Comp., Exh. 1), ipso facto superseding, revising and amending the 1903 agreement and 1920 decision. In the words of the Hearings Panel itself, the earlier agreement and decision will have been "modernize[d]." (Comp., Exh. 19, pp. 12-13). Thus, the question whether the arbitrators have the power they assert under Article III, Section 5, to reverse, revise or amend recognized agreements and decisions of record is squarely presented.

2. The fallacy underlying defendants' theory (pp. 3-4), that the Joint Board and the Hearings Panel are entitled finally, without judicial review, to resolve the conflict between Lathers and Carpenters over whether the 1903 agreement and 1920 decision "govern" within the meaning of Article III, Section 5, is the assumption that that conflict is a "jurisdictional dispute" within the meaning of Article X of the Constitution. However, that is not a "jurisdictional dispute"; rather, as Humphrey v. Moore, 375 U.S. 335, illustrates, it is a contract construction dispute over the authority of the Joint Board to refer, and of the Hearings Panel to decide on a national basis, the jurisdictional dispute over light iron work on ceiling systems. This "Court has a right to set aside an arbitration award if the arbitrators exceed their authority" (Per J. Holtzoff in this proceeding, Sept 28, 1966, Tr. 18). The "jurisdictional dispute" is whether Carpenters or Lathers should be assigned light iron ceiling work. All the Plan makes "final and binding" is a decision on the merits of that dispute by the particular tribunal judicially determined to be empowered under the Plan to decide it.

3. Defendants' reliance (pp. 5-7), upon the Executive Council's treatment of President Maso's objections is misplaced. The Council held merely that Department affiliates must look to the Plan for protection in jurisdictional disputes, and that the Council cannot take action against alleged abuses of power by arbitrators. The Council did not hold or imply that arbitrators are authorized to defy or override the Plan by denying operative effect to "agreements or decisions recognized under the provisions of the Constitution of the Building and Construction Trades Department" (Plan, Art. III, Sec. 1(d)). The Council's action merely demonstrates that there are no internal remedies within the Department to correct arbitrators' usurpation, and that relief against abuse of authority by arbitrators must come, as Section 301 of the Labor Management Relations Act contemplates it will, from the courts.

4. Defendants' only justification for arguing that under Article III, Section 5, arbitrators may legally consider inoperative an agreement or decision the Department considers operative is that a contrary result would be inconsistent with the broad delegation to the arbitrators under Article X of the Department Constitution of authority to decide "all jurisdictional disputes" (p. 6). The short answer is that, as we have already demonstrated, controversy over whether an agreement or decision of record should or should not be held "operative" is not a "jurisdictional dispute," and denial of the asserted authority does not bar decision of any jurisdictional dispute by the Joint Board under Article III, Section 1(a) and (b), of the Plan, and on appeal from its decision by the Appeals Board under Article II, Section 5. That a jurisdictional dispute is "national" in scope does not establish that it is susceptible to decision under Article III, Section 5, on a national basis. It should go without saying that considerations of expediency and economics, advanced by the arbitrators and their amici, cannot possibly justify disregard of contractual limitations.

Conflict with the Department Constitution is produced not by denial of the arbitral authority asserted but rather by its affirmation. Historically, arbitration under the Plan has been limited to jurisdictional disputes in areas not covered by agreements or decisions recognized by the Department (Maso Supp. Aff., p. 2; Maso Add. Aff.; Carlough Aff.). Article X of the Constitution was adopted in 1957, simultaneously with a new Preamble, which recognizes and carries forward "all official decisions, rulings and agreements of record" (Maso Add. Aff.). Certainly it cannot be contended that prior to the 1965 amendments arbitrators were authorized under Article III, Section 5 to override the Department's determinations as to which agreements and decisions were operative, or to decide jurisdictional disputes in areas covered by agreements and decisions of record. In their Statement of Points and Authorities in Support of their Motion for Summary Judgement, pages 4-6, defendants relied upon the 1965 revision of Article III, Section 1, as effectuating the change. But we demonstrated that this revision affected only job and locality decisions; authority over national decisions was in no way expanded.

Defendants now assert, instead (p. 6), that the parties intended to divest the Department Convention of all function and authority in jurisdictional disputes and that denial to arbitrators of power to supersede Departmental recognition of agreements and decisions would be inconsistent with that intention. If the asserted intention could be proved,² defendants would perhaps be entitled to prevail.

However, not only is no proof offered, the assertion is not even verified.

The plain terms of the Plan provide conclusive refutation. The Plan defines the "record" as consisting of "agreements and decisions recognized under the provisions of the Constitution of the Building and Construction Trades Department." (Article 3, Section(c)). Withdrawal of recognition, thus, requires amendment of the Constitution; amendment, of course, is a function of the Department Convention, not the arbitrators.

The minutes of the negotiating committee meetings (Maso Supp. Aff., Exhs. 1-5) provide further refutation. If the parties intended to empower arbitrators to overrule the Department Convention; if they intended to divest of protection against arbitrators all agreements and decisions declared operative by the Department; if they intended to divest the Department Convention of its authority to determine whether to discontinue recognition of particular agreements or decisions printed in the Green Book, some suggestion that so revolutionary an innovation was intended would surely be found in the minutes of the negotiating committee. There is not one word. Moreover, none of the Unions affiliated with the Department was apprised of any such intention. The affidavits of Presidents Maso and Carlough that no such intention was expressed or communicated stand uncontradicted. The total absence of discussion of so controversial a proposal would seem to be decisive.

Contracting parties generally leave to arbitrators power to interpret and to apply their agreements; they sometimes leave to arbitrators power to fashion agreements in areas where they are unable to agree; but they never leave to arbitrators power to revise or rewrite agreements. To impute to the contracting parties in this case an undisclosed intention to empower arbitrators to do that would convict them of duplicity or worse.

"[A]n arbitrator is confined to interpretation and application of the [jurisdictional dispute] agreement; he does not sit to dispense his own brand of [jurisdictional] justice. He may of course look for guidance from many sources, yet his award is legitimate only so long as it draws its essence from the [jurisdictional dispute] agreement. When the arbitrator's words manifest an infidelity to this obligation, courts have no choice but to refuse enforcement of the award." Steelworkers v. Enterprise Corp., 363 U.S. 593, 597.

CONCLUSION

Plaintiffs contend that defendants other than Carpenters are guilty of infidelity to the Plan by:

(1) Allowing defendant Carpenters to reopen, and sustaining Carpenters' contentions concerning, the 1903 agreement, in the teeth of the parties' rejection of those contentions and their 1965 agreement that the 1903 agreement is "operative";

(2) Rewriting, amending, modifying or revising the 1903 agreement and 1920 decision in a national decision which awards Lathers' light iron ceiling work to Carpenters.

Plaintiffs contend that defendant Carpenters is in violation of the 1903 agreement and the Plan by rejecting and repudiating the official determination that the 1903 agreement is operative.

The subsidiary facts on which plaintiff's contentions are predicated are not subject to genuine controversy. Plaintiffs are entitled to judgement as a matter of law.

Civil Action No. 1221-66

OPPOSITION OF PLAINTIFF LATHERS TO MEMORANDUM OF AMICUS CURIAE IN SUPPORT OF DEFENDANTS' MOTION FOR SUMMARY JUDGEMENT

Amici contend that judicial review is barred of the determination by the Joint Board and the Hearings Panel that "there is no recognized decision or agreement of record covering the items in dispute" (Comp., Exhs. 7, 19 (p. 11)), because the Plan entrusts this issue "to the discretion and decision of the arbitrators" (p. 3); the arbitrators accorded plaintiff a "full and fair hearing" (ibid) and plaintiff "has not and cannot show in any of their determinations * * * any 'infidelity' to the agreement establishing the Plan" (p. 4).

A. THE PLAN DOES NOT BESTOW FINALITY
ON THE ARITRAL DETERMINATION

Amici do not suggest that the Plan explicitly attaches finality to the determination of the arbitrators on the question of existence of a governing decision or agreement of record. They argue that finality should be implied because "this is precisely the kind of question, requiring an informed and experienced judgment, that the parties * * * entrusted to the discretion and decision of the Joint Board and the Hearings Panel * * *." The short answer is that Humphrey v. Moore, 375 U.S. 335, 345-348, distinguishes questions of contract construction and application such as this, which go to the authority of the arbitrators, from questions which go merely to the merits or to procedure. On questions of authority, finality is not implied.

Assertion (p. 3), that it "is of no legal importance" whether an issue is "jurisdictional," "procedural" or "substantive," flouts Wiley's reiteration of the distinction between issues which go to "substantive arbitrability" and other (376 U.S. at 546-547), and Humphrey's demonstration that authority "to render a given award" is for the courts to decide after the award issues. Torrington Co. v. Metal Products Workers Union Local 1645, 362 F. 2d 677, 680, and note 6 (2 Cir.).

Moreover, whether a decision or agreement of record governs a dispute over work assignment is not at all the same "kind of question" as the appropriate allocation of work where there is no governing agreement or decision of record. Only the latter is entrusted by the Plan finally to arbitrators. The former differs as clearly from the latter as the question of "absorption" differs from the question of "seniority" in Humphrey. Here, as in Humphrey, the preliminary question, going to the authority of the arbitrators, entails only construction and application of the agreement, a typically judicial function. Whether the parties authorized the arbitrators to overrule the parties' rejection of Carpenters' contentions is ultimately for the Court, not the arbitrators, to decide.

B. HEARING BY THE ARBITRATORS DOES NOT FORE-
CLOSE ULTIMATE JUDICIAL DETERMINATION

The argument that judicial determination is barred because the arbitrators accorded plaintiff a "full and fair hearing" on the issue of their authority is also refuted by Humphrey v. Moore, 375 U.S. 335, 350-351. There the Court treated the issue of arbitrators' authority as subject to ultimate judicial determination, despite the fact that plaintiffs were found to have been accorded a full and fair hearing.

C. PLAINTIFF DOES CHARGE "INFIDELITY" TO THE PLAN

Plaintiff contends that the Plan, consistent with the Department Constitution, authorizes national decision only in areas not covered by agreements and decisions of record published in the Green Book. Plaintiff contends that Article III, Section 5, of the Plan binds arbitrators to respect this limitation and does not leave it to their "discretion" to evade and defeat it by deciding that agreements and decisions published in the Green Book are not "recognized," or operative or that they do not cover items which the Department has held they do cover. Assertion by arbitrators that they are not so bound, or that they have power to override such published agreements and decisions for the purpose of "modernizing" them is, we submit, "infidelity" to the Plan. The words of the Joint Board and the Hearings Panel in this case indisputably manifest infidelity to their obligation to honor the Department's rejection of defendant Carpenters' contentions and to refrain from national decision in areas covered by operative agreements and decisions. Unless as a matter of law the authority of the arbitrators is unlimited, "courts have no choice but to refuse enforcement of the award." Steelworkers v. Enterprise Corp., 363 U.S. 593, 597.

D. JUDICIAL REVIEW WILL ASSURE DISPOSITION OF JURISDICTIONAL DISPUTES IN ACCORDANCE WITH THE PLAN

Counsel for amici sonorously proclaim, but by unverified motion only (p. 3), that granting the relief requested "would have a serious and adverse impact on the Plan * * * adversely affect the ability of the organized portion of the building and construction industry to settle jurisdictional disputes peaceably and expeditiously in accordance with agreed upon procedures and would be contrary to the agreement * * *." Plaintiff has demonstrated, however (Memorandum of Points and Authorities in Support of Motion for Summary Judgment, par. 14, p. 15), that the only consequence of granting the relief would be to assure that the dispute is handled in accordance with the Plan, by job or locality decision, rather than by national decision, and that, on the arbitrators' own admission, broader treatment is not required. Thus, amici's argument reduces simply to declamatory assertion that judicial correction of abuse of arbitral authority will injure effective arbitration. The short answer, in the words of the Second Circuit, is that judicial assurance that disputes are resolved "within the framework of the agreement" will "stimulate" and "strengthen," not discourage or weaken, voluntary arbitration of jurisdictional disputes. Torrington Co. v. Meat Products Workers Union Local 1645, supra, 362 F.2d, at 682.

REPLY OF PLAINTIFF LATHERS TO MEMORANDUM OF INTERVENOR-DEFENDANT NATIONAL ACOUSTICAL CONTRACTORS ASSOCIATION IN SUPPORT OF MOTION FOR SUMMARY JUDGMENT

Intervenor-defendant contends (p. 2) that the Joint Board and the Hearings Panel are empowered under Article III, Section 5, to decide "the existence and scope of the 1903 agreement and 1920 decision." Unless arbitrators are authorized to review and reverse the Department's rejection of defendant Carpenters' contentions concerning existence and scope, this award cannot stand. (See Reply of Plaintiff Lathers to Statement of Points and Authorities of Defendants Dunlop, et al.)

Intervenor-defendant argues (pp. 1-2, 3), that plaintiff Lathers is bound to submit to national decision by a Hearings Panel because Article X of the Constitution says that "all jurisdictional disputes * * * shall be settled and adjusted" according to the Plan." But the Constitution does not say that all disputes may be settled by national decision; on the contrary, particularly when read in the light of the contemporaneously adopted Preamble to the Constitution (Maso Additional Affidavit), the Plan must be read as limiting national decision to areas not covered by agreements or decisions recognized as "operative" by the Department. Unless plaintiff Lathers is bound to adjudications violative of the Plan, it is not bound by this award.

Intervenor-defendant also argues (pp. 3, 5), that judicial review of the existence and scope determination is barred because the Plan contemplates a finding on the issue by the arbitrators and because, at plaintiff Lathers' request, the arbitrators held a hearing thereon. But the agreement in Humphrey v. Moore, 375 U.S. 335, 338-339, likewise contemplated a finding by the arbitrators on the question of absorption, and there also the finding was made after hearing, 375 U.S. at 350-351. Yet the absorption issue was justiciable. Judicial review is never barred unless the contract explicitly makes the arbitrator's determination of his own authority final and binding.

PLAINTIFF LATHERS' MOTION FOR SUMMARY JUDGMENT

Sheet Metal Workers International Association, AFL-CIO, moves this Honorable Court for an order allowing it to file the annexed affidavit of President Carlough and Memorandum in Support of Plaintiff's Motion for Summary Judgment.

In support whereof, movant states that, as more fully shown in the annexed affidavit, the question at issue in this cause concerning the authority of the Joint Board and the Hearings Panel under Article III, Section 5, of the Plan to find that an agreement and a decision of record published in the Green Book do not govern a jurisdictional dispute to which said agreement and decision clearly apply vitally affects the rights, privileges, property and interests of applicant and its members.

Civil Action No. 1221-'66

AFFIDAVIT

DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA) ss.

I, Edward Carlough, being duly sworn depose and say as follows:

1. I am and have been since June 1959, General President of the Sheet Metal Workers International Association, AFL-CIO, a Union consisting of approximately 130,000 members.

2. Sheet Metal Workers International Association is a labor organization affiliated with The Building and Construction Trades Department, AFL-CIO, and is a party to and bound by the 1965 Plan for Settling Jurisdictional Disputes Nationally and Locally, pursuant to the Constitution of The Building and Construction Trades Department, AFL-CIO. Said Plan (but not the Rules of Procedure adopted by the Joint Negotiating Committee thereunder) was submitted for ratification to the general presidents of all unions affiliated with the Department and was ratified by vote of said general presidents on January 13, 1965 (Supplemental Affidavit of Maso, Exh. 3, p. 2; Exh. 6, p. 2; Exh. 9, p. 1).

3. Sheet Metal Workers International Association is a party to numerous agreements and decisions of record published in the 1965 Green Book. Said decisions and agreements are vital to its existence and survival as a labor organization. Sheet Metal Workers International Association has a vital interest in preserving said agreements and decisions against the asserted or purported authority of arbitrators to disregard said agreements or decisions at will in the interest of "modernization" or for any other reason.

4. As stated in President Maso's Supplemental Affidavit, it has always been common understanding among persons concerned with and knowledgeable about the Plan that agreements and decisions of record published in the Green Book are binding upon all arbitrators and referees thereunder and that such persons have no authority to reopen, set aside, revise or amend such agreements or decisions. To my knowledge, it was never suggested prior to or during consideration of the 1965 amendments to the Plan that the arbitrators should be empowered to refuse to recognize or to re-open or revise or amend any agreement or decision of record published in the Green Book on any grounds or for any reason whatsoever.

5. Upon being advised that the Building and Construction Trades Department had entered an appearance in this cause as amicus curiae jointly with the Associated General Contractors of America and the Participating Specialty Contractors Employers' Associations in support of the defendants, I sent a telegraphic protest to C. J. Haggerty, President of the Department, with copies to each of the General Presidents of the labor organizations affiliated with the Department. A copy of said wire is annexed hereto as Exhibit A.

6. The effect of the contentions of defendants in this case is to empower the Joint Board and the Hearings Panel to override agreements and decisions of record published in the Green Book which are recognized under the Department Constitution and to transfer from the Department Conventions to arbitrators the power to nullify, revise and amend such agreements and decisions. It was never to my knowledge the intention of the draftsmen of the Department Constitution or the Plan to vest such power in arbitrators. Defendants' position is contrary to and in violation of the rights and interests of plaintiff and other labor organizations affiliated with the Department under the Plan and the Department Constitution.

7. As indicated earlier in this affidavit, my Union is either a party to or bound by no less than sixteen (16) national agreements and decisions of record affecting our work jurisdiction. Each of these national agreements and decisions of record is published in full in the April 1, 1965 edition of the Green Book; and, using the exact language of the Green Book, each is an agreement or decision of record because they "are held to be operative by the Building and Construction Trades Department" (see pp. 11 and 108 of the Green Book). I state categorically that there was never any intention by my Union—and to the best of my knowledge by any Union which is a part of The Building and Construction Trades Department, AFL-CIO, and, therefore, a party to and bound by the Green Book—to grant authority to arbitrators to tear up such record agreements and decisions and write them out of existence. My assertion in this regard is bottomed not only on my understanding of the intentions of those persons who participated in the formulation of the Plan, but on the very language of the Green Book itself to which all union parties to this law suit are bound.

8. Beginning at page 11 of the Green Book, there are listed

"JURISDICTIONAL AGREEMENTS ENTERED INTO BETWEEN AFFILIATED INTERNATIONAL UNIONS AND DECISIONS RENDERED AFFECTING THE BUILDING INDUSTRY THAT ARE HELD TO BE OPERATIVE BY THE BUILDING AND CONSTRUCTION TRADES DEPARTMENT.

By the

American Federation of Labor, Building and Construction Trades Department, A. F. of L., National Board for Jurisdictional Awards." (Emphasis added.)

I emphasize the fact that the record agreements and decisions listed under the above caption are those held to be "OPERATIVE" by The Building and Construction Trades Department, AFL-CIO. Insofar as my Union is concerned, there are listed the following "OPERATIVE" jurisdictional agreements and decisions:

(a) A national agreement dated January 12, 1926, between the Wood, Wire and Metal Lathers' International Union and the Sheet Metal Workers' International Association (pp. 12-14 of the April 1, 1965 Green Book).

(b) A national agreement dated October 16, 1930, between the International Brotherhood of Boiler Makers, Iron Ship Builders and Helpers of America and the Sheet Metal Workers' International Association (p. 22 of the April 1, 1965 Green Book).

(c) A national agreement dated January 28, 1928, between the United Association of Journeymen Plumbers and Steam Fitters and the Sheet Metal Workers' International Association (pp. 26-27 of the April 1, 1965 Green Book).

(d) A national agreement dated March 21, 1928, between United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America and the Sheet Metal Workers' International Association (pp. 34-36 of the April 1, 1965 Green Book).

(e) A national agreement dated April 13, 1939, between International Association of Heat and Frost Insulators and Asbestos Workers and the Sheet Metal Workers' International Association (pp. 36-37 of the April 1, 1965 Green Book).

(f) A national decision rendered July 12, 1922, endorsed by Seattle Convention, Building Trades Department, November, 1913, relating to a jurisdictional dispute between United Slate, Tile and Composition Roofers and Sheet Metal Workers' International Association (pp. 53-54 of the April 1, 1965 Green Book).

9. At page 81 of the April 1, 1965 edition of the Green Book, the following caption is set forth:

"DECISIONS RENDERED BY THE NATIONAL BOARD FOR JURISDICTIONAL AWARDS IN THE BUILDING INDUSTRY."

Under the caption, there are the following national decisions involving the jurisdiction of my Union:

(a) A national decision rendered March 11, 1920, confirming an agreement between the United Association of Plumbers and Steamfitters and the Amalgamated Sheet Metal Workers' International Alliance (pp. 81-82 of the April 1, 1965 Green Book).

(b) A national decision rendered April 28, 1920, involving the Brotherhood of Painters, Decorators and Paperhangers and the Sheet Metal Workers' International Association (p. 92 of the April 1, 1965 Green Book).

(c) A national decision rendered May 26, 1923, involving a dispute between the International Association of Bridge and Structural Iron Workers and the Sheet Metal Workers' International Association (p. 100 of the April 1, 1965 Green Book).

(d) A national decision rendered August 2, 1923, involving the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers and the Sheet Metal Workers' International Association (p. 102 of the April 1, 1965 Green Book).

10. The following caption appears at page 108 of the April 1, 1965 edition of the Green Book:

"DECISIONS RENDERED AND HELD TO BE OPERATIVE BY THE BUILDING AND CONSTRUCTION TRADES DEPARTMENT."

Here again, I want to direct attention to the use of the word "OPERATIVE." Under this caption, the following record decision involves the jurisdiction of my Union:

A decision dated January 26, 1928, relating to a certain type of deck roofing (p. 109 of the April 1, 1965 Green Book).

11. At page 122 of the April 1, 1965 edition of the Green Book, the following caption appears:

"DECISIONS RENDERED BY NATIONAL REFEREE WILLIAM L. HUTCHESON."

Under this caption, the following record decisions affect the jurisdictional claims of our Union:

(a) A national decision dated May 19, 1947, involving a dispute between the International Association of Bridge, Structural and Ornamental Iron Workers and the Sheet Metal Workers International Association (pp. 133-134 of the April 1, 1965 Green Book).

(b) A decision dated May 19, 1947, involving a dispute between the International Association of Bridge, Structural and Ornamental Iron Workers and the Sheet Metal Workers International Association (pp. 134-136 of the April 1, 1965 Green Book).

12. The April 1, 1965 edition of the Green Book (page 137) contains the following caption:

"DECISIONS OF NATIONAL JOINT BOARD FOR SETTLEMENT OF JURISDICTIONAL DISPUTES, BUILDING AND CONSTRUCTION INDUSTRY."

Under this caption the following record decisions are listed:

(a) Decision of Joint Board No. 3, relating to a jurisdictional dispute between the United Association of Journeymen and Apprentices of the Plumbing and Pipe Fitting Industry of the United States and Canada and the Sheet Metal Workers' International Association (p. 137 of the April 1, 1965 Green Book).

(b) Decision of Joint Board No. 15, August 21, 1948, relating to a jurisdictional dispute between the International Association of Bridge, Structural and Ornamental Iron Workers and the Sheet Metal Workers International Association (pp. 138-139 of the April 1, 1965 Green Book).

13. Each of the national decisions and agreements of record set forth above are very important to this Union and vital to its continued existence. I regard each of them as record decisions and fully operative. Many of the agreements were negotiated over long periods of time and reflect the negotiated views of the involved unions. In like manner many of the decisions referred to above were rendered only after the parties had presented their respective positions to the deciding tribunal. As I have stated above, there never was an intention on the part of this Union or, to the best of my knowledge, on the part of anyone else to grant authority to any arbitration panel to modify and override these agreements and decisions of record. Under the Department Constitution, that power is vested exclusively in Department Conventions.

REPORT

from the General Secretary-Treasurer

J. EARL FERGUSON

It isn't very often that a truly creative idea turns up. Most of us spend our lives untangling the details of routine, hardly ever finding a chance to look beyond the immediate need into the visionary future. Furthermore, even when one has a good, new idea, it's usually a long uphill fight for the first serious review by someone with enough authority to make something happen.

In the field of social work, creative ideas are even harder to come by, yet one that appears to be of real importance has recently been made by a man with authority. The Secretary of Labor, W. Willard Wirtz, proposes the establishment of community youth "opportunity boards," which would help a young man (or woman) meet approaching manhood and the need to earn a living wage from the standpoint of all the alternatives available to him—and from the standpoint of the needs of the country as well.

The "Opportunity Board" would be a draft board in one sense—putting an eligible teenager into the military service if that were deemed the appropriate thing to do. Yet the Boards would be serving as much more. They could help a youngster see the reasons for remaining in school, or for considering the benefits of a skilled trade at the completion of high school, or whatever courses was most appropriate to the individual. At the same time, Wirtz' proposal would give the nation a much-needed information file of human resources, which is where the real wealth—or lack of it—of any modern nation resides.

"There is as much reason, and more," Wirtz said, "to require every American youth to register for living as for fighting."

The nation's method for selecting young men for military service, he noted, is just a small part of the total job to be done. The proposed "Opportunity Board" wouldn't dictate to the individual but would be a source of expert guidance—a kind of public agent for each young man or woman.

Registration would be mandatory, just as it now is for the draft, upon reaching age 18, or quitting school. Each youth would then receive a physical examination, and aptitude and interest tests, if they weren't available through the local school. Following the cataloguing of talents and health would be a conference with the registrant. Later, registrants would periodically check-in, check-up, and check-out, to let the Boards see how well their suggestions were working out for the individual in question.

Today, with the pressures of the Viet Nam war attracting an unusual amount of attention to the mechanics of the draft, and with the need for more and better qualified personnel following great tradition into the skilled trades, the idea appears to be worthy of very serious consideration.

Such a program could well make the impact of the draft more equitable, and at the same time help bring a greater number of better qualified young people into the skilled trades. Too many young people of promise are never found today, and too many force themselves into additional academic school for "status" alone, making little use of their education when they leave, and contributing little substance to the national economy. Most of them cannot be expected to find the right path, without guidance, in the complexities of today's society.

We're not saying that the existence of some "opportunity" program such as this is guaranteed of success. Surely, however, it would be an important step in the right direction. Labor as well as country and youth would benefit.

Sincerely and fraternally,

J. EARL FERGUSON,
General Secretary-Treasurer.

Let's Spread the Economic Load

In a time of rising profits and heavy investment in capital goods, when the cost of living and borrowing money outreaches the wage earner, it's time for government action, the AFL-CIO believes.

Everyone complains about not having enough money to live on. The truth of the matter is that for many people, the cost of living has risen faster than wages. At the same time, many of the big corporations have been making record profits.

Anybody who takes a hard look at the state of our economy is understandably puzzled. At a time when the rate of unemployment is relatively low (although there's still a long way to go); when a war, whatever its morality, is pumping production stimulus into the economy; when there are signs all around of plenty and comfort, there is still a lot of talk about recession, and the possibilities of an income tax increase.

Part of the problem is tied up with our international trade. While fighting a war in Viet Nam it is difficult to limit the outflow of currency to friendly Asia, and this hurts the economy. France has taken a breather in its grab for U.S. gold, but during the last year, she drained away close to $600 million in the precious metal.

These are among the knotty problems which have our top experts scratching their heads. On the home front, however, a great deal more control over the economy is possible, and the AFL-CIO recently made some concrete suggestions as to what these should be. In a group of resolutions approved by the AFL-CIO Executive Council are a number calculated to improve the position of the worker.

The cost of living, the AFL-CIO points out, rose 6.6 percent between 1960 and 1965, for a yearly rate of 1.3 percent. In the year from June 1965 to June 1966, the cost of living went up 2½ percent.

During this same period, worker wage gains looked reasonably good on paper, but after trimming them back to account for the increased price of the goods that the wages brought home, actual increases in wages were one-third to one-half of the gains in terms of cents an hour. Even after counting the gains in fringe benefits, such as pension and health plans, the total gains in the past 5½ years were considerably less than 3 percent a year.

Construction workers fared slightly better than factory employees. For the year from June 1965 to June 1966, construction employees' gains, after correction for increases in cost of living were about 2.4 percent, compared with the factory worker's 1.4 percent. Even so, the increase in take-home pay falls far short of meeting recent upswings in the worker's contribution to his employer's wealth through greater productivity. In the period from 1960 to 1965—when all workers' buying power was going up by close to 2½ percent a year—the amount of goods produced by the worker was rising by close to 4 percent a year.

Where is the difference going? Into the pockets of stockholders, and the coffers of the firms. Even the top-level management executives of many firms have not been getting annual increases to match the increase in productivity.

With a large and growing spread between costs and prices, and with real wages lagging behind the nation's rapidly increasing productivity, it is no surprise that profits have been increasing at a much faster pace than wages and salaries. Between 1960 and 1965, profits soared 52 percent after taxes and dividend payments to stockholders increased 43 percent.

In sharp contrast, the weekly after-tax take-home pay of factory workers increased 21 percent (merely 13 percent after accounting for the rise of living costs).

This unbalanced condition continues in 1966. Between the first half of 1965 and the same period of 1966, profits rose an additional 11 percent, both before and after taxes, and dividend payments to stockholders increased another 13½ percent, according to preliminary estimates of the U.S. Department of Commerce.

Inequities in income-distribution have been developing and widening. And these social inequities are creating a growing lack of balance between the economy's increasing ability to produce and the lagging buying power of workers and consumers generally.

Skyrocketing profits—aided by the 7 percent taxcredit subsidy for business investment in new equipment and stepped-up depreciation write-offs—are providing the fuel for a one-sector capital goods superboom.

The government expected business investment in new plants and machines to rise 17 percent in 1966—about twice as fast as the gross national product for the third successive year. On the basis of government estimates, business investment in the newest automated plant and equipment in 1966 will be 55 percent greater than in 1963, when the super-boom began.

The large-scale installations of these plants and machines are expanding industry's capacity to produce at a much faster pace than the economy's demand. If permitted to run its course, this super-boom will collapse and generate an economy decline.

In addition, sharply increasing investment is creating trouble. It is siphoning money out of the homebuilding, home-buying, consumer and small business markets. And, in combination with rising military expenditures, it is generating a price-boosting psychology through most parts of the economy.

In a dangerous attempt to slow the capital goods boom, the U.S. Federal Reserve Board and the commercial banks have pushed up interest rates to the highest levels since the 1920s.

The interest rate blast-off started last December, when the Federal Reserve Board increased the rate which banks pay to borrow funds from the Federal Reserve system and lifted the permissible interest rate, boosting interest rates and shifting large savings into the commercial banks while halting the expansion of deposits in savings banks and savings and loan associations, which make most home-mortgage and improvement loans.

There is no evidence that these high and rising interest rates have curbed the capital goods boom. But they are pushing residential construction into a depression. They are boosting the cost of living. And they are making it both more expensive and more difficult for states and local governments to borrow money to expand needed public facilities.

The prime interest rate for the choicest and richest borrowers is now 6 percent.

With a prime rate of 6 percent, effective interest rates on loans to consumers, small businessmen and farmers are frequently 10 percent more. The effective rate on FHA-insured mortgages of 6½ percent is rising and available mortgage funds are drying up. Building permits for new residential construction have dropped to the lowest level in seven years at a time when rebuilding of America's cities is urgently needed.

A one-point rise from 5½ percent to 6½ percent on a 25-year, $20,000 mortgage—the average conventional mortgage—adds more than $3,600 in interest costs over those 25 years. For the vast majority of wage and salary earners, $3,600 represents well over one-half year's earnings. Moreover, at a 6½ percent rate on a $20,000 mortgage, the borrower pays out $40,500 over 25 years; the interest payments of $20,500 are greater than the loan itself.

The beneficiaries of these rates are the commercial banks and those who are rich enough to buy large blocks of corporate and government securities and bank certificates of deposit.

This policy reinforces and aggravates the wrong-way trend of income distribution, with an increasing share of the economy's forward advance going to business, the banks and the rich.

America needs a restored balance between wages, prices, profits and business investment, as well as considerably lower interest rates.

Increases in real wages are needed to provide workers with an equitable and adequate share of the benefits of the economy's progress. Justice and equity require such increases in the buying power of wages and salaries. Moreover, such rises in real earnings are essential for the sustained growth of mass consumer markets which are the base of the nation's economy.

The major machinery for achieving such increases in real earnings in a free society is collective bargaining between unions and employers. In a period of rising prices, collective bargaining is a stabilizing force.

● Extended coverage of the Fair Labor Standards Act to millions of low-wage workers and a rise in the federal minimum wage are needed to lift the real wages of the working poor.

High and rising business profits, as well as the economy's rapidly ad-

Such sustained pace of economic growth must be based on a sound foundation of increasing real wages and salaries and expanding consumer markets. It must be based too, on meeting the needs of a rapidly growing and increasingly urban population for public facilities and services—with sufficient federal funds for the planned expansion of efforts to meet these needs.

● A rollback of interest rates to more reasonable levels is required.

Congress should establish an interest rate ceiling of 4½ percent on time deposits of all types, including certificates of deposit. Congress should also demand the Federal Reserve exercise its authority—through the purchase of government securities and regulation of reserve requirements—vancing productivity, makes it possible for business to grant such improvements in the buying power of wages and salaries without raising the price level. Many companies can afford to grant substantial wage increases and simultaneously reduce prices.

● An effective curb on the capital goods super-boom is required through repeal of the 7 percent tax-credit subsidy for business investment in new equipment and/or an increase in corporate taxes. Curtailment of this one-sector boom is essential to help restore balance to the economy and to make more funds available for housing, the rebuilding of America's cities and expanded public facilities.

● Continued expansion of the economy is essential to create enough new job opportunities to achieve and maintain full employment of a rapidly growing labor force in a period of spreading automation.

to stabilize the money market and maintain reasonable interest rates.

In addition, Congress should adopt a measure to provide a gradual and orderly end to the issuance of certificates of deposit by the banks and review the effect on the money market of the federal government's issuance of participation certificates. The government should also develop effective coordination and cooperation among the various federal agencies, including the Federal Reserve System, that are in the money and credit area.

If the President determines that there is a national emergency to require extraordinary stabilization measures—with even-handed restraints on all costs, prices, profits, dividends, corporate executive compensation (including bonuses and stock options) as well as employees' wages and salaries—he will have the support of the AFL-CIO. Such measures should apply equitably to all groups in the economy and to all components of the cost of living, as well as the cost of production.

STRICTLY

Fancy takes flight in the skills of lathers from Local 42, Los Angeles, who shaped an unusual children's store in Century City.

Century City, site of one of the country's biggest lath and plaster construction projects (see THE LATHER for August, 1965), is the location of a children's shop that would look like home to Winnie the Pooh. Under one roof is a number of diminutive cottages, to make the children for whom the shop was exclusively designed feel comfortable.

Designed by Jerry Janeck, west coast builder-designer, "The Village", as the store is called, was lathed by members of Local No. 42, Los Angeles, working for the Los Angeles Lathing Co. and the A.D. Hoppe Co.

The little houses are actually small shops within the store, fitting rooms and sales counters, and sport thatched roofs and chimneys. Other chimneys and the trees were constructed to hide columns and to fireproof them. The rating is two-hour. Some of the trees will provide dressing rooms as well.

All of the decorative elements were constructed with furring channels, covered with 3.4 metal lath. The finish was 2½ inches of vermiculite plaster, which conforms with the California Lathing and Plastering Contractors Associations recommended technique for plastering solid partitions from one side.

Foreman on the job was O. B. Williams, Local 42, who describes the work as unique. Each piece of the ¾ inch furring had to be bent by hand, and no piece was just like any

At left above, Lathing foreman O. B. Williams, Local 42, holds sketch of thatched roof cottage with builder-designer Jerry Janeck. On this particular structure the chimney was used to disguise a column and give it a two-hour fire rating at the same time. other. It was a case of improvisation on the job. A total of ten different thatched roofs were involved, all constructed of furring channels and lath. To heighten the visual impression of thatch, excelsior was added to the plaster.

One of the most detailed structures on the job was the children's barber shop, which has arched entries as well as the thatched roof. To obtain the proper radius for the arches, track was rolled to the desired shape, and attached to 3¼ inch pressed metal studs and the furring channels. The interior partitions in the Barber shop were constructed with ¾ inch gypsum lath clipped to metal studs.

The perimeter walls of "The Village" were originally specified for substitute materials, but the owners switched to the Rapid Plaster system when they found about the many quality installations being accomplished with this technique. Application of the Rapid Plaster base coat material and the finish coat took less than two days. Builder-Designer Janek was favorably impressed by the speed with which Rapid Plaster was finished, it's cleanliness and the strength of the installation. He thinks that this technique represents the "jackpot" for the lath and plaster tradesmen and contractors, as long as top quality workmanship prevails. This, he says, will be a "critical factor", for the full potential of the system to be realized.

At the top right, a realistic tree with doorway is just about finished. Note the use of real branches. This tree will be a dressing room. At the near right, Foreman Williams and designer Janek, in furred doorway to one of the trees. LATH PANEL MACHINE CAPTURES JOBS FOR TRADE Lathing and plastering contractor Fernald & Wallace, Inc., St. Petersburg, Florida, has been successful recently in converting substitute materials jobs to lath and plaster, through the economic advantages of a Milcor Metal Lath Panel Machine.

One recent job, on which lath and plaster was used extensively instead of originally specified substitutes, the architects were reported to be very pleased with the relatively new technique for partitions and ceilings.

Among the recent projects handled by Fernald & Wallace are the Swanholm Nursing Home and Children's Hospital, First Presbyterian Church, all in the St. Petersburg area, and the Venice Hospital which is under construction using prefab metal lath panels.

Wilkes-Barre Local Honors Old Timers

At a recent testimonial dinner, Local 168 honored their twenty-five year members. The picture shows B. A. Francis Muligan congratulating John Conway on completing forty years of service as a Lather.

Brother Conway has held every elected office in Local 168 at one time or another and is now retired. Others also honored for twenty-five or more years of service were, Brothers Oscar Culp, Clarence Maier and Frank Shatrowsky.

LOCAL 244 LATHER PATENTS CORNER BEAD CLIP

Charles Brodsky, member of Local 244, Brooklyn, New York, (2944 West 5th St. 11224) has recently patented a corner bead clip for lathing work, and has put it on the market. The clip makes corner bead installation easier and more accurate. With the clip, a plumb bob can be attached for truing the bead installation, and it also serves as a means of mounting a line along a length of corner bead to align the entire bead. Brother Brodsky is now selling a set, consisting of both top and bottom clip (figures 3 and 4 in the drawing) for $3.50.

Election Day Stay-at-Homes Contribute to Liberal Losses

If a relative handful of liberal voters who sat out election day last November 8 had bestirred themselves and made it to the polls, there'd have been a lot less liberal blood spilled.

Seventeen House liberals lost cliffhangers in races where the winner got 52 percent or less of the total vote. Thirteen of these were class of 1964 freshmen. In each case, the outcome would have switched with only a few thousand more liberal votes turning out.

In Michigan, three liberal freshmen—Wes Vivian, Paul Todd and Ray Clevenger—lost by a combined total of about 10,000 votes.

In Iowa, two liberal freshmen—John Schmidhauser and Bert Bandstra—each lost by only 4,000 votes.

In Wisconsin, Lynn Stalbaum and John Race lost by a combined vote of about 6,000.

Jed Johnson in Oklahoma lost by 2,000, James Mackay in Georgia by 1,000, Clair Callan in Nebraska by 2,000, Neiman Craley in Pennsylvania by 4,000 out of 134,500 votes cast.

Other freshmen, and several multi-term liberals, lost close ones as much to the failure of liberal voters to turn out as to their opponents.

As usual in a national election, there were abundant examples upholding the "One-Vote Counts" school of thought.

In all, 35 House races, two senatorial and four gubernatorial contests were decided by 52 percent or less of the total vote.

In quite a few cases, liberals hung on by the skin of their teeth to stick in office. In House races, Colorado's Frank Evans captured 51.9 percent of the vote to win re-election, and Don Irwin of Connecticut squeezed by with 51.3 percent.

J. Edward Roush of Indiana made it back with 50.7 percent and Montana's Arnold Olsen with 51.3. Three of New York's liberal freshmen from the class of 1964 held office in nip-and-tuck contests. Lester Wolff won his rematch against ultra-conservative former Rep. Steven Derounian with 50.4 percent; Herbert Tenzer held office with 50.7 percent and Joseph Resnick with 52 percent.

In two close Senate races, Oregon's Mark Hatfield (R) nosed out Rep. Bob Duncan with 51.8 percent of the total vote, and South Carolina's Ernest Hollings staved off a strong Republican bid with 51.4 percent of the vote.

One liberal governor, John Burns of Hawaii, retained office with just 51.2 percent of the vote. Another liberal, William Egan of Alaska, lost his bid for a third term when his opponent got 51.1 percent of the vote. New Mexico elected a moderate Republican, David Cargo, with only 51.8 percent.

Like most elections, the one last November 8 proved one vote counts. It showed what happens to many of our liberal friends when too many eligible voters stay home rather than vote.

Though 48.3 percent of all eligible voters went to the polls—a record for off-year elections—a large number of those who didn't were union members.

So a major task of the labor movement continues to be shooting for 100 percent registration and voting performance among unionists.

CLC Staff Changes

A number of staff changes in the Canadian Labour Congress were announced today by Claude Jodoin, CLC president. They include:

Henry Rhodes, assistant national director of organization, to become director of the department of federations and councils, replacing Clifford Scotton who resigned from the CLC staff to become federal secretary of the New Democratic Party.

A. L. Hepworth, assistant director of the department of legislation and the department of government employees, to become director of the department of international affairs, replacing Kalmen Kaplansky who is joining the staff of the International Labour Organization.

Frank Chafe, regional director of education for the prairies, now located at Regina, to become assistant in the departments of legislation and government employees.

Roy LaBerge, Ottawa, becomes editor of "Canadian Labour," the CLC's official publication, on January 1st, succeeding Clifford Scotton. He will also be associated with the CLC's public relations department.

Denis Coupland, Ottawa, to become assistant director in the departments of legislation and government employees.

Larry Wagg, representative in the CLC's Ontario educational office, to become regional director of education for the prairies with headquarters in Regina.

Mr. Rhodes, 54, was born in Kingsville, Ontario. One of his early jobs was in a meat packing plant. He was dismissed for union activity. He assisted in organizing the Windsor, Ont., Labour Council in 1939 and was president of the truck drivers' local of the Canadian Brotherhood of Railway and Transport Workers in Windsor from 1940 to 1942. He joined the staff of the Canadian Congress of Labour as a representative in 1942. In 1947 he was appointed regional director of organization with headquarters in Toronto. With the merger of the Canadian Congress of Labour and the Trades and Labor Congress he was transferred to the prairie provinces as regional director of organization with his office in Regina. In 1958 he was transferred back to Toronto as director of organization for Ontario and in 1959 was appointed assistant national director.

Mr. Hepworth, 56, was born in Montreal and first worked as an employee of Canadian National Railways in that city. He joined the Canadian Brotherhood of Railway, Transport and General Workers in 1935 and ten years later moved to Ottawa to join the union's national staff as an executive assistant. In 1953 he was appointed education director of the union and remained in that position until 1962 when he left to become program director of the newly-formed Overseas Institute of Canada. He joined the staff of the CLC in 1963 as assistant director of the departments of legislation and government employees.

Mr. Chafe, 44, is a native of St. John's, Nfld. He has been a member of the Brotherhood of Railway Clerks since 1940 and has held various offices in that organization dating back to 1941. He was also an officer of the St. John's Labour Council from 1947 to 1958 and president of the Newfoundland Federation of Labour in the period 1949 to 1958. He was a member of the Newfoundland Labour Relations Board from 1950 to 1958. He became a representative of the Trades and Labour Congress in Newfoundland in 1950 and, following the founding of the CLC, moved to Toronto in 1960 as an educational representative. The following year he was transferred to Regina as regional director of education for the prairies.

Mr. LaBerge, 45, was born at Fort Coulonge, Quebec. He has worked with various news media in Ottawa including the Canadian Press, Ottawa Citizen, Ottawa Journal and radio station CFRA. He holds degrees in social sciences and social work from Saint Patrick's College of the University of Ottawa. He has been active in co-operative work and latterly has been public relations director of the Canadian Union of Public Employees and a member of the CLC's national public relations advisory committee. He was an unsuccessful NDP candidate in Gatineau in the 1963 federal election. He is a member of the American Newspaper Guild.

Mr. Coupland, 25, was born in Victoria, B. C. and educated in Montreal, obtaining his B.A. in philosophy and political science at McGill University in 1962. He then attended the University of British Columbia Law School. After taking commercial employment in Montreal he became research director for the British Columbia Federation of Labour in 1964. Since June 1966 he has been on the staff of the Federal Treasury Board in Ottawa.

RIE-TICKLERS

TO MY HUSBAND

Now that the golf season is over,
Time needn't be heavy on your hands,
Start on the chore list I gave you
It's easier than finding balls in the rough.
Before the New Year begins, Dear
Your list should then be to the end.
You can start polishing, swinging and dreaming
Of the balls you intend to send.
Then the new season is open
Time to go out and play
Arguing with the balls and clubs
Every inch of the way.
But there is one thing I can give you
Before your season ends.
The same old list you get every year
But never make it to the end.

... The Boss

Planning a vacation stay in Florida, the traveler didn't know what to do with his dog. He decided to write the hotel and ask if dogs were allowed.

Promptly, the hotel manager wrote back: "I've been in this business for 30 years. Never have I called on the police to eject a disorderly dog. Never has a dog set fire to a bed with a cigarette. I have never found a hotel towel or blanket in a dog's suitcase. Nor a whiskey ring on a dresser. Sure, the dog is welcome."

And the manager added a post-script: "If the dog will vouch for you, come along, too."

You'll Do BETTER Work EASIER with Goldblatt LATHER'S TOOLS

NEW! STAINLESS STEEL MAGNETIC NAIL DRIVER

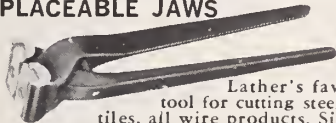

Because it's longer—a full 7"—and slimmer—only 1/16" diameter—you'll find it a lot easier to reach into those hard-to-nail channels and corners with this new nail driver. Has a strong, everlasting Alnico V magnet set in the nose to grip nails tightly. And thanks to 3/8" hexagonal shank it's easier to get a good hold on this time and effort saving tool.
04 156 M7. Only $5.20

CHROME STEEL MAGNETIC NAIL HOLDER

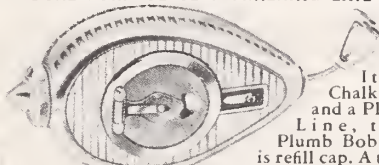

Here's a rugged, well-balanced, shaped-to-fit-your-hand nail holder that's long been a favorite of journeymen who refuse to settle for less than the best. Has a heat treated steel insert with Alnico V permanent magnet that makes nails stick to it like glue so you can spot 'em right where you want 'em! 5 1/2" long. 3/8" diameter nose.
04 152 H7. Only $5.00

TODD'S WIRE NIPPERS WITH REPLACEABLE JAWS

Lather's favorite tool for cutting steel lath, tiles, all wire products. Simple, rugged construction with hardened, high carbon steel jaws that are replaced quickly, easily to make the tool good as new time after time. Easy on the hand thru the longest day, too. A tool you'll swear by after the first time you use it! 8" long with 1 3/4" jaws.
04 680 H7. Only $6.40
Extra Jaws—04 580 H7. $2.00

DUAL PURPOSE SELF-CHALKING LINE BOX

It's a Chalk Line and a Plumb Line, too! Plumb Bob Tip is refill cap. A twist of the fingers opens it for easy refill, another twist locks it. Complete with extra strong 100' line.
09 301 H7. Only $2.00
CHALK for box above. Won't cake. 8-oz. cons.

THE DANBURY HATTERS' CASE, 1902-1916

LANDMARKS
OF LABOR
No. 35

In 1902 a national boycott was declared by the United Hatters against the Danbury, Connecticut, firm of D. E. Loewe and Company to support a recognition strike. The company retaliated by suing under the Sherman Act, claiming triple damages from the local union members who had struck.

The case was in the courts until 1916 when the company was upheld and damages and costs were assessed at $252,000. Private bank accounts were attached and home foreclosures took place. Fortunately, for the Danbury Hatters, other unions chipped in and, shocked by the court action, helped pay the unconscionably large fine and costs.

This case and others in this era led labor to believe that the old conspiracy laws were being revived. These cases led to a real awakening by labor into the economic and political facts of life. While the resentment of the time was not immediately translated into practical action, the famous Danbury Hatters' Case stands as a symbol of hostility to labor as a time during which labor had thought it had emerged from the dark age of the conspiracy laws.

John T. Dunlop, Individually and as Impartial Chairman of the Appeals Board, etc., et al.,

Civil Action No. 1221-66

SUPPLEMENTAL MEMORANDUM FOR PLAINTIFF LATHERS

Plaintiff respectfully prays reference to Transportation-Communication Employees Union v. Union Pacific Railroad Co., No. 28, Oct. Term, 1966, 35 L. W. 4030, decided December 5, 1966, after our reply memorandum was filed. In its distinction of issues going to the duty of the Adjustment Board from issues of procedure, and in its description of the type of technological change which arguably renders inapplicable a contract governing work assignments, the decision has manifest relevancy here.

Union Pacific holds that whether the Adjustment Board may decide merely whether one contract governs particular work or must rather decide which of two competing unions is entitled to that work, is a question of law for the Court, not a question of procedure for the arbitrators. So, in the instant case, whether the Hearings Panel is authorized to issue a national decision on work at least arguably governed by the 1903 agreement and 1920 decision of record is a question of law, not merely procedure. The Joint Board and Hearings Panel cannot defeat their obligation under the Plan to respect agreements and decisions of record as a bar to national decision by declaring that recognition of such obligation would "constitute a severe frustration of the jurisdictional machinery not contemplated by the Plan" (Comp. Exh. 19, pp. 12-13), or that an agreement or decision which covers the work does not "govern the dispute" (ibid., p. 12).

II.

The facts of Union Pacific also illustrate, by contrast, the irrelevancy on the issue of coverage of the 1903 agreement and 1920 decision of the kind of "technological, market and economic change" (Supp. Comp., Exh. 22, pp. 15-16), invoked here by the Hearings Panel. In Union Pacific the jobs which had been the subject of the rival contracts disappeared; they had merged into a new and different job, dissimilar to either of the preexisting ones. As the Court observed of the situation in that case, technological change left "only one job, a job which is different from either of the former two jobs and which was not expressly contracted to either of the unions." In our case, on the contrary, as defendants nowhere deny, the one job which is the perennial subject of the jurisdictional dispute—installation of light iron work on ceiling systems—has remained unchanged since before the turn of the century. See our Memo. of P. & A. in Support of Plaintiff's Motion for Summary Judgment, p. 11.

In lieu of job change, defendant Hearings Panel invoked introduction and ascendancy of acoustical tile finish over plaster finish, denominated "technological, market and economic change" (Supp. Comp., Exh. 22, pp. 15-16). But "technological, market and economic change" without job change is legally an irrelevancy. Such change no doubt explains the assignment of light iron installation work in many areas to Carpenters instead of Lathers, but it could not possible terminate coverage of the 1903 agreement and the 1920 decision.

Such assignments to Carpenters, where made, created a conflict between area practice and the 1903 agreement and 1920 decision. By the 1965 amendments to the Plan, such conflicts could be resolved in favor of area practice in job and area decisions; resolution by national decision remained barred.

The promotion work discussed in this issue of the Lather (page 10) emphasizes once more the need for continued attention to the creation of new business for the trade. The work of the National Bureau over the last year has been significant, but without the active interest of every lather and local Union officer, the task simply cannot be carried forward to the realization of its full promise.

I urge that this vital work be strengthened. Almost any audience, whether it is a conversational group in your own home or a group of businessmen at a fraternal club luncheon, will be willing to listen to the good story of the benefits of genuine lath and plaster construction. The substitute materials have been around long enough now that almost everyone has been introduced involuntarily to their shortcomings, and this means the general public is more and more willing to learn about what we have to sell. There are some markets in which higher cost is no great obstacle, because of the benefits. We have already seen this in the case of modern apartments and offices designed to combat the growing noise of our society. We see signs of a revival in the home building industry, if appropriate attention is paid to promotion. We cannot expect the buyer of construction to come to us to ask why lath and plaster is better. We must go to him with the story.

I would like to commend those International Vice Presidents and Local Union officers and members who have been actively supporting this industry promotion. Many have given a great deal of time and effort to back up the National Bureau Program, and in light of the limited operating funds and overburdened time of Bureau Director Gene Sheid, this is the only way it can succeed for the time being.

International Vice President Marshall Ferguson, for one, has tirelessly worked on this. So has Vice President Henry Sheerin, and all of the officers and members of Local 46, Boston, where there have been some encouraging developments. Brother Sheerin recently informed me that a letter with an employers' contribution of $5,000 for the Northeastern Bureau had been sent to Mr. Jeremiah Burns by Frank Baldwin, President of the Master Lathers Association, following a promotional meeting. It was my pleasure to have had an opportunity to talk to the contractors at that meeting, and I was greatly encouraged by their reaction. Incidentally, Mr. Burns has himself devoted a great deal of time and energy to the cause.

Another significant contribution of $2,000 was made to the Northeast Bureau by the Western Massachusetts Bureau, following a November industry promotion meeting. I had the pleasure of attending this meeting as well. Robert A. Auclair, Secretary-Treasurer of the Western Massachusetts Bureau, in a letter of thanks, noted that members of his Bureau had been "very impressed" by the presentations. The contribution speaks for itself.

Another individual to whom members of the LIU owe a debt of gratitude for efforts supporting the promotion program is National Bureau President Tom McGlone.

There is another matter of concern to all members which has been brought to our attention. The Labor Conference of the National Safety Council has developed a home study course designed specifically for the union member, called, "Working for Safety." It is a down-to-earth course, and I urge all local union officers to write to the National Safety Council for a sample of the descriptive brochure, or copies for each Local Union member. They are free from R. M. Wilkins, Manager, Labor Department, National Safety Council, 425 N. Michigan Avenue, Chicago, Ill. 60611.

Sincerely and fraternally,

SAL MASO, General President

Right-Wing Drive To Ban Union Shop in States

A new right-wing drive to outlaw the union shop in additional states is under way, spurred by conservative gains in a number of legislatures which the National Right to Work Committee says has put "new steam" behind its campaign.

At a closed door meeting in Oklahoma City, top officials of the national "work" organization met with the leadership of Oklahomans for Right to Work, an organization which maintained its full-time headquarters even after the state rejected a constitutional amendment to ban the union shop in a 1964 referendum.

The "right-to-work" coalition, ranging from conservative small businessmen to radical right extremists, was making noises also in such perennial battlegrounds as Idaho, New Mexico, Montana and Delaware. And the national committee publicly identified as targets a group of big industrial states including California, New York, Pennsylvania, Illinois, Massachusetts and Missouri.

Indiana is the only northern industrial state which ever succumbed to a "right-to-work" law, and that was a short-lived experiment which was repealed early in 1965. Nor does the "work" committee claim a majority in any of the big state legislatures.

"New right-to-work laws will not be passed overnight in these states," the committee readily concedes. But it claims that the election returns and the failure of the 89th Congress to repeal Taft-Hartley's Section 14(b) have boosted "the long-range prospects" for outlawing what its propaganda calls "the compulsory union shop." That's the phrase it uses to describe the right of workers and employers to negotiate a union shop agreement.

Moving away from the defensive at the congressional as well as the legislature level, the "work" committee claims that the election also "paved the way for serious consideration of federal laws to restrict compulsory unionism."

The election returns were hardly dry before the full-time director of the Oklahoma "work" committee was in Washington for strategy sessions with the national organization. And the visit was returned Nov. 22 at the Oklahoma City board meeting, years back, resulting in a massive battle between a coalition of right-wing groups, the Chamber of Commerce and the Farm Bureau on one hand, and a coalition of labor, liberals, Negroes and small farmers in opposition.

Despite the fact that union membership in the state is relatively small, voters rejected the union shop ban by a margin of about 25,000 out of 720,000 votes cast.

The Republican sweep in Idaho revived the threat of "right-to-work" in the legislature and the State AFL-CIO predicts "a big push" for a union shop ban. A group of supposedly "moderate" Republicans in the state Senate holds the balance of

'Here I Come!'

The state "work" organization said it will concentrate on trying to get a constitutional amendment proposal through the legislature, but will resort to a petition campaign to place the issue on a referendum ballot if the legislature refuses to act. That's what happened several power. The state's Republican governor-elect has said he would sign a "work" bill if it should pass the legislature, but indicated he would not seek its passage.

In 1958, "right-to-work" was defeated in Idaho, California, Colorado, Ohio and Washington.

REPORT

from the General Secretary-Treasurer

J. EARL FERGUSON

There's simply no question about the challenge the working man faces on the political scene this year. The national Right-To-Work Committee sees new opportunities for the repeal of state "right-to-work" laws in the outcome of the recent elections. We've examined this challenge in the article on the opposite page. Just a few weeks ago, the National Right-To-Work Committee made known an interim legislative program it would like Congress to adopt, while it works toward the long-range goal of a Federal law abolishing the union shop.

The Right-To-Work Committee wants to: end tax exemption on unions that have union shop agreements; prohibit a union shop unless a state passes a law specifically permitting it; repeal the union shop clause written into the Railway Labor Act of 1951, and amend the National Labor Relations Act to abolish the requirement that unions chosen by a majority of workers bargain for all workers.

Unfortunately, the new Congress will be more receptive to this viewpoint than the last. We discussed this problem in my December report. The President's state of the union message, delivered in the meantime, indicates no great additional help from the White House.

Preoccupied as he is with the Viet Nam War, Johnson hardly nodded in the direction of new labor legislation. The somewhat surprising proposal to put the Department of Labor and the Department of Commerce under one roof is about as far as he went. Any evaluation on the merit of this proposal will have to wait, as George Meany has said, until "the specific proposals are made public," but he commented that the formation of the Labor Department in 1913 was designed to "eliminate a form of second-class citizenship for workers whose interests were relegated to a bureau in the Department of Commerce. We are fully confident that the President has no intention of returning to that concept."

Johnson also made specific proposals to help the sagging residential construction market by increased loan money and a one fourth of one percent reduction in the interest rate. Beyond these points, he concentrated on explaining the possible need for a six percent income surtax, the Viet Nam war, and expansion of social security programs.

Even if the 90th Congress had turned out to be strongly liberal and labor-oriented, the nation's foreign policy problems still might have curtailed legislative improvement for the workingman.

All of this argues strongly for a renewed pledge on the part of the workingman to support the AFL-CIO's political action program. COPE can do the job which has become so obviously necessary, of helping into elected office those bright candidates who recognize labor's needs.

Within a short time, we will once again be sending COPE contribution books and buttons to all local secretaries. These should be distributed among all members, shop stewards, and foremen.

If you gave a buck last year, make it two this time.

Sincerely and fraternally,

J. EARL FERGUSON,
General Secretary-Treasurer.

The Great Emancipator, Abraham Lincoln, was born February 12, 1809, in a Hardin County, Kentucky, log cabin. By the time he had become president (with only 40% of the popular votes, because four candidates were running) the nation was deeply troubled. Within a little over one month after his inauguration, the Southern states had begun the chain reaction of seceding from the union. The war that dominated his presidency was over 5 days when he was shot to death in Ford's Theatre in Washington. For the story on the theatre, see page 6.

Philosophy of Labor

by Reverend Joseph L. Donahue, C.S.V.

A Man of Simple Honesty

February is the month when our Nation observes the anniversary of the birthday of an idealistic man, one of its greatest Presidents, Abraham Lincoln.

No man can be truly great unless he is devoted to some high, noble and true ideal. It does not matter what splendid talents of mind he may possess, how rich or how powerful the man be. A man will never be truly great unless he possesses besides fidelity to some exalted ideal, courage enough to adhere to it no matter what the opposition may be.

Lincoln is not great because he successfully led the nation through the Civil War. He is great because he recognized certain important and fundamental truths, such as that this nation could not "exist, half slave and half free." Also, because he rightly resolved that the injustice of slavery should be forever banished from the United States of America.

Lincoln, without wealth, without the social and cultural advantages of formal education, without the influence of powerful friends, attained the Presidency of the United States. He did so through the force of clear understanding of vital economic and political issues, and moral fervor for the practical application of principles of justice.

There have been few greater contrasts than Lincoln and Stephen Douglas. The contrast was not merely physical, Lincoln being tall and Douglas being very small, it was also moral and intellectual. Douglas was interested in the economic development of the Middle West and the extension of the railroads to the coast.

In order to put through his far-flung schemes in Congress, Douglas sought the support of the Southern States. He probably felt and understood the essential injustice of slavery as keenly as Lincoln. However, when Lincoln opposed the Dred Scott Decision and all the country declared that he was a trouble maker, Douglas sprang into the fight against him. In reply to the storm of criticism Lincoln, with his simple honesty, inquired, "You say slavery is wrong, but don't you constantly argue that this is not the right place to oppose it? You say it must not be opposed in the free states because slavery is not there; it must not be opposed in the slave states because it is there; it must not be opposed in politics because that will make a fuss; it must not be opposed in the pulpit because it is not religion. Then where is the place to oppose it?" With such clear forthrightness Lincoln reduced the arguments of his opponents to the thinness of "soup made by boiling the shadow of a pigeon that had starved to death."

All Lincoln needed to know was that slavery was unjust and a blot upon a Nation that boasted above all others of its freedom. Thus Douglas, the Little Giant, the orator, the trained politician, the educated and learned lawyer, was defeated by the simple man of the frontier who only knew what was right and what was wrong and was determined that right should prevail.

I often think that the greatest moment in Lincoln's life was when he declared to his cabinet, in spite of its practically unanimous opposition, that he was going to sign the Declaration of Emancipation simply because he had pledged his word that he would do so. The press of the country was opposed to him. The cabinet thought such action unwise and imprudent, Congress was hostile, but Lincoln stood, calm and unmoved, before the storm of opposition, and did the thing his conscience told him he ought to do. Therein lies the real greatness of Lincoln.

FORD'S THEATRE RESTORATION

For Many Years public interest has been growing for a complete restoration of Ford's Theatre in the heart of the nation's capital—site of the tragedy marking the assassination of Abraham Lincoln 102 years ago.

Now, almost two years after restoration work was begun, Ford's Theater has assumed the basic external and internal shape that it had at the time of the assassination, and has become the busy workshop for a number of Washington Lathers, members of Local No. 9.

The lathing work in the national landmark must be of the highest caliber, not only because the structure must endure, but because the lathing and plastering restoration harks back to an era when construction without embellishment was unthinkable.

Ford's Theater, in its original configuration, was truly one of the Capital city's showplaces. The underpinnings of the walls may not have been the most solid, but the splendor of the interior was just about without equal. Although many of Washington's streets were muddy and cobblestoned on April 14, 1865, when Lincoln was shot, Ford's theatre possessed a splendor that is rarely found in today's construction specifications.

Shortly after the assassination the theatre was seized by order of the Secretary of War, Edwin M. Stanton. There had been continued tension at the site before and after the July 7, 1865 hanging of the conspirators. Subsequently the building was leased by the federal government, and a year later was purchased by an Act of Congress. Through the years, it had served the Government as an office building and museum.

It was only 12 years ago, however—after years of prodding by Lincoln enthusiasts—that Congress finally took the initiative and provided funds for a preliminary engineering and construction report on the condition of the old brick building, located just a few blocks east of the White House.

For several years now, Dr. George Olszewski of the National Capital Region's historical and architectural staff, a highly regarded architect, researcher, and historian, has been steeping himself full-time in the history and lore of Ford's Theatre. When it became apparent in the early 1960's that Congressional funds would sooner or later be made available for the restoration, Dr. Olszewski became one of the key figures in the over-all project.

He spent countless hours over old Mathew Brady photographs of the theatre, tracking down old drawings and plans of the building, reading contemporary newspaper accounts; going through the transcript of the conspirators' trial, and studying building techniques of 100 years ago. Now that the restoration has started, he observes scars on the walls as further clues to the appearance and structure of the original theater.

Olszewski has interviewed children and grandchildren of those known to have frequented Ford's Theatre in Lincoln's time, including the nephews, now old men themselves, of the theatre's builder and owner John T. Ford.

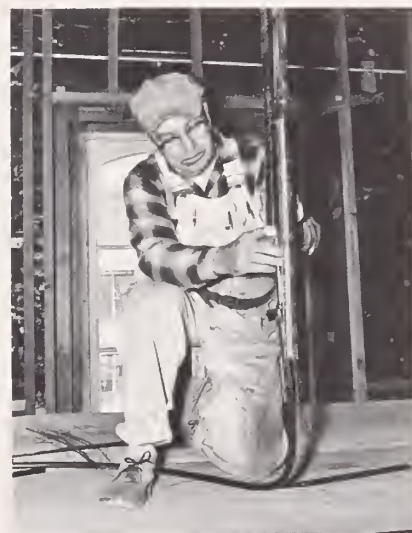

A first estimate of what it would cost for a complete restoration to be made of the theatre building, including the actors' "Green Room" on the northeast corner and public "Star Saloon" just south of the building entrance on 10th Street, was $2,000,000. The final figure—now that what has to be done can be seen more clearly—will probably be closer to $3,000,000.

After going through many plans and revised plans, Coe Construction, Inc., of Washington, D. C., the principal contractor, started work at the site on January 5, 1965.

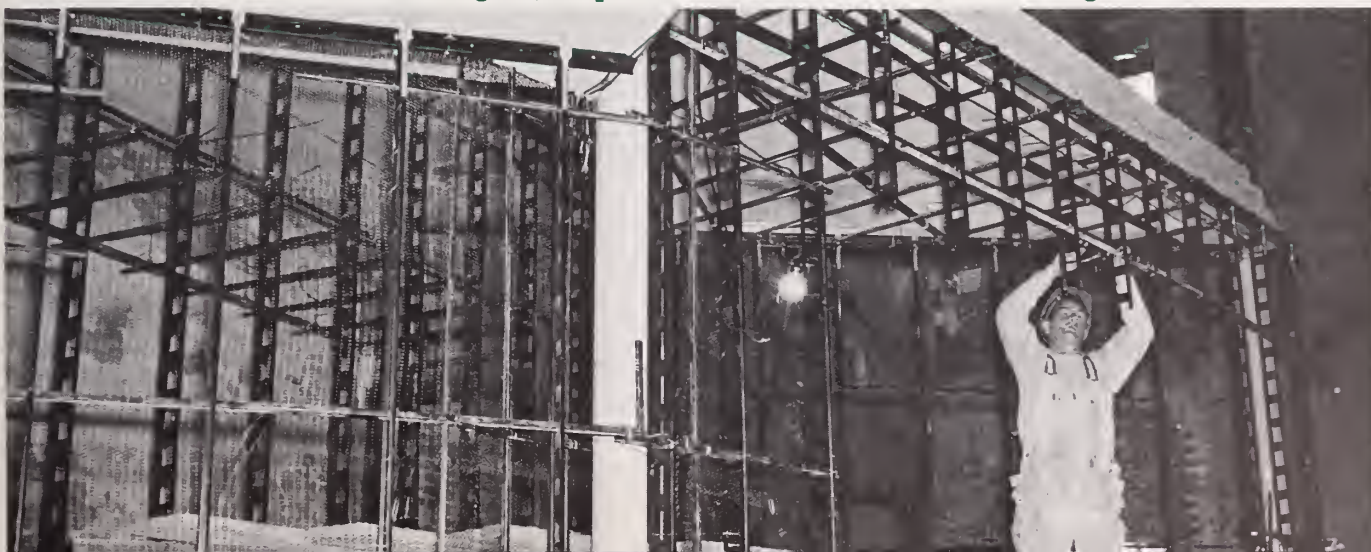

At one time, it had been anticipated that the restoration would be completed—if Congress provided the necessary funds—by the 100th anniversary of Lincoln's assassination (April 14, 1965), as one of the goals of "Mission 66" of the National Park Service. The $2,076,300 needed for the restoration were not voted, however, until June 1964.

Now, difficulties encountered during the past year on the job, and change orders necessitated by unforeseeable problems of various kinds, have projected the anticipated completion well into 1967. At the same time, great progress has been made.

All artifacts of the Lincoln Museum, which formerly occupied the main floor of the structure, were placed in storage in December of 1964. The building was then turned over to the general contractor.

The lathing

Willie Stebbing, member of Local No. 9, and lathing foreman for the Novinger Co. which is doing the lathing and plastering, says that the work involved in restoring Ford's theatre is not extremely complex, compared with some other work performed in the last few years in the Washington area.

The entire theater, when restored will be lath and plaster throughout, as was most of the original. There are some reports that the original decorative ceiling was made of papier-maché, but just about all of the remainder of the wall surface, including the usual decorative trim of a theatre, was plastered.

In a few places in the theatre, particularly the old ceiling between the decorative ceiling over the auditorium and the attic, remnants of the original wooden lathing can be seen. Typical of lathing of the period, it could never meet the D.C. fire code of today, and the new work, therefore, is mostly metal lath, and rock-lath.

In many areas, such as the reconstruction of the box where President Lincoln was actually shot, walls are being constructed out of metal studs and expanded metal lath. On the peripheral walls, where the surface is reasonably true, rocklath is being used, as it is extensively in the completely rebuilt Star Saloon beside the theatre, where the walls are true. The original Star Saloon of 1865 was demolished in 1930.

A three-hour fire protection rating has been given the ceiling which separates the attic from the rest of the structure, and the stage side of the boxes. In these areas, $3\frac{1}{4}$ inch steel studs, resilient clips, pencil rods and 1 inch of plaster are being used for the fire protection.

In mid-November, lathers John Derham, shop steward; George Stebbing, Willie's Brother; Earl Sander-son, and Eddie Jones, as well as Apprentice William Beall, were working on the channel and furring of the decorative ceiling. There will be a few pre-cast plaster panels used, but the bulk of the work will be plastered in place.

The framework for the ceiling, a flat concave surface, is being built up from 2 inch angle iron, $\frac{3}{8}$ inch x $11\frac{1}{2}$ inch flat steel welded to structural steel and bolted to the angle iron. For durability (Historian Olszewski says that the Theatre is being "restored to endure"), all of the ceiling furring is being tied with stainless steel wire.

When restored, the new Ford's Theatre will, of course, be changed in some respects from the original on the day Lincoln was shot. For one thing, the entire building will be air conditioned. For another, a newly-excavated basement area will house an ampitheater-like museum of Lincoln memorabilia, but it will be a living museum, instead of the lack-luster, static exhibits that used to characterize the Lincoln Museum part of the theatre, and many other museums. In keeping with the new trend in the presentation of history, the museum will feature live recordings of the most famous Lincoln speeches.

Although there have been delays in getting on with the job of refinishing the theatre, it could be ready in the Spring. According to a story by Cecil Smith, in a recent issue of the Los Angeles Times, "Walter Pozen, assistant to Secretary of Interior Udall said it is planned that the restored theatre will be ready for dedication next April 14 on the 102nd Anniversary of the assassination of President Lincoln there."

What's going to be done with the resplendent new theatre? There's a lot of interest in following through with the concept of a living shrine. Among many who have stepped forward with the proposal, an official of the National Repertory Theatre would like to establish a special repertory company affiliated with the national organization, to perform plays in Ford's Theater 52 weeks a year. The plays would be authentic drama of the period, such as "The American Cousin" which was being performed on the night of the assassination, and period plays about the life of Lincoln.

In George Olszewski's view, nothing could be a more fitting tribute to one of our greatest presidents. "At first," Olszewski recalled when we talked to him recently, not far from the spot where the fatal shot was fired, "I thought it would be almost sacrilegious to put on live performances in a place as hallowed as this.

However, as my work progressed on the history of the theatre and the life of the man who it symbolizes in tragedy, my views changed. The record of Lincoln, the man, is one of a being dedicated to life and accomplishment. His contributions to the continued existence of a whole union; his act in enriching the lives of those who had previously been deprived of the full range of human enjoyment, appear now to leave little choice. We must bring life into this hallowed shrine, to make it a living symbol of the ideals for which Lincoln gave his life."

NATIONAL BUREAU PROGRESS

A year of preliminary success proves lath and plaster can be sold at the top level in Government, but indicates the need for greater financial support to keep the program going. This year's goal: Tell the architects about lath and plaster.

In November, 1966, the National Bureau for the Promotion of Lath and Plaster, under the directorship of Gene Sheid, put on a "road show" for top-ranking construction executives from the General Services Administration, the Office of the Secretary of Defense and 12 other agencies. In Mr. Sheid's words, "This was our best presentation since our original presentation to Navy (Bureau of Yards and Docks) a year ago. Our success with the Navy has proven that this promotional concept and approach truly stimulates the imagination of architects."

In addition to the agencies named above, the following also sent representatives to the presentation, indicating the depth of the sales job which was accomplished: FHA, VA, Post Office, Air Force, Interior, Internal Revenue, Public Housing, Health, Education and Welfare; Navy, Army, Bureau of Standards and National Institutes of Health.

LIU International Representative Robert Georgine talked to the Government representatives about the union's role in improving the quality of government buildings constructed with lath and plaster. Also speaking on this subject was James Boyle, International Representative of the Operative Plasterers' and Cement Masons' International Association. Both assured the Government of the complete support of the skilled tradesmen in bringing better construction to Government projects.

Richard Parker, Managing Director of the Metal Lath Association, discussed recent developments in metal lath and plaster construction, including its application to interior, exterior and curtainwall techniques. Discussing mechanized lathing systems and techniques was Roy Selland, of Inland Steel; on the subject of the Rapid Plaster system, representatives heard Gene Erwin, Technical Secretary of the Contracting Plasterers' and Lathers' International Association.

Charles Clay, Editor-Publisher of the Plastering Industries magazine, teamed with Floyd Jennings, Sr., of the Jennings Plastering Company of Washington, D. C., and Ian McCloud, United States manager for Mineralite, Ltd., to discuss exposed aggregate construction.

An examination of the scope of the lathing and plastering industry today, including a showing of the Portland Cement Association's new film on stucco and plastering, was presented by Gene Sheid. He also summarized the entire program at its conclusion.

The role of the lathing and plastering contractor in the success of a lath and plaster industry of depth and versatility was discussed by Joe M. Baker, Jr., Managing Director of the Contracting Plasterers' and Lathers' International Association.

Despite the success of the past year's oral presentations to key Government construction personnel, Bureau Director Sheid believes that the time has come for a significant increase in funds available to the Bureau. What has been accomplished in the past has been done on the proverbial shoestring, and the entire industry owes a debt of gratitude to Mr. Sheid for his ingenuity and tireless work in putting these presentations together, primarily with the volunteer assistance of people from industry. This approach, however, has some limitations, and Mr. Sheid urges a new program for the coming months fully under the control of the Bureau. "It must be our presentation," he emphasizes.

Mr. Sheid suggests that the way

has been shown—that the success to date has been rewarding, but that it is just a beginning, which deserves even greater efforts in the future. "It will be impossible," Sheid says, "to do the required follow-up work with government agencies and to further develop this promotional approach without adequate operating and promotional funds and staff."

Among the agencies which have begun to realize the value of lath and plaster are the Navy, Army, General Services Administration, Public Housing Administration and FHA, but there is still much of the story yet untold to them. Other agencies need even more information before they can make a reliable judgment about the advances made in the field of lath and plaster, which makes it competitive in many cases with supposedly "cheaper" substitutes.

The major theme of the Bureau's 1967 program, Sheid says, will be that better buildings are designed with lath and plaster in mind. Although this hasn't been formalized into a slogan yet, it expresses the fundamental story which will be carried to specifying architects. If they think lath and plaster from the time they start their preliminary sketches, the chance for substitute materials sneaking into the structure is reduced.

Architecture with a rare classical flavor.

Choate Junior College

Lathers of Local 215, New Haven, Conn., install metal studs, metal furring, and double laminated walls and ceilings, for an outstanding job.

The new Administration Building of Choate Junior College, at Wallingford, Connecticut, is one of the finest jobs the area has seen for a long while. The men not only got the job done in less than estimated time, but received high praise from the Architect of the structure as well. Mr. Perry, of Perry, Dean, Hepburn & Stewart, Boston, agreed that the job was the finest job of substitute material he has seen. All four floors were lathed.

There were as many as 12 lathers on the job at one time, working for New England Lathers & Plasterers. General Contractor on the job was George Macomber, New Haven and Boston.

The efficiency on the lathers on the job made possible an unusual profit margin for the sub, and allowed lathers to compete with imported help from another trade.

An interesting sidelight of the job is the fact that the site was where John F. Kennedy received his pre-college education.

Batten Down The Hatches... Storm Brews

Collective bargaining and the right of free trade unions to operate in our society are expected to face serious tests in the incoming 90th Congress.

Traditional anti-labor groups already are hard at work laying the groundwork for legislation, viewing 1967 as the most promising year in two decades for restricting the trade union movement.

The Chamber of Commerce is not only making proposals but it has assigned a staffer, Walter Wingo, to observe the trade union movement and to report on its activities.

Wingo has prepared a three-part series for the Chamber's official magazine, Nation's Business, entitled "What To Do When the Union Knocks." This is designed to help the employer fight unions.

A prime target of Wingo's articles is the National Labor Relations Board.

Working on the same theme is Sen. Robert Griffin (R.-Mich.), who has now won a six-year term in the Senate.

He has announced that one of the first things he will do when Congress opens is to reintroduce legislation calling for the abolishment of NLRB. He wants the function of the board shifted to a 15-man labor court.

Both Griffin and the Chamber claim that NLRB rulings have, too often, been against business. They had no such complaints when Eisenhower appointees dominated the Board.

Far more sensational and headline-catching were proposals in the area of national emergency strikes.

This is an outgrowth of inconveniences suffered during the airline and New York subway and newspaper strikes last year.

The American Farm Bureau Federation, which met recently in Las Vegas, Nev., would ban industry-wide bargaining and grant authority to the courts to enjoin any industry-wide strikes.

Even liberals such as Senators Wayne Morse (D.-Ore.) and Jacob Javits (R.-N.Y.) are urging legislation in this general area.

One plan could follow the Morse suggestion of last year which provides that the Secretary of Labor should draw up the legislation. However, Javits would have the Federal government throw itself directly into the whole collective bargaining process. What many liberal and labor legislators fear is that once the issue is open anti-labor members of Congress could have a field day.

Following are some of the other recommendations that are being advanced and which labor may well have to grapple with during the 90th Congress.

● Anti-Trust Laws — This would place unions under the anti-trust laws of the nation in which the age-old and discredited conspiracy theory would be revived. One proposal along this line by the Farm Bureau would make it a conspiracy for unions to secure wage increases "in excess of the gain in productivity."

● Political Education — This plan would extend the Taft-Hartley Act and Federal Corrupt Practices Act so that it would be illegal for unions to spend union treasury funds in Federal, state or local political activities even for such citizenship programs as nonpartisan registration drives and getting out the vote.

● Free Speech—Their concern is not free speech for workers, but employers. The Taft-Hartley Act gives an employer great latitude to express his opinions on unions and union leaders in strong, even intemperate language as long as his words do not in themselves contain threats of "reprisal or force or promise of benefit." Anti-union groups say this restricts the freedom of employers.

● Work Week—The Farm Bureau would make it illegal to establish a shorter work-week "by either legislative action or labor-management negotiations."

● Farm Workers—The Farm Bureau would also make it a crime for farm workers to strike during "critical" production or harvesting periods and also would set up roadblocks to collective bargaining by farm workers.

● Recognition — Several anti-labor groups are urging legislation which would make it illegal for an employer to recognize a union on the basis of a "card count" but would require that the issue be decided by a secret ballot.

● Union Discipline—This would remove from the union the right to strengthen its effectiveness by preventing unions from taking any action against members who violate established union rules and procedures.

The Department of Labor estimates that approximately 3.1 million workers will be involved in contract renewals in 1967. If any of these negotiations results in a dispute, anti-labor forces are expected to exploit it for the ultimate impact on public opinion. —PAI

Medical Care Bill Passed

The House of Commons has given final approval to a government bill setting up a system of medical care for all Canadians.

The measure was enacted by a 177-2 vote after the Liberal administration had defeated a series of efforts to broaden its coverage beyond the final government draft and also moves by both the New Democrats and the Conservatives to restore the original effective date of July 1, 1967.

The target date at first was set to coincide with observance next year of the centennial of Canadian confederation, then put off until 1968 as an anti-inflation move.

Last-minute efforts were successful in amending the bill to permit the federal government to include funds for the services of dental surgeons, optometrists, podiatrists, psychologists, physiotherapists, chiropractors, osteopaths and naturopaths.

The bill requires the government to pay half the cost of approved programs set up by the provinces. At an estimated $34 for each of Canada's 20 million citizens, the cost is expected to be around $680 million a year.

Four criteria are set which the provinces must meet if they are to share in the plan. They are:

- Coverage of at least 90 percent of the province's population, with the figure rising to 95 percent over the years.
- Coverage of all services by physicians.
- Guarantees of protection for persons moving from one province to another.
- Direction of the program by administrators responsible to each provincial legislature.

The Canadian Labour Congress favoured the bill despite a feeling that it had been "watered down" from the original draft.

A spokesman said the CLC felt that federal standards should have been stricter; that restrictions "narrowed" the range of services by physicians, and that the original effective date should have been retained.

The only province with an operating plan that presently meets the federal standards is Saskatchewan. Minister of Health & Welfare Allen MacEachen predicted that other provinces will quickly propose acceptable plans. The Medical Service Insurance Plan in effect in Ontario, the nation's most populous province, could qualify with minor changes, it was pointed out.

The Saskatchewan program was inaugurated by the former Canadian Commonwealth Federation (CCF) provincial government with a combined hospital and medical insurance premium of $72 a year for families and $36 for single persons.

Alberta has a voluntary medicare plan which does not meet federal standards because it covers less than 90 percent of the population. Premier Ernest C. Manning, a vociferous "free enterprise" advocate, says the province wants no part of federal aid in financing the program.

Expo's On Schedule

In January, the Government reported that 12 months of intensive work are paying off: Expo 67 (see Lather for November, page 8) has risen out of frozen mudflats, and white lines on blueprints in Tokyo, Washington, Havana and Stockholm to a thriving construction community where over 90 percent of the buildings are complete, and the final polish is being added in anticipation of the opening date of April 28.

Construction reached a turning point in September when the exteriors of three national pavilions, those of the Netherlands, Scandinavia and Tunisia, were completed during the same week. Throughout the autumn, "topping off" ceremonies became more than a weekly occurrence and the flags of many nations began to appear on towers of steel, concrete, plastic and aluminum.

Expo's own construction and that of the private exhibitors has kept pace with the progress of all participating nations.

The complete exhibition is on schedule. Of 134 projects which are the responsibility of the Expo Corporation, close to 120 will be finished by the end of February, leaving only 18 for completion after February. These, however, are, in the main, such items as street furniture and fountains which cannot be finished until the last minute.

Work on most of the national and private pavilions is over 80 percent complete. The few pavilions that have less work to be done before completion are of a smaller and uncomplicated nature and none is in danger of being late.

Expo Express is gliding round the site on trial runs and the elevated "mini-rail" snakes in and out of pavilions, under bridges and over ponds and lagoons. The La Ronde amusement area has taken on an air of gaiety with construction completed on such features as the French-Canadian Village, Pioneerland-Fort Edmonton, the English Pub, the Garden of Stars and the Children's World.

During 1966, many people—and even animals—in many countries were also preparing for Expo '67. Dolphins were trained in Florida, kangaroos in Australia and 200 other creatures for the Children's Zoo.

Local 176 Peanuts Angel Helps Community Fund Drive

Showing the way in community relations projects, members of Local 176, Pittsfield, Massachusetts, recently helped to construct this giant replica of the angel from the popular Peanuts comic strip. The replica was a departure from past campaigns in Pittsfield, when the traditional red feather barometer was used.

When it was finished, the replica weighed two tons. It took 40 yards of metal lath and 535 feet of three-quarter channel iron. There were 1,500 pounds of plaster trowelled on.

Designed by architect Prentice Bradley, the replica was lathed by Stanley Rhodes, Robert J. White, and Richard Barnes.

Metal lath and plaster was provided by Contractors' Supply Co.

WANTED LATHER 'Alive' Not Dead

Competent metal lathing superintendent. Must be competent in layout, blueprint reading, expediting, scheduling and all around supervision. Opportunities unlimited to right party. Send references and replies to Box 1837, Sun.

DEAR SIR:

In answer to your ad that I read last night at 12:30 a.m. while jetting to Toronto. The way this was drawn to my attention, was the stewardess knew me and my trade, cut the ad out and dropped it on the blueprints I was studying enroute

My qualifications:

I run several jobs at a time, commuting between Vancouver and Toronto and points enroute

On my jobs of any size, I insist on a motor scooter, and have all my men equipped with extended stilts, and roller skates attached thereto I also insist that each man move at a minimum of eight and one half (8½ miles per hour He is checked out three times a day and if found lagging below this rate, his pay is docked accordingly I keep a bucket of ice water on each floor, to cool the tools I insist that each man wear two sets of tools and be versatile and able to work with nippers in each hand. If he cannot, is immediately fired.

When working on steel studs, we use a catapult to shoot the stud from the pile to be the allotted position. This saves a minimum of three men on a six man job.

All my jobs are equipped with a Breda Mark X Machine gun on a track, run by an apprentice reading blue prints shooting in the necessary shots. Of course we have accidents, mostly in the nature of contractors. These apprentices get very high-strung and sometimes turn the gun on them. Therefore, I do not let my employer on the job at any time, as it provides too much distraction and the casualty rate in contractors is very high.

I study prints til 2 a.m. every night and take my figures and details down on a tape recorder to be played back continuously on the job next day, so there will be no change in movement to break momentum and read the prints.

I only weigh 98 pounds, soaking wet, I have trimmed myself down to that weight as I am 6 ft. 2 in. and find this promotes efficiency in my movements and cuts down wind resistance.

Of course there are complications in hiring me, I do not work for cheap, chiselling contractors, who expect a Lather to pull them out of a hole they got into by trying to be a big shot and under bid the other fellow, and they find themselves without funds and close to bankruptcy. My price is high and I must be paid wages commensurate with the work I turn out.

In regards to my Union qualifications, I am a paid up member in all Locals between here and Toronto. This also saves time reporting in.

If I meet your qualifications, you can contact me, by leaving a permanent paging call at the airport as I no longer have a permanent address.

NATIONAL CHILD LABOR COMMITTEE ORGANIZED — 1904

Labor legislation in the United States for all working people has always begun with legislation regulating child labor. An inspector of child labor laws was named in Massachusetts in 1867 and one was named two years later in Connecticut. In 1904 the establishment of the National Child Labor Committee brought into focus many efforts being made in behalf of children.

Earning not learning was the order of the day for children. Children were working in textile mills, factories, glass plants, mines, stores, shops and other workplaces. Educators, clergymen and other public spirited citizens tried to bring a measure of cooperation and coordination in an effort to remedy the blight of child labor.

The National Committee through searching investigations, continuous educational work, agitation and legislative promotion helped build a climate favorable for legislation in the field of minimum wages, improved conditions, night work and education.

The Committee sponsored a Federal amendment which is an enabling act giving Congress power to pass Federal child-labor legislation. This amendment to the United States Constitution has been ratified by 28 states, eight short of the necessary number to make the amendment operative. No state has approved the amendment since 1935.

The Department of Labor's Bureau of Labor Standards enforces the child labor provisions of the Fair Labor Standards Act (wage-hour), but much remains to be done in the area of child labor. The National Committee is continuing its work and feels that a big job must be done in educating the nation on the need for further progress. The founding of the Committee in 1904 was a landmark which has had continuing impact on the nation.

REPORT

from the General President

SAL MASO

In accordance with my policy of keeping you fully informed on all matters of importance concerning the LIU, and specifically the litigation proceedings concerning the Dunlop Hearings Panel decision, please be advised that a hearing was held on January 16, 1967, in the United States District Court for the District of Columbia, the Honorable Judge Holtzoff presiding. The purpose of the hearing was to rule on cross motions for summary judgment made by the attorneys for the Hearings Panel and our attorney, Mozart Ratner.

Judge Holtzoff upheld the motion for summary judgment submitted by the attorneys for the Hearings Panel, and denied the Lathers' motion for summary judgment. However, he granted a ten-day stay in the existing preliminary injunction staying the effectiveness of the Hearings Panel decision in order that the Lathers could appeal his decision of January 16, 1967.

On January 26, 1967, a hearing was held in the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia, the Honorable Judges Carl McGowan, Edward A. Tamm and Spottswood W. Robinson III presiding, for the purpose of hearing arguments on a motion for a continued preliminary injunction staying the effectiveness of Judge Holtzoff's decision pending appeal.

The Appellate Court sustained the Lathers' position and granted a preliminary injunction pending appeal. This is an extremely important decision, for it is a basic principle of law that the Appeals Court will not stay the effectiveness of a decision rendered by the lower Court unless they feel that the appeal has merit and has a chance of being upheld in a final determination.

In accordance with my policy of keeping the membership fully informed of all developments of importance, we have reproduced all significant documents in full as a part of this report, beginning on page 2.

In addition, I would like to call your attention to the meeting of the LIU Executive Council, held in Miami Beach, Florida, this February 6-10. The minutes of this meeting are reproduced in full starting on page 11.

Sincerely and fraternally,

SAL MASO, General President

MOTION FOR INJUNCTION PENDING APPEAL
ORAL ARGUMENT ON THIS MOTION IS REQUESTED

Now comes appellant Lathers, plaintiff below, and respectfully moves this Honorable Court for an injunction pending appeal¹ from the final order of the District Court entered January 18, 1967, granting defendants' motion for summary judgment dismissing the complaint. The District Court stayed execution of its judgment until January 28, 1967, to enable plaintiffs to apply to this Court for an order maintaining, pending appeal, the status quo which the District Court had preserved by preliminary injunction issued September 29, 1966. Said preliminary injunction orders defendants "to postpone the effective date of the Decision of the Hearings Panel issued August 24, 1966, from October 1, 1966, until final decision of this Court or until further order of this Court and to notify all persons of said postponement to whom the decision of August 24, 1966, was previously sent by the Hearings Panel."

1. STAY IS NECESSARY TO EFFECTUATE THE RIGHT OF APPEAL

The August 24, 1966, decision of the Hearings Panel, originally scheduled to become effective October 1, 1966, requires employers uniformly, in every locality in the United States, to assign to appellee Carpenters Union, membership 760,000,² "the bulk" of the work of installing light iron furring in ceiling systems (Op. Tr. Jan. 16, 1967, p. 71; Supp. Comp., Exh. 22, pp. 20-21). In major industrial centers, including New York and Chicago, this work, historically and currently, is assigned to appellant Lathers Union, membership 16,200³ (Finding of fact 5, Sept. 27, 1966; Affidavit of Eby, dated Oct. 31, 1966, pp. 2, 8, and Affidavit of Downey, dated Sept. 28, 1966, pp. 2, 5).⁴

The District Court found that the decision "requires employers * * * to employ Carpenters rather than Lathers to perform work * * * on contracts let on and after October 1, 1966" (Finding of fact 4, Sept. 27, 1966). It is undisputed that if the decision becomes effective it "must immediately be observed by contracting employers throughout the country," and Lathers' members "will be deprived immediately of work opportunities and employment on construction jobs" (Maso Aff., p. 1). The District Court found that the decision "will result in denial of employment opportunities to lathers and disruption of the business of contractors who employ lathers and created serious economic consequences for lathers and for contractors who employ them" (Finding of fact 5, Sept. 27, 1966).

A measure of the injury to appellant Lathers is reflected in the evidence adduced by intervenor employers⁵ in the courts below. In the aggregate, the Chicago and New York contractors employ approximately 2,000 lathers—about 12% of Lathers' entire membership (Eby Affidavit of Oct. 31, 1966, p. 1; Downey Affidavit of Sept. 28, 1966, p. 1). In these two areas alone, 700 lathers will lose their jobs if the decision becomes effective; their total average annual earnings are approximately $6,000,000 (Eby Affidavit of Oct. 31, 1966, pp. 2, 8; Downey Affidavit of Sept. 28, 1966, pp. 1, 5; Downey Affidavit of November 2, 1966, p. 3).

Injury to employers and the construction industry in these areas will be equally severe. In Chicago, for example, Carpenters "are not trained and skilled enough to perform lath work that has always been performed by Lathers"; to "assign this work to Carpenters would result in a disruption in the Chicago building trade

² Membership totals are set out in the Directory of National and International Labor Unions in the United States, 1965 (Bull. No. 1493, U. S. Dept. of Labor).

industry which would take years to cure" (Eby Affidavit, Oct. 31, 1966, p. 8; Downey Affidavit, Nov. 2, 1966, p. 3).

From the inception of this litigation it has been recognized that effectuation pendente lite of a Hearings Panel decision on the merits would effectively defeat judicial review. Initially, appellant Lathers moved for a preliminary injunction to restrain the Hearings Panel from proceeding to decision on the merits. In response, the Panel assured the District Court that their decision would provide that it "shall not become final until thirty days after it is rendered," to afford time for appellant Lathers to apply for a protective order (Tr. May 11, 1966, p. 51; Supp. Comp., Exh. 22, pp. 1-2). Upon that assurance, the Hearings Panel was permitted to proceed.⁶

On September 22, 1966, appellant Lathers moved for a preliminary injunction. Appellees Dunlop, et al., opposed on the ground that the decision "awarded jurisdiction to the Lathers as well as the Carpenters * * * and [t]here is no quantitative showing of the adverse effect of the decision on the interests of the Lathers" (Memorandum of Points and Authorities in Opposition to Plaintiff's Motion for Temporary Restraining Order, dated September 28, 1966, p. 4). They also asserted that "[t]here is an important public interest and industry in bringing the controversy between the Lathers and the Carpenters to an end. Continuation of the present uncertain and inefficient system of assigning the work will be productive of labor disputes and work stoppages throughout the United States and Canada" (ibid., p. 5).

Defendants did not then, nor have they since, adduced even a scintilla of evidence that any such work stoppage was in progress or that any is in prospect. What they describe as the "present uncertain and inefficient system of assigning the work" has been in effect for over a half a century (Affidavits of Eby and Downey).

In its August 24, 1966, decision the Hearings Panel stated (Supp. Comp., Exh. 22, p. 16):

"This case illustrates the need for uniformity in assignments, at least in a locality, if all contractors are to be placed on the same competitive basis under collective bargaining." (Emphasis added.)

This positively refutes defendants' theory that there is any necessity, much less an immediate necessity, for reallocation of jurisdiction as between Carpenters and Lathers on a national basis. Certainly as well as uniformity can be achieved, not merely pendente lite but permanently, by locality decisions, which appellee Joint Board was authorized by Article III, Section 1, of the current Plan to make on the basis of "prevailing practice in the locality" (Comp., Exh. 1, "Green Book," p. 6; see pp. 18-21, infra).

In view of the Hearings Panel's finding (Supp. Comp., Exh. 22, p. 18), that "taking the country as a whole the Carpenters have been performing the overwhelming proportion of work operations on ceiling systems in dispute," stay of the Hearings Panel's national decision of August 24, 1966, cannot injure any legitimate interest of appellee Carpenters and contractors who customarily employ them. The only consequence of immediately effectuating that decision will be instantly to enrich Carpenters and carpenter contractors at the expense of Lathers and lather contractors. The resultant injury would be completely irreparable in the event of reversal of the judgment below.

In issuing its preliminary injunction the District Court concluded (Conclusions of Law, 2 and 3, Sept. 27, 1966):

"A preliminary injunction is necessary and appropriate to preserve the status quo pending adjudication by this Court of plaintiffs' claim. Denial of injunctive relief will result in irreparable injury to plaintiffs, while any inconvenience and loss to the defendants will not be substantial."

The same considerations clearly warrant preservation of the status quo pending review of the decision below by this Court. In succeeding sections of this Motion we demonstrate that the district court did not even consider the real question presented, and that, on that question, properly focused, appellant is entitled to prevail.

II. THE ISSUE ON THE MERITS DEFINED

This is a suit, predicated upon Section 301 of the Labor Manage-

⁶ The District Court denied injunctive relief and this Court, on May 31, 1966, denied appellant Lathers' motion for injunction pending appeal. Wood, Wire and Metal Lathers International Union, AFL-CIO v. Dunlop, et al., No. 20,180. The appeal was dismissed upon joint motion of the parties on July 19, 1966.

One consideration favoring review of the threshold issue of arbitrability generally after rather than before decision on the merits is stated in Torrington Co. v. Metal Products Workers Union Local 1645, 362 F. 2d 677, 680-681, n. 6 (2 Cir.): "We think more exhaustive judicial review of [the] question [of 'the arbitrator's authority [which] is really one of his contractual jurisdiction'] is appropriate after the award has been made than before the award in a suit to compel arbitration; in this way, the court receives the benefit of the arbitrator's interpretive skills as to the matter of his contractual authority. See Livingston v. John Wiley & Sons, Inc., 313 F. 2d 52, 59, n. 5 (2 Cir. 1963), aff'd, 376 U.S. 543."

ment Relations Act, 1947, 61 Stat. 156, 29 U.S.C.A. § 185, to enforce a collective bargaining contract known as the "Plan for Settling Jurisdictional Disputes Nationally and Locally," hereinafter referred to as the Plan (Comp., Exh. 1, "Green Book"). The contracting parties are the Building and Construction Trades Department, AFL-CIO (hereinafter referred to as the Department), a federation of labor organizations including appellant Lathers Union and appellee Carpenters Union, and various employer associations in the building and construction industry. The Plan establishes various rights and duties, procedures and tribunals for resolution of jurisdictional disputes. The Joint Board and the Hearings Panel are arbitration tribunals established by the Plan.

The Plan incorporates certain historic jurisdictional agreements and decisions which are "recognized under the provisions of the Constitution of the * * * Department" (Green Book, Art. III, Sec. 1 (c); Comp., Exh. 3, preamble, pp. 2-3). These agreements and decisions are "set forth in the Green Book" (Green Book, Art. III, Sec. 1 (a); Comp., Exh. 4, "Blue Book," p. 3, par 3 (a) and are known as decisions and agreements "of record" (Green Book, Art. III, Section 1 (a), (c), p. 6). The Plan declares that agreements and decisions published in the Green Book "Are Held To Be Operative By the Building and Construction Trades Department" (Green Book, p. 11).

Section 5, Article III, of the Plan authorizes the Joint Board to refer a repetitive dispute to a Hearings Panel for decision on a national basis if it "finds" the dispute "not to be governed by a decision or agreement of record" (Green Book, p. 8). A dispute is "determined" or "governed" by a decision or agreement of record, within the meaning of the Plan, if it is "applicable to" or "covers" the work in issue (Affidavit of Cour, Exh. 2, Blue Book, 1963 ed., Sec. 3, 7(a) and (b), pp. 3-4, 12, 13; Comp., Exh. 4, Blue Book, 1965 ed., Sec. 3, pp. 3-4).

A 1903 agreement "of record" (Green Book, p. 17) between appellant Lathers Union and appellee Carpenters Union allocates jurisdiction on the basis of the character of the components being installed; wood to Carpenters, light iron to Lathers. A 1920 decision "of record" (Green Book, p. 87), binding upon all affiliated unions (Maso Aff., Exh. 34), awards, inter alia, "metallic lathing of all descriptions" to Lathers. The jurisdictional dispute involved in this case concerns installation of light iron work in ceiling systems (Maso Supp. Aff., Exhs. 14-19). The 1903 agreement and 1920 decision allocate all such work to Lathers. The Hearings Panel decision of August 24, 1966 (Supp. Comp., Exh. 22, pp. 20-21), allocates "the bulk" of that work to Carpenters (Op. Tr. Jan. 16, 1967, p. 71). Plaintiffs seek to set aside the Hearings Panel award on the ground that incorporation of the 1903 agreement and 1920 decision in the 1965 Plan bars reallocation by a Hearings Panel, on a national basis, of work to which they pertain.

The Joint Board predicted referral of the jurisdictional dispute to a Hearings Panel upon finding that there is "no recognized decision or agreement of record covering the matter in dispute" (Op. Tr. Jan. 16, 1967, p. 73; Comp., Exh. 7). That finding does not rest on the theory that the 1903 agreement and 1920 decision do not pertain to the work in issue, but rather that they are not "recognized" or "of record" and therefore are not legally binding upon the Joint Board under Article III, Section 5. Thus, defendants' counsel admitted under questioning from the bench that the Joint Board had decided that the 1903 agreement is not "part of the record" (Tr. May 11, 1966, p. 26). In their Statement of Points and Authorities in Opposition to Plaintiff Lathers' Motion for Summary Judgment, pp. 1-2, defendants admitted that the "position of the Joint Board with respect to the agreement appearing on Page 17 of the Green Book" is that it is inoperative because it "was not approved at the Carpenters' convention of September 19, 1904," and was abrogated by Carpeners. In their Statement of Points and Authorities in Support of Defendants' Motion for Summary Judgment, p. 4, defendants observe that "Carpenters have refused to recognize the validity of the 1903 agreement at least since 1928," and opposed plaintiff's prayer for declaratory judgment as to "the legal effect of the agreement of 1903," on the ground that "this issue has been conclusively determined by the arbitration system in the Plan which Plaintiff Lathers is bound to accept" (p. 6).

The conclusion of the Joint Board and the Hearings Panel that the 1903 agreement and 1920 decision are legally inoperative is based upon precisely the same contentions which the contracting parties themselves rejected. Repeatedly since 1928 (Maso Aff., Exhs. 14(1), 19(1), 21), and as late as March 14, 1961 (Maso Aff., Exh. 23), Carpenters urged these very contentions in support of their demand that the Building and Construction Trades Department delete the 1903 agreement from the Green Book. On February 8, 1937, Carpenters wrote (Maso Aff., Exh. 14 (1)):

"I can not conceive how a temporary agreement can be published in your proceedings under the caption—Jurisdictional Agreements Entered Into Between Affiliated International Unions and Decisions Rendered Affecting the Building Industry that are Held To Be Operative by the Building Trades Department'."

The Department replied that it was a "legal agreement" (Maso Aff., Exh. 14 (2)). On January 17, 1939, the President of the Department declared that the 1903 agreement "is recognized by the Building and Construction Trades Department" (Maso Aff., Exh. 15). On June 23, 1941, the President of the Department declared that the agreement entered into on June 14, 1903, "has been in full force and effect since that time and is the guide for the Department" (Maso Aff., Exh. 16).

As late as September 27, 1957, the Joint Board honored the Department's recognition of the 1903 agreement and applied it to disputes over installation of light iron work in ceiling systems designed for acoustical tile as well as plaster finish⁷ (Maso Aff., Exh. 21; Memorandum of Points and Authorities in Support of Plaintiffs' Motion for Summary Judgment, pp. 8-10).⁸ Despite the Joint Board's refusal in job decisions after 1957 to follow the 1903 agreement and 1920 decision, and over Carpenters' 1961 warning that the agreement "must not be included in the next printing," the Department published it in the 1962, 1963 and 1965 editions of the Green Book, under the rubric "Held Operative by the * * * Department" (Maso Supp. Aff.).

The question, therefore, is whether the arbitrators are empowered to reverse the contracting parties, setting aside and annulling the very terms of the Plan itself. The District Court did not answer this question because it did not ask it.

III. ON THE MERITS, APPELLANT SHOULD PREVAIL

A. The Issue Is Justiciable.

Article III, Section 5, makes a Joint Board finding that a decision or agreement of record does not govern prerequisite to reference of a dispute to a Hearings Panel for national decision. It thereby "limits the authority" (Humphrey v. Moore, 375 U.S. 335, 345, n. 8), of the Joint Board and, necessarily, of the Hearings Panel, to reallocate jurisdiction by natural decision.

The Plan does not provide that a finding by the Joint Board under Section 5, Article III, shall be final or binding upon the parties.⁹ Accordingly, the validity of such a finding, "going to the power of the [Joint Board] under the contract, * * * presented an issue ultimately for the court, not the [Joint Board or the Hearings Panel] to decide." Ibid. The court must decide whether it was "permissible" under the Plan for the Joint Board "to conclude" (ibid., 375 U.S. at 346), that the 1903 agreement and 1920 decision do not "govern" the dispute over installation of light iron work in ceiling systems. The court below refused to be guided by Humphrey because the passage quoted in the next preceding sentence appears in a footnote and because the Supreme Court in that case upheld the arbitrators' decision (Tr. Jan. 16, 1967, pp. 68-70).

Humphrey demonstrates, and courts have explicitly held, that on an issue of this kind, going to "substantive arbitrability" (Wiley v.

⁹ The provision in Article III, Section 7 (Green Book, p. 9), that "[d]ecisions of the Hearings Panel * * * shall be immediately accepted and complied with by all parties to this Agreement" obviously has reference only to final decisions. The provision (ibid.), that "[a]ny decision or interpretation by the Joint Board shall be immediately accepted and complied with * * * unless an appeal is taken to the Appeals Board" does not relate to a finding under Article III, Section 5, because such a finding is neither a "decision" nor an "interpretation" and there is no provision for appeal therefrom to the Appeals Board. Compare the much more comprehensive finality provisions in Humphrey v. Moore, 375 U.S. 335, 339, which the Supreme Court found ambiguous, 375 U.S. at 345, n. 8.

The provision of Article X of the Department Constitution (Comp., Exh. 3, pp. 28-29), upon which appellees rely, invites rather than bars judicial review, because it provides that jurisdictional disputes "shall be settled and adjusted according to the Plan." (Emphasis added.) Article XI envisages judicial review after internal remedies are exhausted, and, a fortiori, where, as here, none exist. Statement of Defendants Dunlop et al., in Opposition to Plaintiff Lathers Motion for Summary Judgment, pp. 5-6, and exhibit attached to Sheriff affidavit, annexed.

Livingston, 376 U.S. 543, 548), there must be "meaningful review." Torrington Co. v. Metal Products Workers Union Local 1645, 362 F. 2d 677, 680 (2 Cir.), and authorities cited; see Hays, Labor Arbitration, A Dissenting View (Yale University Press, 1966), pp. 79-83. If a finding "is arbitrary, capricious or not adequately grounded in the basic * * * contract, it will not be enforced by the courts." International Ass'n. of Machinists v. Hayes Corporation, 296 F. 2d 238, 243 (5 Cir.). Were it otherwise, arbitrators could circumvent limitations upon their authority by "insubstantial findings of fact screening reality." Drivers Union v. Meadowmoor Co., 312 U.S. 287, 293. If, as the court below held (Op. Tr. Jan. 16, 1967, p. 74), the Joint Board's finding that the 1903 agreement and 1920 decision are not "recognized" by the Plan is a "finding of fact," it is vulnerable on that ground.

The underlying attitude of the district court (Tr. Jan. 16, 1967, pp. 16-17, 45-47, 66-67), that all issues arising out of jurisdictional disputes should be settled internally and not become the subject of litigation simply rejects the premise of Section 301, namely, that courts must compel respect for and adherence to the terms of agreements for the settlement of jurisdictional disputes. Parks v. International Brotherhood of Electrical Wks. 314 F. 2d 886, 914-916 (4 Cir.), cert. denied, 372 U.S. 976; Textile Workers v. Lincoln Mills, 353 U.S. 448, 454; Retail Clerks v. Lion Dry Goods, 369 U.S. 17, 26; United Textile Workers v. Textile Workers Union, 258 F. 2d 743 (7 Cir.).

B. Arbitrators Are Not Authorized To Substitute Their Policy and Judgments For The Terms of The Contract.

Assertion by the Joint Board and the Hearings Panel of power to determine whether an agreement and decision "of record" is "recognized" or "operative," or legally binding under Article III, Section 5, is plain usurpation, for the parties incorporated the answer in the Plan itself, thereby excluding the issue from the arbitrators' province. To hold otherwise is to say that arbitrators are superior not only to the Plan, but to the Department Constitution, for publication of an agreement or decision in the Green Book reflects its recognition under the Constitution of the Department, and invalidation by arbitrators, therefore, in effect amends the Constitution as well as the Plan.

"[The] arbitrator is confined to interpretation and application of the collective bargaining agreement; he does not sit to dispense his own brand of industrial justice. He may of course look for guidance from many sources, yet his award is legitimate only so long as it draws its essence from the collective bargaining agreement. When the arbitrator's words manifest an infidelity to this obligation, courts have no choice but to refuse enforcement of the award." Steelworkers v. Enterprise Corp., 363 U.S. 593, 597.

The Joint Board's finding, as explained by the Hearings Panel and defendants' counsel, manifest infidelity to its obligation to be bound by the contractual declaration that the 1903 agreement and 1920 decision are "operative." The Board's admitted adoption of the very contentions of the Carpenters (Statement of Defendant Dunlop, et al., of Points and Authorities in Opposition to Plaintiff Lathers' Motion for Summary Judgment, pp. 2, 3), which the Department had rejected (pp. 10-11, supra), assumes authority to review and reverse the Department's judgment, enacted in the plan.¹⁰

The Hearings Panel in its decision of April 4, 1966 (Comp., Exh. 19, pp. 12-13), explained assumption of this authority on the theory that its absence

"would preclude the clarification, interpretation or modernization of any agreement or decision of record. In an industry with rapid technological and product changes and many old jurisdictional rules, such an interpretation would constitute a severe frustration of the jurisdictional machinery not contemplated by the Plan."

Of course, this is a non-sequitur. If technological and product changes materially alter the character or eliminate the existence of work or jobs which are the subject of old jurisdictional rules, the rules may not cover or apply to new work or jobs, as Transportation-Communication Employees Union v. Union Pacific Railroad Co., No. 28, Oct. Term, 1966, 35 L.W. 4030, decided December 5, 1966, illustrates. (Supplemental Memorandum for Plaintiff Lathers.) But technological and product changes which do not alter the character of the job or work involved cannot justify disregard of the rules, for they do not defeat applicability or coverage.

The "technological, market and economic change" described in the Hearings Panel's decision on the merits (Supp. Comp., Exh. 22, pp. 15-16) does not even arguably affect or prevent application of the 1903 agreement and 1920 decision to the work of installing light iron components in suspended ceiling systems. The art of suspending ceilings from roof structures by light iron hangings and furring has not changed in well over half a century. Such changes as have occurred have involved merely the style or shape of the metal components, not their installation. These style changes in no way altered the character of that work (Maso Supp. Aff., pp. 5-6, Exhs. 14-16; Aff. of Downey, Sept. 28, 1966).

Substitution of acoustical tile for plaster as the predominant finish for ceiling systems, which began in the late 1920's (Celotex agreement, pp. 17-18, Green Book; Downey Aff., Nov. 2, decision (f)), involved merely the replacement of plasterers by carpenters for performance of the work of installing the finish; it did not involve any change in the lathing function, that is, in the work of installing the light iron components to receive the backerboard or acoustical tile finish (ibid; Aff. of Eby, Oct. 31, 1966, pp. 6-8; Maso Supp. Aff., Exhs. 17-19).

Nor does the fact, cited by the Hearings Panel in support of its decision on the merits (Supp. Comp., Exh. 22, pp. 16, 18), that in most areas of the country Carpenters perform much light iron ceiling work belonging to Lathers under the 1903 agreement and 1920 decision, remove the bar to reallocation by national decision under Section 5, Article III. On the contrary, when the Plan was amended in 1965, a safety valve was provided for just such situations. The Joint Board was empowered to issue job and locality decisions in conflict with an applicable agreement or decision of record where industry or area practice differed from a governing agreement or decision. This was accomplished by deleting the requirement in the predecessor version of the Plan (Aff. Cour., "Green Book" 1963 ed., p. 6, Art. III, Sec. 1(a), (b)), for a preliminary finding by the Joint Board in job decision cases that the dispute was not "covered" or "determined" by an agreement or decision of record, and authorizing locality decisions in repetitive disputes. In making all job and locality decisions, the Joint Board was authorized to "utilize the following criteria: Decisions and agreements of record as set forth in the Green Book, valid agreements between affected International Unions attested by the Chairman of the Joint Board, established trade practice and prevailing practice in the locality." See Defendant's Statement of Points and Authorities, dated October 19, 1966, pp. 4-6.

In glaring contrast to this lifting of the requirement of adherence to agreements and decisions of record in connection with job and locality decisions, the 1965 Plan retained that requirement in connection with reference of disputes to a Hearings Panel for decision on a national basis. Article III, Section 5, was retained intact from the prior version. Retention in Section 5 of the very phraseology concerning agreements and decisions of record which was deleted in Section 1 "cannot be ignored in the process of construction." Carey v. General Electric Company, 315 F.2d 490, 506 (2 Cir.), cert. denied, 377 U.S. 908. See Plaintiffs' Memorandum of Points and Authorities, pp. 4-5.

At the 1957 Convention of the Building and Construction Trades Department, at which its current Constitution was adopted, appellant Lathers observed that the new Constitution did not "specifically provide that the authorized tribunal for settlement of jurisdictional disputes shall adhere strictly to the decisions and agreements of record" and offered a resolution to amend the Constitution to provide explicitly that all tribunals authorized to decide jurisdictional disputes under the Plan must "adhere strictly to the decisions and agreements of record as contained in the Green Book and official publications of the Department" and that any decision failing so to adhere "shall not be used as a precedent for any future ruling or decision" (Additional Affidavit of Maso, dated November 29, 1966, pp. 2-3). The Lathers' resolution was referred to the Committee on Laws, which recommended non-concurrence for the stated reason that the purposes of the resolution "are already covered by the Assertion (Comp., Exh. 19, p. 12), that "the cited agreement and decision clearly do not govern or determine reasonably or unambiguously each and every part of every ceiling system" is in part impertinent and, in part, in the context of this dispute, false. Declaration that the standard for work allocation in the agreement and decision is not "reasonable" assumes revisory authority in the arbitrators to substitute for the contract standard their own standard of reasonableness. Assertion that the agreement and decision do not "unambiguously" determine the allocation of all light iron work on ceiling systems, the only part of ceiling systems here in issue, is simply incorrect.

contents of the 'Green Book' and the Procedural Rules and Regulations of the National Joint Board" (ibid.). No relevant change was made in the Plan between 1957 and 1965.

The legislative history of the 1965 amendments is meager, but what there is, in the form of minutes of the Joint Negotiating Committee (Maso Supp. Aff., Exhs. 1-9), confirms the uncontradicted affidavits of Plaintiff's President Maso (ibid., p. 2), and Sheet Metal Workers President Carlough (p. 2), that there was not a scintilla of suggestion from the draftsmen or sponsors of any intention to deprive agreements and decisions which are printed in the Green Book of the protection they historically enjoyed against modification or repeal through national decisions.

The contracting parties in 1965 manifestly believed that whatever difficulties existed in consequence of divergence of practice from recognized decisions and agreements could be met adequately by eliminating the requirement for adherence to those agreements and decisions in job decisions and by empowering the Joint Board to make locality decisions, which could achieve uniformity on a local basis without repetitive decisions where warranted by area practice. Retention of the finding requirement in Section 5, Article III, bespeaks refusal to withdraw protection against divestiture by national decision, regardless how repetitive disputes were. The contracting parties thus preserved all vested rights in areas where practice and agreement or decision coincide. Should they decide that the solution they adopted in 1965 is unsatisfactory, they can easily remedy the situation by amending Article III, Section 5, themselves.

Accordingly, mere arbitrators are not allowed to second guess the parties or rewrite the contract to suit their own taste. Neither directly nor indirectly, neither overtly nor covertly, neither ingeniously nor disingenuously, can they, in effect, delete from the Green Book the 1903 agreement and the 1920 decision, or erase from Article III, Section 5, the "agreements and decisions of record" clause.

CONCLUSION

For the foregoing reasons, this motion for injunction pending appeal should be granted.

ORDER

These cases came on for hearing on the motion of appellant in No. 20716 for injunction pending appeal, and said motion was argued by counsel.

Upon consideration whereof, and counsel for appellant in No. 20727 having orally moved for consolidation of the above-entitled cases, and counsel for all parties having submitted a stipulation on the briefing schedule and record pursuant to direction of the court, and the stipulation and motion to consolidate having been considered, it is

ORDERED by the court that the aforesaid motion for injunction be granted, and the effective date of the Decision of the Hearings Panel issued August 24, 1966, heretofore postponed by the District Court, is stayed pending appeal, or until further order of this court, and it is

FURTHER ORDERED by the court that the above-entitled cases are consolidated for all purposes and appellants shall furnish a bond in the amount of five thousand ($5,000.00) dollars for payment of such costs and damages as may be incurred or suffered by any party who is found to have been wrongfully enjoined or restrained, and it is

FURTHER ORDERED by the court that these cases shall be set for hearing on Wednesday, March 15, 1967, and the times for filing appellants' statement of points and the briefs of the parties is fixed as follows:

Appellants shall file their statements of points on or before February 6, 1967.

Appellants' consolidated brief shall be filed on or before February 15, 1967.

Appellees' brief shall be filed on or before March 1, 1967.

Appellants' reply brief, if any, shall be filed on or before March 8, 1967.

Counsel may file their briefs in mimeographed or xeroxed form, and the parties may file three folders containing the pertinent pleadings, affidavits, exhibits and portions of the transcript of proceedings, contained in the record on appeal in these cases, in lieu of reproducing same in a joint appendix, provided that such folders are suitably bound and captioned.

STATEMENT OF POINTS

1. The District Court erred in failing and refusing to hold that the Joint Board and the Hearings Panel violated their obligation to be bound, in administering Section 5, Article III, by the contracting parties' explicit and unequivocal declaration in the 1965 Plan that the 1903 agreement and 1920 decision are "recognized under the provisions of the Constitution of the * * * Department," are "of record" and are "operative."

2. The District Court erred in failing and refusing to hold that the Joint Board and the Hearings Panel exceeded their authority by entertaining and adopting appellee Carpenters' contentions concerning the 1903 agreement which the Department had considered and rejected.

3. The District Court erred in failing and refusing to hold that under the Plan the 1903 agreement and 1920 decision of record bar re-allocation by national decision of jurisdiction over installation of light iron work in ceiling systems.

4. The District Court erred in failing and refusing to hold that the Plan and the Department Constitution do not bar judicial determination of the questions presented.

5. The District Court erred in dismissing the complaint and in failing and refusing to grant the relief requested by appellant Lathers.

RESOLUTION—FLORIDA STATE COUNCIL OF LATHERS

Florida State Council endorses General President Sal Maso for reelection.

RESOLUTION NUMBER ONE

The Wood, Wire and Metal Lathers International Union, at its 25th Convention held in New York City in September 1964 elected Sal Maso its General President.

WHEREAS: General President Sal Maso is a man of outstanding ability as a result of his long and varied experience within the labor movement, and

WHEREAS: Through his aggressive leadership the image of the Wood, Wire and Metal Lathers International Union has been re-established as a progressive influence within the Industry, with Architects, Contractors, and the General Public, and

WHEREAS: President Maso has brought the identity of his office very close to the rank and file members, by his untiring efforts in traveling throughout the United States and Canada, thereby improving the image of the Lathers International Union to the highest degree, and

WHEREAS: He has instilled in the membership a universal resolve that we must be constantly on the alert to guard our trade jurisdiction against any encroachment no matter what the cost,

NOW THEREFORE BE IT RESOLVED:

That the delegates of the Florida State Council of Lathers here assembled go on record as endorsing President Maso for re-election to the office of General President of the Wood, Wire and Metal Lathers International Union, at the 26th Convention to be held in September 1967, and

BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED:

That this resolution be published in "The Lather" at its next publication in order to give the action taken here the widest recognition within the Lathers International Union.

Philosophy of Labor

by Reverend Joseph L. Donahue, C.S.V.

A Salute to Ireland

On March 17th, the early morning dawn will catch the music of Ireland. The hours will carry it around the World, until the globe is girdled with the tears and the smiles of Irish Song. It will be St. Patrick's Day.

Each year on that glorious day the "sea divided Gale" looks back through vivid centuries to that Holy Saturday when St. Patrick kindled the Paschal fire on the Hill of Slane, and on Easter Sunday through the shamrock preached the mystery of the Holy Trinity to the Irish Druid chiefs assembled on the hill of Tara.

This was the beginning of the strangest national romance of history. Men and nations have been stirred to deeds of heroism and high emprise by various motives. Sometimes women like Helen of Troy have sent them to the wild adventure of battle. The lust of conquest has spawned its Alexanders, Caesars, Hannibals, Charlemagnes and Napoleons. The lure of gold has made men seek the ends of rainbows. All of these things have woven romance. They show how carelessly on occasion men can die for the things they love, and in which they believe.

Ireland, set in the North-West of Europe, with the arms of Dublin Bay stretching to the east and her west coast ribbed against the white maned waves of the Atlantic, has "wronged no race, and robbed no land, and never oppressed the weak." Almost alone among the nations of the world at the cost of fearful sacrifice she has held aloft the light of religious truth, and remained faithful to the ideal of political liberty. Strange, impractical, unworldly ideals these, but they clothe Ireland with mystic imperishable glory.

Ireland's pride is her spiritual dignity. Spiritual truths have always been more real and vivid to her sons and daughters than mere material truths. The dreams of Ireland are Holy dreams that come down from heaven. They are concerned with a cave in the hill side of Judea, with the blessedness of poverty, meekness, justice, purity, peace, with Christ on His cross, with the Resurrection and with heaven. These dreams filled Ireland with monasteries, churches, schools, and colleges to which sages of the world came to learn wisdom, and give her the title of the Isle of Saints and scholars.

Some people may think it is presumption and boastfulness to say God loves the Irish, but no one can deny the Irish love God.

Yes, the spiritual is much more real to the Irish than the material. That is why Irish literature and poetry are filled with reference to fairies and other semi-spiritual beings. Only an Irishman with Patrick McGill's poetical fancy could have written these lines midst the carnage and turmoil of a battle-field;

"If we forget the fairies, and tread upon their rings,
God will perchance forget us,
and think of other things,
When we forget you Fairies,
Who guard our spirit's light;
God will forget the morrow, and Day forget the night."

One feels in these lines the sense of sincerity and imaginative reality. There is more in heaven and earth than is dreamed of in our philosophy. The Irish have a firm hold on the spiritual realities that lie beneath the surface of things.

Death to the Irishman is not in the grave but in the clank of chains. He cares nothing for safety, comfort or prosperity, if these be not accompanied by freedom. If poverty, want, suffering, persecution are the price of freedom, then he will pay the price. Liberty to the Irishman is passion, not an intellectual ideal or legal formula written into a constitution. It is a reality to him more dear than life.

So on St. Patrick's day we fly back on the wings of love and memory to holy Ireland to wander through her soft green vales, to hear the songs of Ireland sung by singers with a tear in their voices. While we rest in meditation in this shrine of religion and freedom we can see a mighty but beautiful army moving from valley and mountain top with a multitude of candles in their hands first lit from the Paschal fire on the hill of Slane to become the light of the World. And over this army of the sons and daughters of Ireland in the sunlight can be seen the Banner of the Cross.

REPORT

from the General Secretary-Treasurer

J. EARL FERGUSON

One of organized labor's most important long-range legislative goals, better provision for the well-being of retired and disabled workers, and their widows and children, has been given priority by President Johnson and the AFL-CIO is backing up his legislative proposals. AFL-CIO President George Meany announced in mid-February that at least 15 major cities from coast to coast will be the scene of special rallies, and that a film report on social security was being prepared specifically for them. Political, civic and trade union leaders were preparing speeches on the same subject to present at the rallies.

What the President called for is an average 20 percent rise in social security benefits, which will give beneficiaries a better share of America's economic progress. Right now, there are 22 million Americans who receive varying amounts of their support from Old Age, Survivors and Disability Insurance programs, a sizeable portion of the population. Yet many of these needy people have been trapped in the spiral of rising prices. While the average organized worker has had wage increases to compensate to some extent for the increased cost of living, most of those on social security have not.

The Social Security Administration estimates that about 5 million people over 65 are living in poverty, and another 5.5 million are kept ahead of poverty by their social security benefits. Yet the Social Security Administration's definition of poverty is $1500 a year for an elderly individual, and $1,850 for an elderly couple!

Another office in the same Government—the Labor Department—says the bare minimum for an elderly couple is $3,000 a year in a large city, and $2,500 in the smaller community. Three years ago, the Department says, 40 percent of the elderly couples in the nation had incomes below $3,000.

Aged widows under social security fare even worse. The Government reported that in 1962, 70 percent were living in poverty. Right now, widows are receiving an average of $74 a month.

In the period from 1954 to 1966, cash benefits to those on social security have gone up only twice. In 1958, a part of the loss in buying power was made up by a 7½ percent increase, and in 1965, there was a 7 percent increase, still far short of the toll of inflation. From 1954 to 1966, the cost of living rose 21.9 percent.

There is no doubt that increasing social security payments will increase the cost of the system, but when we compare the amount of money our government now receives for social security with that of many other countries, we discover that the U. S. ranks fourteenth among the non-communist countries. Out of the total value of our national wealth today, about 7 percent goes back to the Government for social security. In West Germany, the percentage is 17. In Italy, 14.7 percent, and in England, 11.1 percent.

The President's proposals, although still short of a 50 percent increase in benefits which the AFL-CIO feels will ultimately be needed to meet bare minimum income levels, deserves the support of every member of organized labor.

Surely we can afford a better fate for those among us who have helped to build the foundation of our continuously improving standard of living.

Sincerely and fraternally,

J. EARL FERGUSON,
General Secretary-Treasurer.

Mr. Sal Maso, General President

Lathers' Building
6530 New Hampshire Avenue
Tacoma Park, Maryland

Dear Sal:

I have been instructed by the New Jersey State Council of Wood, Wire and Metal Lathers to express their gratitude and commend you for the action you have taken to help resolve the work jurisdiction of the Lathers' International Union, which is presently being claimed by the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America.

It is our feeling that the court action initiated by you, as President of the International Union, was a must in view of the fact that all amicable efforts to see justice done were met with utter failure.

We want you to know you have our wholehearted cooperation and support in this and any future action you may deem necessary to undertake in order to help restore the Lathers to a place of dignity among the building trades.

Fraternally yours,

B. G. Piringer
Secretary-Treasurer

THANKS FROM NEW JERSEY

LAKE ERIE DISTRICT COUNCIL MEETING

The Lake Erie District Council of Lathers held a meeting in Cleveland, Ohio, January 28, which was attended by LIU General President Sal Maso and General Secretary-Treasurer J. Earl Ferguson. The meeting was productive and stimulating to the delegates present. It was a special meeting to elect a delegate to attend the forthcoming general convention to be held in Miami Beach in September. Robert Long, Local 171 was elected as delegate. Jim Cessna, Local 28, is the alternate.

Talking to the Council members, General President Maso urged that members try harder to get assignments on any new work to support the LIU and recounted recent developments in court proceedings regarding protection of our rightful jurisdiction. In this connection he pointed out the importance of making sure that the fullest possible lathing jurisdiction is written into agreements with employers. This is often the decisive factor, Maso said, in winning a jurisdictional dispute at the local level. Many disputes, he said, are being won throughout the country on the basis of trade practice, but it's best to be sure.

General Secretary-Treasurer Ferguson, who discussed the importance of timeliness in submitting per capita tax to LIU headquarters, also expressed his appreciation for having had the opportunity of working with such a dynamic General President as Sal Maso. "Your President," Ferguson noted, "has greatly advanced the stature of our trade. Too often, the significance of his work is not evident to members on the local level, but let me assure you that his contributions have, nevertheless, been of inestimable value to every single member."

Resolution Adopted by the New York State Council of Lathers,
January 21, 1967

IN MEMORIAM

Arthur F. Archambo

WHEREAS, Almighty God in his infinite wisdom has removed from our ranks our faithful servant and Brother Arthur F. Archambo, who for a period of fifteen years has served Local Union No. 14, Rochester, N. Y., as Financial-Secretary, and

WHEREAS, Arthur F. Archambo had been a member in good standing of our International Union for a period of twenty years, during this period he also served as President of the Central New York District Council of Lathers, and as Labor Advisor to the Central New York Lathing and Plastering Bureau. His advice and wise counsel will be greatly missed by all gatherings in the interest of the Labor Movement in general;

RESOLVED, That this meeting of the State Council by a period of silence pay tribute in solemn and sincere memory to our departed Brother, Arthur F. Archambo, to the time, effort, wisdom and friendship which he gave to our organization and the Labor Movement in general, and extend our deepest sympathy to the family of our deceased leader, friend and brother, and

BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED, that a copy of this resolution be sent to the family of our deceased Brother, and a copy sent for publication in THE LATHER.

AUDIT REPORT

Wood, Wire and Metal Lathers International Union

January 1, 1966 to December 31, 1966

February 7, 1967

Mr. Sal Maso, General President
Wood, Wire and Metal Lathers International Union
6530 New Hampshire Avenue
Takoma Park, Maryland

Dear Sir:

In accordance with your request we have examined the books and records of the Wood, Wire and Metal Lathers International Union for the year ended December 31, 1966 and give you herewith a report of our examination including the following exhibits and schedules:

Exhibits:

A—Statement of Condition December 31, 1966

Schedules:

- 1—Summary Cash Statement
- 2—Statement of Cash Receipts
- 3—Statement of Cash Disbursements
- 3A—Officers and Representatives Salaries and Expenses

Cash in bank was reconciled with statements received from the Suburban Trust Company, Hyattsville, Maryland and various other depositories where the organization has deposits in savings accounts.

Bonds owned as described in Schedule 4 and Stock Certificate Number 62-245 for 560 shares of Union Labor Life Insurance Company Stock are held for safekeeping in a safe deposit box in the Suburban Trust Company. These securities were verified in the presence of General Secretary-Treasurer J. Earl Ferguson.

The net assets of your organization have increased from $1,372,684.18 on December 31, 1965 to $1,570,597.65 on December 31, 1966, an increase of $197,913.47 occurring in the various funds as follows:

	NET WORTH DECEMBER 31,		INCREASE OR (DECREASE)
	1966	1965
General Fund	$ 624,377.18	$ 133,433.41	$ 490,943.77
Organizing Fund	54,632.52	77,500.58	(22,868.06)
Funeral Benefit Fund	350,009.06	320,039.35	29,969.71
Convention Fund	177,049.37	118,821.78	58,227.59
Building Fund	—	461,063.79	(461,063.79)
Legal Defense Fund	364,529.52	261,825.27	102,704.25
Total	$1,570,597.65	$1,372,684.18	$ 197,913.47

The balance of $461,063.79 in the Building Fund as of December 31, 1965 was transferred to the General Fund.

During this year in accordance with Case No. 49 of the February, 1966 Executive Council Meeting, administrative expenses of $82,775.93 were transferred to the General Fund.

Inventory values were based on estimated figures determined from your records.

Since the examination was confined to receipts and disbursements, amounts due from local unions or other sources, and any unpaid bills, for services and supplies, were not considered in the compilation of this report.

In our opinion, subject to the above comments, the accompanying balance sheet and operating statement present fairly the financial position of the Wood, Wire and Metal Lathers International Union at December 31, 1966 and the results of its operations for the year then ended consistent with that of the preceding year.

Yours very truly,
ERIC G. JANSSON AND COMPANY

1st Choice of Lathers Everywhere

VAUGHAN

Professional LATHING HATCHET

- Super thin blade for cutting ease and speed — specially tempered for durability and dependability.
- Proper "pitch angle" of head provides knuckle room clearance and insures direct blows for overhead work.
- Handle securely wedged to blade for "stay-tight" assurance.
- 12 row sharp milled oval face provides an accurate blow from any angle without slipping.
- Beautiful high polish finish. Temper line can actually be seen!
- Best grade hickory handle with large grip area for perfect balance—less tiring.

"THE INJURY TO ONE IS THE CONCERN OF ALL"

REPORT

from the General President

SAL MASO

Federal Judge Renders Landmark Decision

1903 Agreement is Recognized in Jurisdictional Case

A recent decision rendered by a United States District Court Judge in Texas is a landmark decision of extreme importance to all of us. It recognizes the 1903 agreement between the lathers and Carpenters in the Findings of Fact and Conclusions of law.

The decision, rendered by Judge Sarah T. Hughes, in Dallas, is important because it establishes a forceful precedent for wider acceptance by the courts of our position with respect to work jurisdiction. You are already aware, through my continuing reports, that the 1903 agreement is at the very heart of our long-standing jurisdictional dispute at the national level.

Judge Hughes, as you will note in her conclusion No. 6, in the full text of the material reproduced below, recognizes and cites the 1903 agreement as valid and binding in determining a division of work between Lathers and Carpenters.

This Decision is important for a second reason, as well. It proves once again the importance of including our complete trade jurisdiction in any collective bargaining agreements. I call your attention to Section 3, pages 4, 5 and 6 of the LIU constitution, for the wording which is appropriate, and which must be included in all agreements signed with employers.

Judge Hughes took action against the Omega Drywall Construction Company, Inc., through an injunction directing the firm to abide permanently by the conditions of its agreement with Local 140, Dallas. The agreement requires the use of Lathers in the installation of metal studs to receive sheetrock.

It is unfortunate that it has been necessary to resort to court litigation to protect the traditional and rightful work jurisdiction of our members, but such litigation is in many cases the only answer. I will continue, as I have in the past, to resort to whatever legal remedies are necessary and available to convince those violating our agreements of the Lathers' right to their jurisdiction.

In the operation of our International Union I am reminded again of the similarity with the pattern from which all free democratic societies are shaped. The very life and success of this organization is built on the individual member. His wishes, needs and desires are translated into action through the democratic organization at the local, council and national level, much as our Federal Government operates through its elected representatives from all areas of the country. Therefore, because each member is the ultimate director of our efforts, I feel it my duty to keep him completely informed, in order that he may make intelligent decisions.

For your most serious consideration, therefore, I have reproduced below the important documents of Judge Hughes' decision, including both the injunction directing Omega Drywall Construction Company, Inc. to restore the work to lathers, and the Findings of Fact and Conclusions of Law, which reflect Judge Hughes' thinking behind the decision. I am sure that you will find this both enlightening and heartening.

Sincerely and fraternally,

SAL MASO, General President

Local No. 140 Wood, Wire and Metal Lathers International Union, AFL-CIO by Ben Spawn vs.
Omega Drywall Construction Company, Inc.
and
State Council of Carpenters and its Affiliate Local No. 1526, United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America, AFL-CIO

No. 3-1887

PERMANENT INJUNCTION

This cause came on to be heard upon the verified petition of Ben Spawn, Business Agent of Local No. 140, Wood, Wire and Metal Lathers International Union, AFL-CIO, and came on the parties in person and by their attorneys of record, and the Court granted to the State Council of Carpenters and its Affiliate Local No. 1526, United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America, AFL-CIO, leave to intervene and participate in said hearing. The Court, upon consideration of the pleadings, evidence, briefs, argument of counsel and the entire record in the case, finds and concludes that it has jurisdiction of the matter before it and that the award of the Joint Grievance Committee of January 12, 1967, is enforceable and that the preliminary injunction heretofore granted in open Court on January 27, 1967, should be continued and made permanent. Now, therefore, upon the entire record,

It is ordered, adjudged and decreed that Omega Drywall Construction Company, Inc. and their officers, representatives, agents, servants, employees and all persons acting in concert or participation with the, be, and they hereby are, enjoined from employing anyone other than employees covered by the Contract between Omega Drywall Construction Company, Inc. and Local No. 140 Wood, Wire and Metal Lathers International Union, AFL-CIO, in the installation of metal studs and sheetrock known as the drywall system on the construction at the construction site known as the Women's Dormitory at Texas Women's University in Denton, Denton County, Texas.

It is further ordered that if the employer's business is purchased or assigned directly or indirectly to any corporation, partnership, single proprietorship or joint venture that this injunction shall be binding upon such successor or assignee.

It is further ordered that the United States District Clerk issue a Writ enjoining the Defendant, Omega Drywall Construction Company, Inc. and/or any corporation, partnership, proprietorship or joint venture purchasing or assuming such construction, in the manner and to the degree as set forth in the Order of the Court and serve such Writ, together with copy of this Order on Omega Drywall Construction Company, Inc. and that proof of such service be filed herein.

Bond set at Five Hundred ($500.00) Dollars.

Dated at Dallas, Texas, this 24 day of February, 1967.

No. 3-1887

FINDINGS OF FACT AND
CONCLUSIONS OF LAW

This matter came on for hearing on the application of Plaintiff for a permanent injunction, and the Court having considered the pleadings on file and having heard the evidence and argument of counsel, does make and enter the following findings of fact and conclusions of law.

FINDINGS OF FACT

1. Plaintiff is Local No. 140, Wood, Wire and Metal Lathers Union, AFL-CIO, hereinafter called Lathers. Ben Spawn, Business Agent and Secretary of Lathers, brings this action on behalf and as representative of the organization. The complaint was filed January 19, 1967.

2. Defendant is Drywall Construction Company, Inc., a corporation organized under the laws of the State of Texas.

3. Prior to August 1, 1965 Lathers and Omega entered into a collective bargaining contract marked Plaintiff's Exhibit 1.

4. Article IV of the Contract entitled "Work Jurisdiction" provides in part:

"The Lathers International Union shall have jurisdiction over and there shall be assigned to journeymen lathers and apprentices represented by the Lathers International Union . . . the following work:

"Erecting, constructing, installing and completing of all light iron construction, furring . . . wood, wire and metal lath; plaster board or other material which takes the place of same . . .

". . . light iron and metal furring of all description such as rod, . . . metal spline and other ceiling bars or systems for the receipt of metal lath, rock lath, gypsum board . . . or light iron or metal studs, when such studs are to receive a drywall finish . . . or when such studs are to receive metal laths, rock lath or other material for the application of plaster or other sprayed on wet material . . ."

The effect of this provision of the contract was to assign work under "Work Jurisdiction" to the Lathers as of August 1, 1965.

5. Article XII of the Contract entitled "Grievance Procedure" provides in part:

"All disputes, controversies and grievances arising during the operation of this agreement involving its interpretation and application, shall be disposed of in accordance with the following steps:

(a) An adjustment will first be attempted between the representative of the Local Union and the affected Contractor.

(b) This Union agrees that it shall not declare any Contractor 'Unfair' or call a strike . . . until a fair hearing shall be given before a Joint Grievance Committee composed of the Union Representative and Employer Representatives. . . .

(c) A decision of the Joint Grievance Committee shall be final and binding on all parties of the dispute."

6. Thereafter, Omega secured a contract covering all the interior gypsum board and metal stud partitions as well as all exterior metal lath and plaster and ceramic tile on a 21-story dormitory at Texas Women's University in Denton, Denton County, Texas. The job started in September 1966. Lathers were employed by Omega to do certain work but were not employed to install metal studs and drywall.

7. Lathers objected to Omega's failure to employ their members for such work and after being unable to settle the dispute with Omega, it was referred to a Joint Grievance Committee.

8. After a hearing on January 12, 1967 the Grievance Committee unanimously held that "Omega was in violation of its contract," as shown by the Minutes of the meeting, Plaintiff's Exhibit 3.

9. Omega did not comply with the decision of the Grievance Committee and lathers were not employed to install the metal studs and drywall.

10. Lathers did not strike or threaten to strike Omega for failing to employ its members for the installation of metal studs and drywall.

11. This action was brought on January 19, 1965 to enforce the decision of the Grievance Committee.

12. On January 25, 1965 Omega filed with the National Labor Relations Board, Ft. Worth, a charge that Lathers had committed an unfair labor practice in that Lathers made threats and accusations to engage in conduct prohibited by Section 8(b)(4)(d) of the National Labor Relations Act.

13. On January 27, 1967 a hearing on the application for temporary injunction was held and after hearing, an injunction was issued enjoining Omega "from employing anyone other than employees covered by the contract between Omega . . . and Local No. 140 . . . in the installation of metal studs and sheetrock . . . on the construction . . . (of) the Women's Dormitory at Texas Women's University.

14. On February 16, 1965 the State Council of Carpenters and its affiliate local, Local 1526 of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America, AFL-CIO, hereinafter called Carpenters, were granted leave to intervene.

15. On February 17, 1967 a hearing was held on the application of Lathers for a permanent injunction.

16. Following the issuance of the temporary injunction, Omega employed lathers on the Texas Women's University job and the Carpenters struck.

17. The proceeding before the National Labor Relations Board was still pending at the time of the hearing on the permanent injunction. There was no evidence of any action being taken by the Board.

18. It was stipulated that the testimony taken on the hearing on the temporary injunction should be a part of the evidence on the hearing for the permanent injunction.

19. Intervenor-Carpenters introduced a contract marked Intervenor's Exhibit 1 between Omega and the State Council of Carpenters dated December 20, 1965 in which Omega recognized "the jurisdictional claims of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America, to work the hours, pay the wages and observe the working conditions established or agreed upon by the United Brotherhood . . ." The contract further provided that "no strike or lockout shall be entered into pending any dispute benignly investigated." There was no provision in the contract relating to work jurisdiction.

20. Intervenor-Carpenters likewise introduced a contract marked Intervenor's Exhibit 7 between Omega and Carpenters' Local Union No. 198, dated January 23, 1967 relating to carpenter work in Dallas, Collin, Kaufman, Ellis and Rockwall counties. It did not apply to Denton County, where the work involved in this case was being done.

21. Intervenor-Carpenters likewise introduced three documents entitled "Constitution of the Building and Construction Trades Department AFL-CIO," "Plan for Settling Jurisdictional Disputes," and "Procedural Rules and Regulations of the National Joint Board" marked Intervenor's Exhibits 3, 2, and 4, respectively.

22. AFL in 1903 set up a Building Trades Department composed of national and international building trades organization. The Lathers and Carpenters are members.

23. "Plan for Settling Jurisdictional Disputes" provides for the establishment by the Building and Construction Trades Department of a National Joint Board whose duty it shall be to consider and decide cases of jurisdictional disputes. The plan has been in existence since 1948 and was the subject of revision agreed to February 2, 1965. The Carpenters and Lathers are parties to the plan by reason of their affiliation with the Construction and Trades Department.

24. The "Procedural Rules" provide that the procedure shall apply to certain contractors. There is no evidence that Omega is a contractor to whom the plan applies.

25. "The Procedural Rules" under "Contractors Responsibility" provides that assignments of work shall be made according to the following bases (a) "Where a decision of record applies to the disputed work or where an agreement of record between the disputing trades applies to the disputed work . . . (b) Where no decision or agreement under (a) applies, the contractor may assign the disputed work in accordance with the prevailing practice in the locality . . . (c) If a dispute has arisen prior to the specific assignment of work where no decision or agreement under (a) applies, or where there is no predominant practice in the locality, the contractor shall nonetheless make a specific assignment according to his best judgment . . ."

26. No evidence was introduced that there was a decision of record with reference to the disputed work, nor was there any evidence that Omega had or had not made any assignment in accordance with the prevailing practice in the community. In Intervenor's Exhibit 2, "Plan for Settling Jurisdictional Disputes" there was an agreement entered into in 1903 between the Lathers and Carpenters providing that the Carpenters would not assert jurisdiction "over any iron work including iron or wire lathing, studding or any other exclusively iron work" claimed by the Lathers, and the Lathers would not assert jurisdiction over certain wood work," except wooden lath to receive plastic material.

27. Section 4 under "Contractor's Responsibility" provides "When a contractor has made an assignment of work, he shall continue the assignment without alteration unless otherwise directed by the Joint Board or by agreement between the International Unions involved."

28. The "Procedural Rules" under "Union's Responsibility" provides "Any union which protests that a contractor has failed to assign work in accordance with the procedure specified above, shall . . . process the complaint through its national office." Then follows procedure for reporting a protest of a work assignment to the Joint Board.

29. On February 9, 1967 the president of the Carpenters notified the Chairman of the Joint Board of the dispute with the Lathers. The telegram, Intervenor's Exhibit 6, to the Joint Board set out that the Carpenters had been assigned the work and the Lathers insisted the Carpenters be replaced by Lathers. The Chairman of the Joint Board replied by letter dated February 10, 1967 that assuming the work had originally been assigned to the Carpenters, the action of the Lathers was contrary to the procedural rules. The Board has not been advised of all the facts nor has the Board taken any of the steps set out in Article III of "Plan for Settling Jurisdictional Disputes" to arrive at a decision.

30. "Procedural Rules" contains a declaration of policy which prohibits picketing for jurisdictional purposes. No evidence was introduced as to action taken with reference to picketing by the Carpenters.

CONCLUSIONS OF LAW

1. This case being a suit for violation of a contract between an employer and a labor organization, this Court has jurisdiction under the provisions of 29 U.S.C.A., Section 185.

2. The National Labor Relations Board has jurisdiction to adjudicate unfair labor practices filed by Omega even though such practices might have been before the Joint Grievance Committee in its consideration of the violation by Omega of its contract with the Lathers.

3. There having been no evidence introduced of any complaint of unfair labor practices based on 29 U.S.C. 158 (b) filed by Omega before the National Labor Relations Board at the time of the Joint Grievance Committee hearing relating to a contract violation by Omega, the Grievance Committee was free to act.

4. While the National Labor Relations Board has jurisdiction to adjudicate a charge of unfair labor practices filed by Omega, there having been no Section 10(k) hearing at the time this suit was filed or heard, Section 10(k) jurisdiction had not been established and the proceedings before the National Labor Relations Board do not remove the jurisdiction of this Court over the case.

5. The Lathers and Omega having agreed to submit all disputes to a Joint Grievance Committee and having agreed that its decision would be final and binding, the decision of that Committee is not subject to review by a Court, the jurisdiction of the Court being limited to enforcing the decision of the Committee in a dispute involving a contract violation by Omega.

6. In view of the evidence assigning the work to the Lathers by contract as of August 1, 1965 and the 1903 agreement of the International Unions of Lathers and of Carpenters with reference to division of work, it is evident that the letter from the Chairman of the Joint Board was not based on a full knowledge of the facts.

7. Without a hearing before the National Joint Board, there has been no decision of that Board which would bind any of the parties.

8. No action having been taken by the National Joint Board, the Joint Grievance Committee, agreed upon by employer and the Union, was not precluded from rendering a decision.

9. The decision of the Joint Grievance Committee being final, injunction to enforce the decision should issue.

In Ft. Lauderdale, Florida, members of Local No. 406 met requirements for close tolerances in the installation of an acoustical ceiling in the Parker Playhouse Theater. The need for accuracy was dictated by the technical requirements for sound control. Contractor was Nick Carpinilli, Ft. Lauderdale. Shown at the job site on the cover are (L-R) Local 406 Business Agent Ray Smith, Jr.; and Lathers Donald Aston and Grady Fletcher.

Meany Applauds Social Security Boosts, But Calls Them A 'Beginning'

The AFL-CIO is "enthusiastic" about President Johnson's proposed increases in Social Security minimum benefits. President George Meany told the House Ways and Means Committee.

But, he added, the Federation looks upon the boosts as only a beginning of the kind of improvements that should be made, in all justice, to permit the elderly to share in the nation's advancing standard of living.

The AFL-CIO chief pointed out that while the 1965 Social Security boosts lifted about 5,500,000 of the aged out of a grinding poverty level, it left another 5,000,000 "below the poverty line."

Even this poverty line—as calculated by the Department of Agriculture for emergency situations—provides for an income of only $1,500 a year for a single worker and $1,900 for a couple with only 22 cents a meal budgeted for each person.

Meany pointed out that today's average Social Security benefit for a single retired worker is about $84 a month—about $20 a week—or the pay of an average worker 30 years ago. To make it worse, Meany pointed out, the cost of living has virtually doubled since then.

Meany rejected flatly one proposal that would raise benefits about 8 percent. The inadequacy of this, he declared, was "appalling."

"In contrast," he continued, "the average 20 percent increase in Social Security benefits recommended by the President would have real significance. They would enable the elderly and others dependent on Social Security to begin to share in the fruits of the nation's economic advance."

"I said 'begin to share,' and that's what I mean," Meany declared. "The AFL-CIO Convention in December 1965 and the AFL-CIO Executive Council last month pointed out that a full adequate level of Social Security payments would require a boost of at least 50 percent in present payments. But we regard, and we hope the Congress will regard, the proposed 20 percent increase in benefits this year as substantial down payment toward that goal."

Meany said that introduction of a cost-of-living mechanism in the Social Security system "would be a forward step." But, he warned, this alone would not guarantee adequate benefits.

"As I noted earlier," he said, "Social Security beneficiaries have a right not just to keep from falling behind the race with living costs but to participate in the nation's increased standard of living. Therefore, Congress should give consideration to effective means of keeping Social Security benefit levels in line with other incomes. One way to do this would be to provide for periodic adjustment at fairly frequent intervals of benefit levels to some appropriate measure of active workers' earnings."

A HIGHER INCOME LIMIT FOR THOSE ON PENSIONS?

Senator Vance Hartke (D-Ind.) announced plans to introduce a bill before Easter to end the allowable limit on earnings for those receiving social security benefit. Under the present law your allotment is cut back if you earn more than $1,500 a year in addition to what you get through Social Security.

"Now there is need for older and skilled workers, particularly in the technical fields," Hartke says. "The passage of time and the enormous expansion of our Gross National Product has drastically undermined the shopworn argument against making full payment to the millions of Americans who have paid into Social Security for up to 30 years, and who now wish to supplement their benefits by continuing some form of profitable employment to partially replace the earnings they had before reaching mandatory retirement." Hartke also points out that while the retiree who takes in additional money in wages may lose some benefits, those who make money from rents, interest or dividends are not penalized. The wealthy capitalist making tens of thousands in retirement by clipping his stock coupons can still receive the maximum Social Security retirement payments.

Hartke has introduced similar legislation in previous Congresses, and helped to raise the earnings limit to its present ceiling of $1500.

REPORT

from the General Secretary-Treasurer

J. EARL FERGUSON

You will recall that one of the primary objectives of Organized labor in the 89th Congress was legalized construction jobsite picketing. This was snatched from the brink of victory by a totally unprecedented action. Former Congressman Adam Clayton Powell withdrew the bill from the list of those coming up for discussion, and thereby singlehandedly eliminated any chance of passage. There was no guarantee, of course, that the bill would have passed, but the measure has been introduced once more and has been given a "fair chance of passing" by Walter L. Mason, Building Trades Legislative Director.

One of the results of the recent AFL-CIO Executive Council meeting was a statement that the Situs Picketing bill (H.R. 100) introduced by Representative Frank Thompson (D-N.J.) should be examined and reported promptly out of the committee. Then the statement says, "we trust the Senate Committee on Labor and Public Welfare and the Senate itself will handle the bill as expeditiously as possible, and thus rectify a long-standing injustice which has been done the building and construction trade unions." The bill would simply restore to the building and construction trades the same rights enjoyed by other unions in a labor dispute. This is an issue of such importance that the General President and myself urge you to follow the progress of the bill, and let your congressman know that you support it. Time is of the essence. Hearings will probably already be underway when you read this.

The most important piece of legislation introduced to date in the 90th Congress, is the President's Social Security measure. On the opposite page we have reported to you why the AFL-CIO considers this bill of urgent importance, and in the article on page 6 you can learn more about what it would mean to you in terms of both benefits and costs. Despite the fact that this bill is considered by most of us to be only a step toward the ultimate goal, as AFL-CIO President George Meany has stated, it faces strong opposition from conservative elements, and it is important to know what the critics are saying in order to counteract the effect of their unfavorable publicity.

The opponents of social progress have launched a campaign to persuade anyone who will listen—and particularly the younger members of organized labor—that you can start up a retirement program of your own that will cost less, and pay more. The way they put it, it sounds convincing: Instead of contributing to social security, you and your boss agree to put a handful of dollars a week, starting at age 21, into a retirement fund. By the time you're 65, you'll have more than if you're drawing present social security benefits, they say.

Fallacy Number One is that this relies on the voluntary contribution of an employer, an act not too predictable without laws to back it up. Fallacy Number Two is the fact that additional social security benefits, like death or permanent disability insurance, are overlooked. Typical figures touted by the opposition say that a 21-year-old worker splitting a $10-a-week contribution with the boss, will have a $48,000 kitty in the bank by age 65. Through social security, considering all the benefits, a young worker is covered by more than $200,000 worth of protection.

Sincerely and fraternally,

J. EARL FERGUSON.
General Secretary-Treasurer.

WHAT'S IN IT FOR ME?

Questions and answers for the man who wants to know how he'll benefit by the proposed new law.

The big push in Congress by Organized Labor this session is for substantial improvements in Social Security. Since the 30's, there have been great strides in this area of joint concern, yet America still lags behind many other nations in the amount of its wealth which is spent on caring for the less fortunate, and the unfortunate. Recognizing the need for better understanding among members of organized labor about what Social Security means, the AFL-CIO Department of Public Relations released the following informative question-and-answer series. We think it deserves your careful attention.

Q: The papers say the President is asking for an "average" 20% increase in Social Security pensions. Who would actually get how much?

A: Every retirement benefit would be raised at least 15%. The biggest proportionate increases would go to the 2½ million retirees who now get only the minimum of $44 a month ($66 for a couple). These minimums would become $70 and $105. Also, the minimums for retirees who were covered for 25 years or more of their working lives would rise to $100 for an individual and $150 for a couple.

The special benefits for persons 72 or older who never qualified for Social Security pensions—a provision adopted along with medicare in 1965—would be $50 rather than $35 a month ($75 instead of $52.50 for a couple). And another 200,000 persons would be added to the 900,000 eligible for such benefits.

For other pensioners—the vast majority—the basic increase would be 15%. Unless you're in one of the categories listed above, that's what you'd get.

Q: Can you tell me in simple terms—not in a lot of tables—how much we're going to pay for this?

A: Let's just look at the next three years. You are now paying 4.4% in Social Security taxes on everything you earn, up to $6,600 a year. Under the present law, the rate will go up to 4.9% in 1969.

The new proposals would raise your tax rate to 5% (instead of 4.9%) in 1969. But before that—next year, in 1968—it would increase the earnings base to $7,800. This would only affect those who earn more than $6,600 a year. It would mean that they would have Social Security taxes deducted for more pay periods until their earnings exceed $7,800. In 1970, the earnings base would be raised again, to $9,000. In the same way, this would affect only those earning more than $7,800.

So much for the big picture. Now for the dollars and cents. Let's say you earn $3.50 an hour—$7,000 a year. In 1968, the President's proposals would cost you an extra $17.60.

If you still earn $7,000 in 1969, the higher tax rate will add another $42. But $35 of this is already scheduled; only $7 would be added by the proposed improvements.

So by 1969, then, you would pay $59.60 more on a $7,000 income than you're paying this year—slightly over $1 a week. But more than half ($35) is coming anyway. The improvements would cost you only $24.60 less than 50c a week.

Here's how to estimate your own added taxes:

If you make less than $6,600 a year, you'll pay 60c more on each $100 you earn, beginning in 1969—a maximum of $39.60 a year. That's the bottom.

If you make more than $9,000 a year, you'll pay $52.80 more in 1968; $99.60 more in 1969 and $159.60 more in 1970. That's the top.

Remember that most of this tax increase is already written into law. The new bill would amount to only 10c on each $100 of earnings.

(The President's proposals include tax rate and earnings-base projections as far ahead as 1989. But since the Social Security System will undoubtedly be reexamined and revised long before then, these long-range figures are not really relevant).

Bear in mind that you're not just paying for a retirement program. You're paying for a Social Security package that includes many other benefits.

Q: You mention "other benefits" in the package. Like what?

A: To start with, there's medicare for the aged. That's part of the package. And as most Americans came to realize during the campaign for medicare, it provides financial protection for the young by meeting the medical costs of the old. (The President proposes to extend medicare benefits to those who are drawing disability payments under Social Security or the Railroad Retirement Act, even though they're under 65—about 1½ million persons, all told. He also suggests some other improvements. But the proposed changes can easily be absorbed by the higher wage base).

Next, there's the disability insurance mentioned above. Social Security benefits are payable to all those covered by the system, regardless of age, if they are totally unable to work for a year or more; a lifetime income if catastrophe strikes. And there are family allowances. A worker who was disabled at an early age could draw as much as $78,000 to support his family, even at present benefit rates.

Highlights of President's Social Security Proposal

- Higher minimums for the long-time contributor.
 - A 15% Hike for those now above the minimum.
 - Extension of Medicare to the Disabled.
 - Better benefits for in and out-patient services.

Then there's protection for your survivors, often overlooked. A lump-sum death benefit, and monthly payments to your widow and dependent children. That's Social Security in the best sense of the word, and it's part of the package, too. A widow with two small children could collect more than $65,000—again, at present levels. Many youngsters have had a chance to finish school and go on to college because Social Security provided a basic income for their fatherless family.

Too little is said about this immensely important aspect of Social Security. Very few young husbands are able to provide against their own sudden death. They are paying the day-to-day costs, buying and furnishing a house, immersed in current problems. Yet the young are also mortal. Social Security prevents a tragedy for one from becoming a disaster for all.

Q: Even so, it looks to me like I'll be paying 5% of everything I earn, by any reasonable estimate, no matter how much my wages go up. Couldn't I buy myself just as much protection from a private insurance company for that kind of money?

A: No. A number of right-wing columnists, and many honest but uninformed persons, are spreading this story, but it just isn't so.

Let's try to put the facts in focus.

A young man of (say) 25, just entering the work-force, could not buy, for the amount he pays in Social Security taxes, a private annuity policy that would pay as much as the present Social Security retirement benefit 40 years later. This will continue to be true, for as taxes rise, so will benefits.

This young man could buy a private policy that would pay about 25% more than present Social Security retirement benefits IF he could add the employer's equal tax payment to his own.

That's a very big IF, and it's not the only one.

To maintain his private policy, the young man would need to have 40 uninterrupted years of earnings high enough to pay the premiums. Social Security, in contrast, absorbs periods of layoff, unemployment and wage cuts. A worker can earn maximum benefits over a 10-year period.

But that's only part of the story.

- The private policy would set a fixed, dollar benefit payable on maturity; Social Security benefits have gone up periodically in the past and are sure to rise in the future.

- The private policy would cover retirement income only, except for some insurance provision in the event of death. It would not include (at this price) any disability coverage, much less medicare. Except for a flat life insurance payment, it would offer nothing to survivors, as described above.

This kind of protection could not be bought at any price, much less twice a worker's Social Security tax. To cite only one reason, Social Security (unlike private insurance companies) does not need to show a profit, and pays its executives by government rather than by executive-suite standards.

There are other considerations:

- As a practical matter, how would a worker latch on to the money the employer now pays in Social Security taxes on his behalf?

- How many young workers would actually set aside the equivalent of Social Security taxes if left to their own devices?

The second point is perhaps the most persuasive. Social Security came into being during the Great Depression, which followed a period of great prosperity. Many of the elderly who most desperately needed old-age pensions in the depression had, during the previous decade, ample or even excessive incomes, from which they could theoretically have made themselves secure for life. Vast numbers thought they had done exactly that, but they were undone by a collapse of the private economy which few thought possible.

Social Security draws on the resources of the whole community—workers and employers alike—to make sure that, in the public interest and for the benefit of all, every employed person has a measure of security in his old age, or in the event of his untimely death or disability. This not only protects the improvident and the unlucky; it protects the prudent against unforeseeable disasters. No private insurance can do that.

My folks have a union pension plan and so do I. Don't most people have something else besides Social Security to protect them?

A: No. If you do, and your folks do, you belong to a very fortunate minority.

Only 15% of those presently retired have any sort of private pension income. The other 85% depend on Social Security alone.

True, the figures will change for the better. About 30% of the present labor force is covered by some sort of private pension arrangement. In another 15 or 20 years, this will show up in the pension statistics. But that will still leave 70% with nothing but Social Security.

Besides, most of the private pension plans aren't all that plush. Those in the highly-organized, high-wage, highly-profitable industries pay substantial benefits. Many others do not.

The plain fact is that the great majority of retirees have no income except Social Security, and—because Social Security benefits are too low—very many of them are desperately poor. Pensions have been raised only twice since 1954. The 1958 increase did not even restore the buying power lost since 1954; and the 1965 increase did not even restore the buying power lost since 1958. The two raises left retirees worse off than they had been a decade earlier.

Philosophy of Labor

by Reverend Joseph L. Donahue, C.S.V.

An Easter Message

On March 26th the Christian world observed the anniversary of the Resurrection of Christ from the dead. In Cathedrals and Churches of all kinds rang out the glad alleluias, proclaiming the rejoicing of human hearts at the triumph of life over death.

Strange and wonderful is the power that man possesses. Born of the earth and earth-bound, he still soars inevitably towards heaven. Though man should possess the kingdoms of the world and the glory of them he remains unsatisfied unless at the same time his soul is attuned and united to the Infinite.

It was the strange contradiction between the material and the spiritual, between the earthly and the heavenly, that Christ came on earth to reconcile. The world and the people of the world always have been worldly. When Christ came into their midst, they received Him not. They were not interested — except for a few illuminated souls—in one who constantly proclaimed “My Kingdom is not of this World,” who preached the fatherhood of God and the brotherhood of man.

What could earth-bound worldlings make of such strange and apparently foolish doctrines as those of the Sermon on the Mount? For His unworldly and apparently foolish doctrines Christ was condemned to death. This vain pretender who had manifested power but refused to exercise it for the ends and purpose of the world died, apparently a failure, and the Roman Empire set its guards outside the tomb to prevent His disciples stealing the body. On the third day, however, He rose again from the dead. It was triumphant proof of the truth of his own paradox that “he that shall lose his life shall find it.” Where can the world find such triumphant and overwhelming proof of the validity of its own wisdom as this proof of the truth of the folly of the Cross? All the accumulated experience of centuries goes to prove the same thing. “Those that seek their lives lose them.” Men devote themselves to the mad pursuit of wealth. A few emerge with more than the rest of their fellow beings, but they leave behind them broken and ruined lives, and poverty, want, and misery for millions of others less successful than themselves.

The fundamental reason for the instability of the world, and the lack of happiness and right human life, has been brought about because men have followed the wisdom of the world and rejected the worship of God. If the world began to seek first “the kingdom of God and His Justice” then “all these things would be added unto it.” They toil and spin and gather into barns, and when they have piled up plenty the Angel of Death comes and says to them “This day your soul shall be required of you.”

The world shrinks from the Cross of self-denial, of suffering and want, although it is only by the Cross that life can be attained. Beyond the Cross-Crowned hill of Calvary lies the triumph of the Resurrection. Only by carrying the cross of self denial, of indifference regarding this world's goods, of love and charity, can the world attain the mount of heavenly wisdom beyond which lies full and perfect life.

A CHURCH WITH FLOOR TO CEILING CARPETS

In Rockville, Maryland, a few miles out of Washington, D. C., a modest-size Catholic church has put the skill and materials of the lather to work in wonderful new ways.

On the interior perimeter wall, for example, there is an acoustical control surface ingeniously constructed of perforated rocklath covered with carpeting. "It's the only church that I know of with floor to ceiling carpets," muses the architect, Donald Johnson, Jr., Johnson and Boutin. The firm has offices in Rockville, Maryland and Washington, D. C.

In a mechanical room, which had to be placed adjacent to the sanctuary, objectionable noises are sealed off from the nave by two coats of sanded plaster, covered with a low density insulating material. To keep the soft final sound-deadening coat from being damaged through normal wear, it was given the mechanical protection of expanded metal lath over the insulation. The chances are good that this is the only building in the world with a lath finish coat!

Many other aspects of the St. Mary's Catholic Church are remarkable. Designed to seat just over 850, it is one of the new generation of Catholic churches which conform architecturally to the intent of the new Catholic liturgy. One of the goals of the changes in the liturgy is to help the parishioners take a more active role in the service. It would be difficult to feel set apart in St. Mary's.

It is like a theater-in-the-round, as are a number of the new catholic churches. The sanctuary with the altar is in the middle of the church, and the 12-sided dome above draws the entire congregation into the sanctuary. The award-winning architects have designed a number of suburban churches in the Washington and Maryland areas, and a few of these have been designed in a similar way.

The Church is lath and plaster throughout, although there were other techniques that would have served. Mr. Johnson says that with the unusual shape of the church, "the versatility of metal lath and plaster provided the most economical design for the interior finish, in keeping with the aesthetic requirements." The architects were confronted with an acoustical problem which was resolved with the use of acoustically transparent material: in conjunction with acoustical plaster; in the dome, the acoustically transparent material. It permits sound not trapped by the acoustical plaster to pass right through, instead of being reflected back through the plaster to the interior of the church. In the perimeter walls, of course, the perforated rocklath performs the same function.

Lathing foreman on the job was Wilbur Miller, Local No. 9, Washington, who has twice won awards for his outstanding craftsmanship from the Washington Building Congress. Both the architect and the lathing and plastering contractor give Brother Miller much of the credit for the success of the complex job. Other members of Local 9 on the job were: William Goodacre. James McDermott, Arthur Sidney (apprentice). Homer Sloper, and William Zollard. The lathing work was contracted to Rubino and Farris of Washington, specialists in this kind of work.

Mr. Farris notes that the dome ceiling was an "extremely difficult" job. It is a 12-sided dome, with an elliptical cross-section, and interior ceiling was completely suspended. In addition, provision was made for as much as one inch of expansion and contraction in the dome. Through the use of plaster stops and joint casting beads, the segments of the suspended dome ceiling were isolated from the furring and lathing required for the main structural ribs.

There were four basic areas in the church: the ambulatory, or perimeter; the nave, the sanctuary itself, and the small, or Lady chapel, which seats 50.

Intersecting the dome of the nave, which rises to 40 feet, and is surmounted by a 110 foot spire and bell tower, are 8 dormers, barrel vault sections which are elliptical in cross-section. Into each one will be fitted a stained glass window 32 feet wide and 30 feet high.

The sanctuary, the focal point of the nave, is flanked by elliptical arches and walls to provide distinct areas for the choir and the altar boys.

The main dome consists of 2" channels spaced 24" on center, with cross-furring of $\frac{3}{4}$ inch pencil rod to form the contours. 12 inches on center, in the dormers, the usual practice was reversed. $\frac{3}{4}$ furring channels were spaced 16 inches on center vertically, attached to adjustable wall furring brackets nailed to the wood decking. The furring was 36 inches on center horizontally. Metal lath was then tied to the furring channels, and acoustical plaster of varying thickness applied. This was, says architect Johnson, to get the curves needed.

Material for the job, from channels to acoustical plaster, was provided by U.S. Gypsum. There was a total of about 3,000 square yards of metal lath involved, and the entire church, exclusive of furnishings, cost about $650,000.

A GOLD NIPPER FOR CHICAGO ARCHITECT RONALD DIRSMITH

Local 74 Also Honors His Work

The Lathing Foundation of Chicago recently announced the award of its first Gold Nipper, a citation set up to single out those architects in the Chicago areas who demonstrate unusually creative architectural ability.

The recipient of the first award, is Ronald Lee Dirsmith, a licensed Architect for 12 years. Almost all of his career he has been in practice for himself. A member of the American Institute of Architects, Mr. Dirsmith was born and raised in Chicago, received his BS at the University of Illinois and was awarded a fellowship in 1959 and 1960 which permitted him to study and tour in Europe. He lived for a while in Rome.

He has been chief architect on everything from shoe stores and office buildings to synagogues, and they are reported to be all lath and plaster. Right now Mr. Dirsmith is working on the design for the North Shore Unitarian Church in Deerfield, Illinois, which feature 30-foot high lath and plaster walls.

Another current job of architect Dirsmith is the new offices for Playboy magazine in the Palmolive Building, Chicago. We hear that this is a lather's dream come true—not because of the bunnies that will inhabit the structure—but because it involves everything from base beads, cove, and sculptured domed ceilings to recessed light openings.

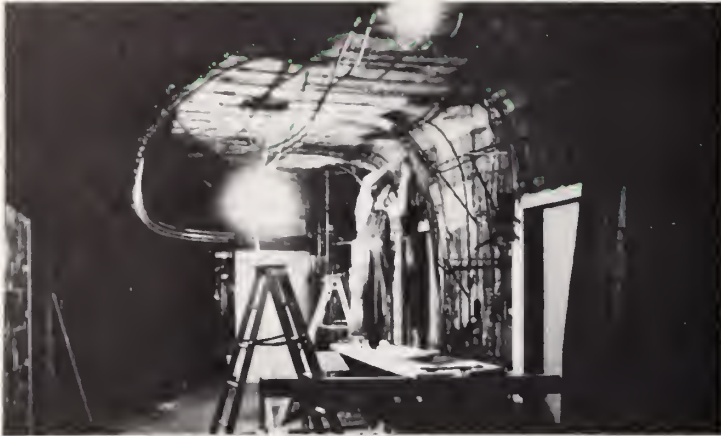

Mr. Dirsmith also received recognition from Local No. 74, in special ceremonies during a December meeting. More than 250 journeymen lathers watched while architect Dirsmith was presented with an Honorary Gold Membership card by Local 74 President James P. Donahue.

Lone Star State Council Resolution

RESOLUTION

The growth and prosperity of any organization must necessarily depend upon the quality of its leadership. The stature of its image among other fellow labor organizations is judged by the background and experience of its chief executive, and

WHEREAS: General President Sal Maso has served in places of the utmost responsibility which served as a challenge to his ability as an organizer; lecturer; arbitrator and administrator, and

WHEREAS: Our General President has enjoyed the acquaintance of former Presidents, Roosevelt, Truman, Eisenhower, and of the present occupier of the highest office in our land; having served on several important committees in the administration of each, and

WHEREAS: The interest of the Journeyman Lather has come first—has manifested itself in his long years of continuous and dedicated services to the good and welfare of the entire membership of the Lathers International Union, and

THEREFORE, NOW BE IT RESOLVED:

That the Lone Star State Council of Lathers meeting in executive session at the Lamplighter Motor Inn, Dallas Texas this 25th day of February 1967 does hereby endorse our General President Sal Maso for re-election to the office of General President of the Wood, Wire and Metal Lathers International Union at the Convention to be held at the Americana Hotel, Bal Harbour, Florida on September 11-15, 1967.

BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED:

That the true copy of this Resolution be forwarded to the General President for publication in the Lather.

McCormick Place Fire

The Destruction Stops At the Lath and Plaster

When the cleanup crews moved into the ruins of the giant McCormick Place convention center following the recent $300 million fire, they found the building a tangled jungle of concrete, reinforcing steel, and crumpled metal—until they got to the Arie Crown Theater. This structure, a part of the great convention and exposition center, was virtually unscratched despite its proximity to the fire. There was so little damage, in fact, that Loyola University plans to hold graduation exercises there.

Damage in the theater was restricted to that caused by water and smoke because of the lath and plaster used in its construction. It was completely fireproofed, unlike the remainder of the complex. At the time that the McCormick Place and the Arie Crown Theater were built, the lath and one-inch sand plaster job that made it fireproof was one of the largest ever handled in Chicago. The contractor was the William A. Duguid Company.

The rest of McCormick Place was demolished because at the time it was built the code of the city of Chicago required no fireproofing. The ceiling system steelwork was exposed and unprotected. If the fire had occurred during normal business hours, the scope of the tragedy would have been greatly increased, and it might have become the single worst fire tragedy of all time. During the week of the fire there was a convention in session, and much of the estimated $300 million loss is accounted for by the displays and equipment in the hall. The price of the hall and theater itself was about $35 million.

The exterior construction of the theater is steel studs, metal lath and $\frac{3}{4}$ inch gypsum plaster with a sand finish. The entrance way was plaster on cinder block, and the columns in the main hall, enclosing the heating and ventilating system, are fireproofed and sealed. All the metal was furred, and covered with metal lath before the finish sand coat.

Numerous recommendations have been made to prevent such catastrophic financial loss and the potential toll of human life in the future. The citizens of the City of Chicago are losing countless thousands of dollars each day because one of their commercial attractions has been put out of action. Some have suggested mandatory requirements for sprinklers, but the benefits of lath and plaster have been pointed out by Thomas Moses, Manager of Building Code Services of the Gypsum Association, to the architectural firm charged with the restoration and expansion of McCormick Place. "No public mention has been made," Moses wrote, "on the advantages of using gypsum for membrane fireproofing of the structural system. I would like to call to your attention the advantages of gypsum for this purpose, and point out how gypsum protection could be an asset to the public in such a project.

The Heat's On In Government For Better U.S. Fire Safety

A number of proposals aimed at reducing the U. S. fire toll have been introduced in the 90th Congress. One, a joint resolution by Senator John Sparkman (D-Ala.) proposes the creation of a Presidential Commission on fire prevention and control, to focus public attention on our relatively poor record, and to unearth needed information.

Another bill, introduced in the Senate by Senator Warren G. Magnuson (D-Wash.) is the Administration's bill, substantially the same in intent as the others. This bill (S. 1124) would allocate $10 million to the Commerce Department to research a fire safety program, gather data, provide fire safety programs, and institute training research and related activities.

U. S. fire fatality rate is far from the best in the world, points out Sparkman and Rep. George P. Miller (D-Calif.), who has also introduced a similar bill. In 1965, 12,000 Americans lost their lives in fires, and about $1.76 billion in property losses, not including such items as the cost of municipal fire protection, research, education and training, medical costs related to fires, and the loss of production and income suffered as a result of fires. The total, including these items, would reach about $5 billion a year, the National Fire Protection Association says.

The fire death rate in the United States is six times greater than that in Japan; four times higher than the United Kingdom.

The Government is increasingly interested and concerned with the fire situation. It announced in February the appointment of a fire research expert to the Institute of Applied Technology at the Bureau of Standards. His job will be to serve as the Executive Secretary of the recently-formed Interagency Fire Research Committee, and assist in long-range program planning of research in this field.

The Interagency Fire Research Committee was organized by the Department of Commerce on request of the President's Office of Science and Technology, which seems to be taking a more and more active role in the course of Government activity. Although the Committee's concern is with the U. S. as a whole, the government itself suffers fire losses amounting to 262 deaths and $236 million in property in 1965.

Congressman George Brown (D-Cal.) suggests that any legislation passed to correct the nation's fire safety deficiencies should include programs for education of the public as well as the firefighters. Brown would teach the public about safety techniques and fire hazards. He thinks most of the programs required could be carried out through grants to state and local governments as well as public and non-profit institutions.

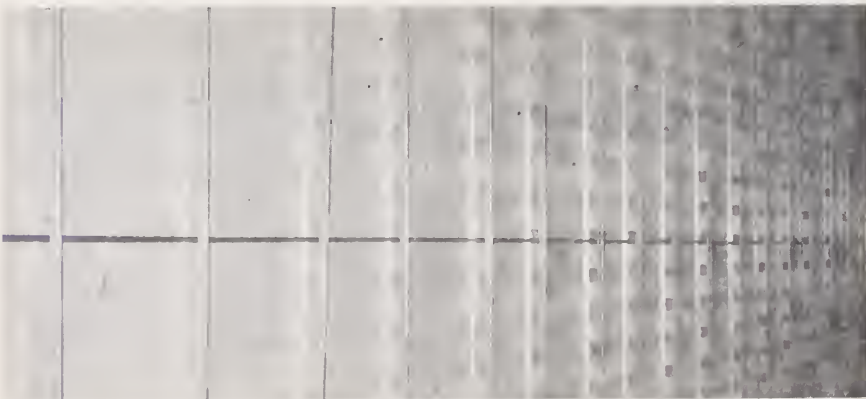

Although there are no extensive statistics available to show the importance of lath and plaster construction to fire safety, there is no doubt that if lath and plaster had been used exclusively, the toll from fires would have been greatly reduced.

Local 30 Lathers Install Sheetrock

In a recent job on the Delco Building, Kettering, Ohio, members of Local 30 installed sheetrock (gypsum board) to DW furring as a base for acoustical tile. In the picture above, Brothers Herman and Gene Locke screw on 4 x 8 sheetrock, 3/8 inch thick. Below, Donn studs erected by lathers on the job. The opposite side has 16 inch x 4 foot rock lath nailed on with Jackson nails.

Federal Bargaining Law

Some 200,000 Canadian federal employees were given the right to collective bargaining — including the right to strike—as a result of three bills passed by the House of Commons.

The first, the Public Service Staff Relations Act, extends the right of bargaining to civil servants at the national level except for some areas where the government retained control—such as promotions and seniority rules for layoffs.

A second measure, the Public Service Employment Act, repeals and replaces the old Civil Service Act and establishes a Public Service Commission to succeed the Civil Service Commission. The new commission's primary responsibility remains in the areas of recruitment and promotion.

The third bill amends the Financial Administration Act to make the Treasury Board the employer bargaining agent for all federal departments and agencies except for a scattering of semi-autonomous bodies such as the National Film Board.

Each bargaining unit is authorized at the start of negotiations for a contract to make a choice between the right to strike and the right to final and binding arbitration of any issues that cannot be settled at the bargaining table. The choice remains in effect until the start of bargaining for the following contract.

Nearly 150,000 of the 200,000 federal civil servants are represented by affiliates of the Canadian Labor Congress. The largest are the Public Service Alliance, which joined the CLC only recently, and the Postal Employees.

The legislation specifies that unions representing operations workers — general labor, crafts and postal groups — conclude their bargaining by Mar. 31, but Treasury Board spokesmen were doubtful that schedule could be met.

The act establishing a bargaining system also permits limited participation in politics for civil servants—a clause labor-backed New Democratic Party members in Parliament criticized as needing further definition of political rights. NDP Leader T. C. Douglas also attacked provision allowing the cabinet to suspend or discharge an employee for the safety and security of the state. He charged the measure turned the cabinet into a kangaroo court that would serve as judge, jury and executor.

The benefits of international unions to the general public are also large, the Crispo study finds. He emphasizes that the moderating influence of international unions “has tended to lessen industrial conflict” and then focuses on “the part international unions have played in imbuing Canadians with the mass-consumption psychology which serves so effectively to spur on both the Canadian and the American economies.”

Professor Crispo adds significantly that the unions Canadian and U.S. workers share “have acted as a goad and forced employers to strive for every higher levels of efficiency.”

After reassessing all the evidence, the Crispo study concludes that the international unions have benefited Canadian workers, Canadian employers and the Canadian public. He does not develop the point but it is clearly implied that U.S. workers, employers and the public have similarly benefited.

More Housing

Housing is one of the greatest social challenges facing the Canadian people, the Canadian Labour Congress said in its annual submission to the federal government.

“Home building has not even kept pace with the growth of population”, the CLC said. It was estimated that at least 170,000 housing unit starts a year were needed to even maintain present living standards; but 1966 starts were expected to be less than 130,000. Further, the drop in starts occurred mainly in rental housing where the greatest need existed. The situation was particularly acute because the fastest growing group in Canada was in the 20 to 24 year age group who were forming new families and required housing.

The CLC said the great need was for the government to make funds available for the construction of housing for lower and middle income groups. Experience indicated that government action in increasing the National Housing Act interest rate to 7¼ per cent had failed to meet this need.

There should be vast expansion of the public housing program and provinces should be encouraged to participate to a much greater degree, the CLC said.

1967: Plenty Of Action for Election Buffs

Maybe you've just caught your breath from the 1966 elections. Or maybe you're already agonizing over 1968.

But don't forget: There is plenty of action for election buffs in 1967.

Thousands of offices ranging from governor to dogcatcher will be up for grabs this year. Heading the list are two governorships, four state legislatures and hundreds of mayoral races across the country.

Wherever you live, there's probably at least an important local election going on.

Chief statewide races will be in Kentucky and Mississippi where governorships will change.

Both states now are led by Democrats. The Republicans' best chance for a pickup will be in Kentucky. The last Kentucky GOP governor left office in 1947. Incumbent Gov. Edward T. Breathitt (D) is barred from a second consecutive term.

In Mississippi, former Gov. Ross Barnett (D 1960-64), a hard-line segregationist, has entered the Democratic primary. Gene A. Triggs (D), director of the state agricultural and industrial board, and William Winter (D), state treasurer—both more moderate on racial issues—are expected to give Barnett his strongest primary competition.

The two leading prospective Republican candidates in the long Democratic-dominated state are Ruble L. Phillips, who received 38.1 percent of the vote against outgoing Gov. Paul B. Johnson (D) in 1963, and former U.S. Rep. Prentiss Walker (R 1965-67), who lost a 1966 U.S. Senate contest with Sen. James O. Eastland (D). Both are hard-line segregationists.

Voters in Kentucky, Mississippi, New Jersey, Virginia and possibly Florida will elect new legislatures in 1967. Whether Florida must elect a new legislature depends on the forthcoming decision of a three-judge federal court considering the state's latest reapportionment efforts. Democrats hold overwhelming control of both houses in all five states.

Major cities including Baltimore, Boston, Chicago, Cleveland, Dallas, Denver, Houston, Memphis, Philadelphia and San Francisco will elect mayors in 1967. Political interest will probably center on contests in Baltimore, Boston, Chicago, Cleveland and Philadelphia.

The only Republican incumbent in these five cities is Baltimore's Theodore R. McKeldin, a moderate two-term former Maryland governor. But McKeldin has indicated that he will retire, probably clearing the way for the election of City Council President Thomas D'Alesandro III (D), son of a former mayor.

In Boston, Mayor John F. Collins (D), unsuccessful in his 1966 bid for the Democratic Senatorial nomination, likely will face strong opposition for another term. Mrs. Louise Day Hicks, president of the Boston School Committee who grabbed national attention through bitter opposition to school busing to end de facto segregation, has all but announced her candidacy. Other possible candidates include President Kennedy's former Appointments Secretary, Kenneth O'Donnell, who lost a 1966 bid for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination, and Massachusetts Secretary of State Kevin H. White (D).

John L. Waner (R), 52, a wealthy heating and air conditioning contractor, will test Chicago Mayor Richard Daley (D), who is seeking a fourth four-year term.

In Cleveland, Mayor Ralph Locher (D) again faces re-election. In 1965, Locher barely won another term over state Rep. Carl B. Stokes (D), a Negro.

Mayor James H. J. Tate (D) of Philadelphia plans to seek re-election but will face strong primary opposition from City Controller Alexander Hemphill.

Republicans have several potential candidates in Philadelphia. Possibly the strongest GOP candidate would be District Attorney Arlen Specter, who ended the Democrats' long hold on city elective jobs in 1965.

Publication in 1906 of "A LIVING WAGE"

by Rev. John A. Ryan

Articles, speeches and books have played important roles in the progress of labor in bettering wages, hours and conditions. In this respected tradition a book by a Catholic clergyman and sociologist played an important part more than a half a century ago.

The book was "A Living Wage" and the author was the Reverend John A. Ryan. This book, first published in 1906, was called a "powerful indictment of any system that provided less than a living wage." Father Ryan advocated standards of earnings which would allow a family adequate food, clothing and shelter for health and comfort. He recommended funds for "holiday clothes" so working people could participate in church, lodge and organization work with dignity.

He advocated at least five rooms as housing and education for children up to 16 years of age as a minimum and income enabling a wife and mother to give all of her time to her family. He also thought working people should have enough income to take care of illness, savings for old age, insurance, recreational and spiritual needs.

This book had a strong impact in its time and its author made a profound impression through his intellectual and sociological leadership in the cause of working people. The book well deserves to be known as a landmark in the forward march of labor.

It's that time of the year again—leaves burst forth in clean, fresh finery to fill up the space between winter-scarred branches—cold water from the still-melting snows in the highlands filling to brimming the lakes and rivers and streams—the smell of damp earth being pushed and tugged by the remnants of the March winds. It's May. Time to remember Mother, our war dead, and that the world isn't such a bad place, after all.

REPORT

from the General President

SAL MASO

In behalf of our efforts to protect our work jurisdiction, attorneys for the LIU filed an exhaustive brief before the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia Circuit Court in February. This Brief sets forth our arguments why the Joint Board, to which the dispute was originally carried, should not have referred the issue to the Hearings Panel, and why the 1903 agreement of record in the green book and the 1920 decision, giving Lathers jurisdiction over light iron work for ceilings systems, are still valid today and cannot be set aside by any tribunal without the consent of both parties.

The National Joint Board and the Hearings Panel violated the agreement to which they owe their very existence, for the 1965 plan definitely provides a bar to the reallocation of jurisdiction on a national basis in the face of an existing agreement or decision of record. You'll remember that on January 26, 1967, following an adverse decision by the Circuit Court, the appeals court recognized the merit of our position and granted a preliminary injunction staying the decision of the lower court pending our appeal. In response to this opportunity the brief below was prepared and submitted.

The Brief recaps the start, in 1928, of Carpenter violations based on the claim that the 1903 agreement was "temporary" since it had not been approved by the 1904 convention of the Carpenters, and had been included in the agreements of record of the Building Trades Department at a time when the Carpenters were not members.

Our arguments, set forth many times before, are that the 1903 agreement was, in fact, approved by the Carpenters Convention, and any question still remaining about the validity of the agreement had been settled by subsequent decisions of the Building Trades Department, all of which uphold the Lathers position. In 1965, the historic precedents that had been followed by the Building Trades Department were scrapped by the Joint Board, and the Joint Board was empowered to make decisions contrary to written agreements and decisions of record in areas where established trade practice differed. Shortly afterward, the Joint Board decided a case against the Lathers, and when we appealed, the Appeals Board passed the issue back to the Joint Board for referral to the Hearings Panel. The Joint Board wrote in its letter of referral that there was no "recognized" decision or agreement of record governing the dispute. From that time on, the Joint Board has denied our repeated requests for a hearing.

The Hearings Panel, in turn, upheld the National Joint Board's position that there was no agreement of record governing the question of ceiling systems, and according to the Attorney for the Hearings Panel, adopted the Carpenters contention that the 1903 agreement was temporary and consequently not valid today.

Summarized briefly, our arguments are that, under the law, neither the Joint Board nor the Hearings Panel have the power to decide that the 1903 agreement or the 1920 decision are not valid—that the arbitration machinery set up by the Plan for the Settlement of Jurisdictional Disputes is not authorized to set up its own standards for reallocating craft jurisdiction.

Another justification cited by the Hearings Panel for deciding against the Lathers was the fact that acoustical ceiling systems have been installed in many areas of the country by Carpenters. This contention, of course, is dismissed by the fact that area practice can be applied on job decisions but cannot remove from the plan the requirement that existing agreements and decisions of record are a bar to the reallocation of jurisdiction on a national basis. In the brief, our attorneys noted, "A decision on a national basis, on ceiling systems, has no effect and no evident purpose, other than to enrich Carpenters and carpenter contractors at the expense of Lathers and lather contractors."

I urge you to read this brief in full. It sets out clearly the whole dispute, and equally clarifies our entire position.

I would, at this time, like to bring to your attention the fact that the 12th National Legislative Conference of the Building and Construction Trades Department will be held this June 12 through June 15 at the Washington-Hilton Hotel. This event is the major legislative planning session for the building trades, and one which interests us all. I urge all local Secretaries and Business Agents and officers of state and district councils to give this event the widest possible publicity.

This year, there are several legislative measures that will receive attention, and among them is situs picketing, which has already been the subject of hearings in Congress. Labor Secretary Willard Wirtz delivered the first testimony on the bill in the House in early April, and said it is "long overdue." Department Head C. J. Haggerty pointed out that the construction crafts were only asking for the rights of "free citizens" to combat unfair employers. Progress on this legislation, and efforts to improve its chance of passage, will likely be considered during the Conference. Registration is urged on Sunday, June 11, because the conference work beginning Monday, June 12, will be a full day session.

We have also received notification from the National Maritime Union that there is a modern, attractive, 100 per cent union cruise ship which will begin routine operations in the Caribbean December 1.

We regret that the luxurious S/S ATLANTIC, an American Export-Isbrandtsen Lines vessel, will not be operating during our Miami Convention. It sails from Port Everglades, Florida, to places like St. Thomas, San Juan and Martinique. It is American-built, American-registered, and operated with a union crew from Captain to mess-boy under the direct supervision of U. S. Coast Guard Safety Standards. I urge you, if you're taking a winter vacation in the Caribbean area, to cruise 100% union, 100% American and 100% safe.

Sincerely and fraternally,

Sal Maso

Nos. 20, 716; 20, 727

BRIEF FOR APPELLANTS STATEMENT OF QUESTIONS PRESENTED

1. Whether the Joint Board and the Hearings Panel violated their obligation to be bound, in administering Section 5, Article III, by the contracting parties' explicit and unequivocal declaration in the 1965 Plan that the 1903 agreement and 1920 decision are "recognized under the provisions of the Constitution of the * * * Department, are "of record" and are "operative," by refusing to "recognize" the agreement and decision for reasons which the Department had considered and rejected.

2. Whether the 1903 agreement and 1920 decision, as a matter of law, bar reallocation by national decision of jurisdiction over installation of light iron work in ceiling systems.

3. Whether the terms of the Plan and the Department Constitution bar judicial determination of the aforesaid questions.

JURISDICTIONAL STATEMENT

This is a suit, predicated upon Section 301 of the Labor Management Relations Act, 1947, 61 Stat. 156, 29 U.S.C.A. § 185, to enforce a collective bargaining contract known as the "Plan for Settling Jurisdictional Disputes Nationally and Locally," hereinafter referred to as the Plan (Comp., Exh. 1, "Green Book," Tab 3). The contracting parties are, on one side, the Building and Construction Trades Department, AFL-CIO (hereinafter referred to as the Department), a federation of labor organizations in the building trades, including appellant Lathers Union and appellee Carpenters Union, and, on the other, various employer associations in the building and construction industry (ibid., p. 10). The Plan establishes various rights and duties, procedures and tribunals for resolution of jurisdictional disputes. Appellee Joint Board and appellee Hearings Panel are arbitration tribunals established by the Plan (ibid., Art. II, Sec. 1, pp. 1-4; Art. III, Sec. 4, p. 8).

In essence, the complaints charge that the Joint Board and the Hearings Panel, by disregarding and, in effect, obliterating certain plain terms of the Plan, violated Lathers' immunity thereunder to compulsory reallocation by national decision of jurisdiction over installation of light iron work in ceiling systems.

Such claims are plainly within the purview of Section 301, for Congress deliberately made jurisdictional dispute agreements, like intra-union "no raiding" agreements and union constitutions, judicially enforceable,¹ and charged federal courts to prevent arbitrators from usurping authority by rewriting agreements blatantly or subtly under the guise of interpretation and application.² Accordingly, the district court had jurisdiction under Section 301.

This Court has jurisdiction of the appeal from the final judgment of the District Court entered January 18, 1967, granting defendants' motion for summary judgment and dismissing the complaint, under 28 U.S.C.A. §1291. The case is before the Court upon expedited appeal, pursuant to its order of January 27, 1967,³ staying, pending appeal, "the effective date of the Decision of the Hearings Panel of August 24, 1966."

STATEMENT OF THE CASE

As found by the court below, the August 24, 1966, national decision of the Hearings Panel (Supp. Comp., Exh. 22, par. 4, pp. 20-21, Tab 28), allocates "the bulk" of light iron work on ceilings systems to Carpenters. It requires employers uniformly, throughout the United States, to assign that work on contracts let after its effective date to Carpenters, membership 760,000,⁴ instead of Lathers, membership 16,200.⁵ Appellants contend that this is a reallocation of jurisdiction between Lathers and Carpenters which cannot lawfully be accomplished under the Plan without consent by arbitrators on a national basis. The pertinent facts are as follows:

A. Status and Coverage of the 1903 Agreement and 1920 Decision

The Plan is grounded upon and incorporates certain historic jurisdictional agreements and decisions which are "recognized under the provisions of the Constitution of the * * * Department" (Green Book, Art. III, Sec. 1(c), pp. 6, 11-142, Tab 3). Recognition is conferred in the Preamble of the Constitution, as revised in 1957, and amended in 1965 (Comp., Exh. 3, pp. 2-3, Tab 4; Additional Aff. of Maso, p. 2, Tab 46). Agreements and decisions so recognized are known as decisions and agreements "of record" (Green Book, Art. III, Sec. 1(a), (c), p. 6). These are "compiled in the 'Green Book' published by the * * * Department" (Comp., Exh. 4, "Blue Book," p. 3, par. 3(a), Tab 5). The Plan declares that agreements and decisions "as set forth in the Green Book" (Green Book, Art. III, Sec. 1(a)), "ARE HELD TO BE OPERATIVE BY THE BUILDING AND CONSTRUCTION TRADES DEPARTMENT" (Green Book, p. 11).

A 1908 agreement "of record" (Green Book, p. 17, Tab 3) between appellant Lathers Union and appellee Carpenters Union allocates jurisdiction on the basis of the character of the components being installed; wood to Carpenters, light iron to Lathers. This agreement, although temporary on its face, historically has been and currently is "HELD TO BE OPERATIVE BY THE * * * DEPARTMENT" (Supplemental Aff. of Maso, pp. 1-2, Tab 39). A 1920 decision "of record" (Green Book, p. 87), binding upon all affiliated unions,⁶ predicated upon an award of the Denver Convention of the Department adopted November, 1908, allots inter alia, "metallic lathing of all descriptions" to Lathers.

The 1903 agreement and 1920 decision unambiguously on their face cover, inter alia, all light iron work on ceiling systems, i.e., installation of furring, brackets, clips, hangers, etc. The Department has historically recognized their comprehensive coverage. In 1917, the President of the Department declared "the suspension of ceilings to receive iron or metal lath is properly the jurisdiction" of the Lathers and "is not Carpenters' work but Lathers" (Aff. Maso, Exh. 8, Tab 11).

The art of suspending ceilings from roof structures by light iron hangings and furring has not changed in well over half a century. Such changes as have occurred have involved merely the style or shape of the metal components, not their installation. These style changes in no way altered the character of that work (Maso Supp. Aff., pp. 5-6, Exhs. 14-16, Tabs 39-40; Aff. of Downey, Sept. 28, 1966, pp. 4-5, Tab 29; Aff. of Eby, pp. 6-8, Tab 35).

In the late 1920's acoustical tile began to be substituted for plaster as the predominant finish for ceiling systems (Celotex agreement, pp. 17-19, Green Book; Downey Aff., Nov. 2, 1966, App. A, decision (f), Tab 36). This substitution involved replacement of plasterers by carpenters for the work of installing the finish, but it did not involve any change in the lathing function, that is, in the work of installing the light iron components to receive the backboard or acoustical tile finish (ibid.; Aff. of Eby, Oct. 31, 1966, pp. 6-8, Tab 35; Maso Supp. Aff., Exhs. 17-19, Tabs 39, 40).

Nevertheless, beginning in 1928, appellee Carpenters "refused to recognize the validity of the 1903 agreement" (Statement of Points and Authorities in Support of Defendants' Motion for Summary Judgment, p. 4, Tab 34). Carpenters asserted that it was a "temporary" agreement; that it had not been approved at the Carpenters' 1904 Convention and that it had been improperly included among the agreements of record published by the Department at a time when Carpenters was not a member of the Department (Aff. Maso, Exh. 11(5), Tab 12; Exh. 12(3), Tab 13; Exh. 13(1), Tab 14. Lathers protested the "belated notification"; asserted that the agreement had been approved by the Carpenters' convention and added that "questions involved in the agreement were taken care of by subsequent decisions of the Building Trades Department and the American Federation of Labor" (Maso Aff., Exh. 13(2), Tab 14).

On February 8, 1937, Carpenters presented their claim to the Building Trades Department, demanding that it delete the 1903 agreement from the record (Maso Aff., Exh. 14(1), Tab 15):

"That agreement was made pending approval of the next convention of the Carpenters to be held in 1904. It was not approved by our convention in 1904, so it then and there ended."

"As no such agreement exists, I ask that it be eliminated from your proceedings."

The Department replied on February 10, 1937, that Carpenters had by silence waived any objection to inclusion of the 1903 agreement in the record, and that it was a "legal agreement" (Maso Aff., Exh. 14(2), Tab 15). On January 17, 1939, the President of the Department declared that the 1903 agreement "is recognized by the Building and Construction Trades Department" (Maso Aff., Exh. 15, Tab 16). On June 23, 1941, he declared that the agreement entered into on June 14, 1903, "has been in full force and effect since that time and is the guide for the Department" (Maso Aff., Exh. 16(2), Tab 17).

On April 12, 1951, Carpenters gave notice of "cancellation" of the agreement, stating: "The National Joint Board * * * will be immediately notified to that effect and [we] will request deletion of the temporary agreement from the November 1, 1950, booklet of Decisions and Agreements" (Maso Aff., Exh. 19(1), Tab 20). However, the Department did not delete the agreement. Instead, it was reprinted in subsequent editions of the Green Book (Maso Supp. Aff., pp. 1-2, Tab 39). On March 14, 1961, Carpenters protested that the "agreement must not be included in the next printing" and that Carpenters "will not accept nor recognize any decisions that are given on the basis of this document" (Maso Aff., Exh. 23, Tab 24). The Department republished the agreement in all later editions, i.e., 1962, 1963 and 1965 (ibid.).

The minutes of the Joint Negotiating Committee which drafted the 1965 amendments to the Plan (p. 15, infra), do not show that appellee Carpenters presented to the Committee its demand for deletion of the 1903 agreement from the Green Book, although Carpenters' President Hutcheson was a member (Supp. Aff., Maso, Exhs. 1-8, Tab 39). Nor do Convention records reveal that Carpenters ever presented their demand for deletion to a Department Convention.

As late as September 27, 1957, the Joint Board continued to honor the Department's recognition of the 1903 agreement (Maso Aff., Exh. 21(1), Tab 22), and continued to apply that agreement and the 1920 decision to disputes over installation of light iron work in ceiling systems designed for acoustical tile as well as plaster finish (Maso Aff., Exh. 17 (1), (2), (3), Tab 18; Exh. 20 (1), Tab 21; Exh. 20 (2), (3), Tab 21; Maso Add. Aff., p. 11, Exh. 1-6, Tab 46).⁷

⁷ The statement in the Hearings Panel decision of April 4, 1966 (Comp., Exh. 19, pp. 11-12, Tab 6), that "The National Joint Board in

From approximately 1957 on, however, the National Joint Board, in job decisions, approved contractor assignments of light iron work to Carpenters in the teeth of the Department's continued recognition of the 1903 agreement and 1920 decision. In a Statement of Points and Authorities below (Tab 41, pp. 1-2), appellees Dunlap, et al., say:

"On August 14, 1959, the then Chairman of the National Joint Board, Mr. R. J. Mitchell, advised President Richard J. Gray of the Building and Construction Trades Department of the reason for the position of the Joint Board with respect to the agreement appearing on Page 17 of the Green Book. Mr. Mitchell stated:

"This agreement was not approved at the Carpenters' convention of September 19, 1904, and copies of correspondence between the Carpenters and the Lathers which are in the files of the National Joint Board, confirm the abrogation of this agreement." (Maso Aff., Exh. 22, p. 1, Tab 23).

In major metropolitan centers such as New York and Chicago, local boards operating pursuant to Article IV of the Plan (Green Book, p. 9), at all times honored the Department's recognition of the 1903 agreement, and to this day apply the 1903 agreement and 1920 decision in accordance with their terms. In these areas the light iron work allocated to Carpenters by the Hearings Panel decision of August 24, 1966, has always been and now is assigned by employing contractors to Lathers, and performed by them without jurisdictional disputes (Aff. of Downey, pp. 1-4, 7, Tab 29; Aff. of Eby, pp. 2-6, 8, Tab 35; Aff. of Downey, pp. 1-3, Tab 36).

Despite the refusal of the National Joint Board, after 1957, to recognize the 1903 agreement and 1920 decision, and despite Carpenters' warning in 1961, that the agreement "must not be included in the next printing," the contracting parties repeated in the 1965 Plan that the agreement and decision are "HELD OPERATIVE BY THE * * * DEPARTMENT."

B. Scope and Limitation of Joint Board Power

From its inception in 1919, the Plan has denied arbitrators authority to reopen, abrogate, nullify, modify or revise agreements and decisions "of record" (Supp. Aff. of Maso, p. 2, Tab 39). The 1936 version declared that the arbitrator (then called "Trustee") "shall not permit any controversy that has been settled, and an agreement accepted and agreed to by the organizations involved to be reopened" (ibid.). The 1948 version required the Board of Trustees "in all cases first [to] investigate the claims of the disputing parties to determine whether or not a disposition thereof has been made by a previous decision of record or by recorded agreement between the parties to the present dispute and issue a ruling as to the decision or agreement governing in the case" (Art. III, Sec. 1, p. 5). The Board of Trustees was authorized to convene a Joint Board for decision "[w]hen the Board of Trustees finds a dispute has not been settled by a decision or agreement of record" (Art. V, Sec. 3, pp. 7-8).⁸

The 1949 Plan provided for "job decisions," i.e., decisions "effective on the particular job only on which the dispute occurred," by a Joint Board (Art. III, Sec. 1, pp. 5-6), and for decisions "on a national basis" by a Hearings Panel (ibid., Sec. 2, p. 6). The Joint Board was required in job decision cases first "to investigate the claims of the disputing parties to determine whether or not a disposition thereof has been made by a previous decision of record or by recorded agreement between the parties to the dispute and issue a ruling as to the decision or agreement governing the case, and determine which one of the parties * * * has a rightful claim to the work under the agreement or decision" (Art. III, Sec. 1(a), p. 5). "If the Joint Board finds that the dispute is not covered by a decision or agreement of record, it shall render a job decision in which [it] should consider established trade practice" (ibid., Sec. 1(b), p. 6). "When a dispute is filed with the Joint Board with a specific request for a decision on a national basis and which would become part of the record" (Sec. 2, p. 6), "[w]hen the Joint Board finds [the] dispute has not been settled by a decision or agreement of record, [it] may at its discretion docket such dispute for a Hearings Panel" (Sec. 3, p. 7).

hundreds of cases since 1948 involving disputes between the Lathers and Carpenters over the installation of ceilings systems has in every case rejected the contention advanced here that the dispute is governed by the agreement of January 14, 1903" is plain error. Defendants in their Statement of Points and Authorities, p. 3, Tab 34, rely upon decisions "following 1955." The record shows application of the 1903 agreement by the Joint Board as late as 1957.

The Department letter of 1917 (p. 5, supra), and subsequent application of the 1903 agreement and 1920 decision to ceiling systems on which no plaster was used (supra, pp. 8-9), obviously reflects rejection of the claim predicated "on the letter dated July 11, 1912, from Frank Duffy," to the effect that "where no plaster is used the Lathers have no jurisdiction" (Statement of Defendants Dunlop, et al., of Points and Authorities, p. 3, Tab 41).

⁸ Prior to 1955, the successive versions of the Plan were printed in the official proceedings of the Department Convention; thereafter, in successive editions of the "Green Book." All versions were incorporated by reference, for judicial notice (Maso Supp. Aff., p. 2, Tab 39). All, including the 1936, 1948, 1949, 1957 and 1958 editions, referred to herein, will be available to the Court a total argument.

This basic structure was retained in the 1957 version. In addition to job decisions, the Joint Board was now authorized in cases of "repetitive disputes not governed by a decision or agreement of record," to render a decision "applying in the area as defined by the Board" (Art. III, Sec. 1(c), p. 6). Such decisions, like job decisions, would not become part of the "record" (Art. III, Sec. 1(c), p. 6). The Joint Board was authorized upon specific request to refer a repetitive dispute to a Hearings Panel "for a decision on a national basis which would become part of the record * * * if it is an issue not already determined on a national basis by a decision or agreement of record" (Art. III, Sec. 2, p. 7), or to so refer on its own motion a dispute "which it finds not to be governed by a decision or agreement of record" (Art. III, Sec. 5, p. 8).

At the 1957 Convention of the Building and Construction Trades Department, at which its current Constitution was adopted, appellant Lathers observed that the new Constitution did not "specifically provide that the authorized tribunal for settlement of jurisdictional disputes shall adhere strictly to the decisions and agreements of record" and offered a resolution to amend the Constitution to provide that all tribunals authorized to decide jurisdictional disputes under the Plan must "adhere strictly to the decisions and agreements of record as contained in the Green Book and official publications of the Department" and that any decision failing so to adhere "shall not be used as a precedent for any future ruling or decision" (Additional Affidavit of Maso, dated November 29, 1966, pp. 2-3, Tab 46). The Lathers' resolution was referred to the Committee on Laws, which recommended non-concurrence for the stated reason that the purposes of the resolution "are already covered by the contents of the 'Green Book' and the Procedural Rules and Regulations of the National Joint Board" (ibid.). No relevant change was made in the Plan between 1957 and 1965 (Cour Aff., Tab 31).

In 1965, the historic condition precedent to job and area decisions, namely, a finding by the Joint Board that the dispute is not "covered," "governed," or "disposed of," by an agreement or decision of record, was eliminated. Instead, in making job and locality decisions, the Joint Board was authorized to "utilize the following criteria: Decisions and agreements of record as set forth in the Green Book, valid agreements between affected International Unions attested by the Chairman of the Joint Board, established trade practice and prevailing practice in the locality." According to appellees (Statement of Points and Authorities, p. 4, Tab 34), the "priority previously given to agreements and decisions of record as criteria for job decisions was eliminated." See also, Supp. Aff. of Maso, Exh. 9, p. 3. Accordingly, the Joint Board was authorized to issue job and locality decisions in conflict with agreements and decisions of record where established trade practice or prevailing practice in the locality differed from the governing agreement or decision.

In glaring contrast to this revision of Section 1, the contracting parties retained intact the provisions of Article III, Sections 2 and 5, relating to national decisions (Green Book, pp. 7, 8). The Joint Board continued to be authorized to refer a repetitive dispute to a Hearings Panel for national decision only if it finds the dispute "not already determined on a national basis by a decision or agreement of record" or "not to be governed by a decision or agreement of record."

The legislative history of the 1965 amendments is meager, but what there is, in the form of minutes of the Joint Negotiating Committee (Maso Supp. Aff., Exhs. 1-9), confirms the uncontradicted affidavits of Appellant's President Maso (ibid., p. 2), and Sheet Metal Workers President Carrough (p. 2), that there was not a scintilla of suggestion from the draftsmen or sponsors of any intention to deprive agreements and decisions which appear in the Green Book of the protection they historically enjoyed against modification or repeal through national decisions.

Historically, in the terminology of the Plan, a jurisdictional dispute is "determined" or "governed" by an agreement or decision of record if the agreement or decision "covers" or is "applicable to" the "disputed work." Frequently, the term "governed" is used in the Plan interchangeably and synonymously with "covered," "determined," "disposed of" (e.g., 1963 Plan, Art. III, Sec. 1(a), (b), (c), p. 6). The Rules and Regulations of the Joint Board, historically and currently, require contractors to assign work "in accordance with [an] agreement or decision of record" where a decision or agreement of record "applies to the disputed work" (Blue Book, 1963, par. 3(a), p. 3, Tab 32; Blue Book, 1965, pp. 3-4, Tab 5), and to "assign the disputed work in accordance with the prevailing practice in the locality" where "no decision or agreement * * * applies" (ibid., par. 3(b), p. 4). The 1963 Rules and Regulations require the Joint Board to decide jurisdictional disputes in accordance with "the applicable decision or agreement of record" and to render a job decision based on "established trade practice" or "area practice" if it finds that the dispute "is not covered by such national decisions or agreements." (Blue Book, 1963, par. 7(a) and (b), pp. 12-13, Tab 32). (Emphasis added.)

C. Joint Boards' Reference; Hearings Panel's Affirmance and Decision

Shortly after adoption of the 1965 amendments, appellant Lathers' President Maso appealed to the Appeals Board pursuant to Article II, Section 5 of the Plan (Green Book, pp. 5-6), from a job decision of the National Joint Board involving Franchi Construction Company and Vickery Construction Company, at the Launch Operations Complex, Mila Area, Merritt Island, Florida. The Appeals Board "voted to suggest" to the Joint Board that it invoke Article III, Section 5, of the Plan, i.e., refer the dispute to a Hearings Panel for a decision on a national basis (Comp., Exh. 5).¹⁰ The explanation was

"the issue involved is a significant one which has been the cause of a great many disputes. The Appeals Board, in the several weeks of its operations, has already had six appeals involving this issue."

Pursuant to the Appeals Board's suggestion, the Joint Board voted to refer the dispute to a Hearing Panel (Comp., Exh. 6). Its referral letter (Comp., Exh. 7; see also Exh. 8; Op. Tr. Jan. 16, 1967, p. 73) states:

"The Joint Board found that there is no recognized decision or agreement of record covering the items in dispute." (Emphasis added.)

Thereafter, the Joint Board denied appellant Lathers' repeated requests for a hearing, asserting that "the files of the Joint Board are replete with cases over the years * * * in which Carpenters and Lathers have presented and argued their respective positions" (Comp., Exh. 11).¹¹

The finding of the Joint Board on which reference to the Hearings Panel is predicated does not rest on the theory that the 1903 agreement and 1920 decision do not cover the items in dispute because they do not pertain to those items, but rather because they are not "recognized" and therefore are not legally binding upon the Joint Board under Article III, Section 5, of the Plan. Appellees' counsel admitted below under questioning from the bench that the Joint Board had decided that the 1903 agreement is not "part of the record" (Tr. May 11, 1966, p. 26, Tab 26). In their Statement of Points and Authorities in Support of Defendants' Motion for Summary Judgment, p. 6, Tab 34, defendants opposed plaintiff's prayer for declaratory judgment as to "the legal effect of the agreement of 1903," on the ground that "this issue has been conclusively determined by the arbitration system in the Plan which Plaintiff Lathers is bound to accept" (p. 6). In their Statement of Points and Authorities in Opposition to Plaintiff Lathers' Motion for Summary Judgment, pp. 1-2, Tab 41, defendants admitted that the "position of the Joint Board with respect to the agreement appearing on Page 17 of the Green Book" is predicated on the theory that it "was not approved at the Carpenters' convention of September 19, 1904," and was abrogated by Carpenters. Appellees admitted (Tr. May 11, 1966, p. 21, Tab 26), that in making the "explicit finding that the 1903 agreement did not govern the dispute [the Joint Board was] obviously accepting the contentions of the Carpenters Union"—the very contentions which the Department had considered and rejected.

Upon receipt of the reference, the Hearings Panel scheduled a hearing on questions of arbitrability and procedure. On April 4, 1966, it handed down a decision upholding the Joint Board's authority to refer the dispute for national decision (Comp., Exh. 19, Tab 6). In its decision on the merits, issued August 24, 1966, the Hearings Panel said that it (Supp. Comp., Exh. 22, p. 17, Tab 28):

"has reached the same conclusion on its record as the National Joint Board: there is no recognized decision or agreement of record governing the installation of ceiling systems."

In its award (ibid., pp. 20-21), the Hearings Panel allotted to Lathers "installation of the 1½" channel or similar carrying channel and hangars" (par. 4(a)), except that in the event "a carrying channel is used with gypsum wallboard or other types attached thereto, the contractor may use carpenters to install the carrying channel in areas not exceeding 300 square feet where there are no lathers on the job" (par. 2), and allotted all other light iron work to Carpenters (par. 4(b)).

D. Impact of the Award

The award "requires employers * * * to employ Carpenters rather than Lathers to perform work * * * on contracts let on and after October 1, 1966" (Finding of Fact 4, Sept. 27, 1966, Tab 33). Upon its effective date, it "must immediately be observed by contracting employers throughout the country," and Lathers' members "will be deprived immediately of work opportunities and employment on construction jobs" (Maso Aff., p. 1, Tab 7). The District Court found that, if allowed to stand, the award "will result in denial of employment opportunities to lathers and disruption of the business of contractors who employ lathers and create serious economic consequences for lathers and for contractors who employ them" (Finding of Fact 5, Sept. 27, 1966, Tab 33).

A measure of the injury to appellant Lathers is reflected in the evidence adduced by appellant employers. In the aggregate, the Chicago and New York contractors employ approximately 2,000 lathers—about 12% of Lathers' entire membership (Eby Affidavit of Oct. 31, 1966, p. 1; Tab 35; Downey Affidavit of Sept. 28, 1966, p. 2, Tab 29). In these two areas alone, 700 lathers will lose their jobs in consequence of the award; their total average annual earnings are approximately $6,000,000 (Eby Affidavit of Oct. 31, 1966, pp. 2, 8, Tab 35; Downey Affidavit of Sept. 28, 1966, pp. 1, 5, Tab 29; Downey Affidavit of November 2, 1966, p. 3, Tab 36).

Injury to employers and the construction industry in these areas will be equally severe. In Chicago, for example, Carpenters "are not trained and skilled enough to perform lath work that has always been performed by Lathers"; to "assign this work to Carpenters would result in a disruption in the Chicago building trade industry which would take years to cure" (Eby Affidavit, Oct. 31, 1966, p. 8, Tab 35; Downey Affidavit, Nov. 2, 1966, p. 3, Tab 36).

Loss of membership by appellant Lathers is the inevitable consequence of this destruction of work opportunities for its members. The magnitude of the foreseeable loss is such as to threaten destruction of the organization.¹²

E. The Decision Below

The court below did not discuss the question whether the Joint Board and the Hearings Panel are bound by the Department's determination that the 1903 agreement and 1920 decision are currently "operative" and by the Department's rejection of Carpenters' demands for deletion of the agreement from the Green Book (Tr. Jan. 16, 1967, pp. 70-74). It assumed that the Joint Board is empowered to consider and decide, res integra, whether to "recognize" the 1903 agreement, i.e., to be bound thereby under Article III, Section 5. Thus, the court held that whether the agreement is "temporary" or continuing is an issue for the Joint Board to decide.

The court below also held that the conclusion of the Joint Board "that there is no recognized decision or agreement of record covering the matter in dispute" (ibid., p. 73) is a "finding of fact" which is "not subject to judicial review" (ibid., p. 74).

STATUTES INVOLVED

Section 301 of the Labor Management Relations Act is set forth in Appendix A, infra.

Article III, Section 5, of the Plan is set forth in the Argument, infra, page 26.

STATEMENT OF POINTS

1. The District Court erred in failing and refusing to hold that the Joint Board and the Hearings Panel violated their obligation to be bound, in administering Section 5, Article III, by the contracting parties' explicit and unequivocal declaration in the 1965 Plan that the 1903 agreement and 1920 decision are "recognized under the provisions of the Constitution of the * * * Department," are "of record" and are "operative".

2. The District Court erred in failing and refusing to hold that the Joint Board and the Hearings Panel exceeded their authority by entertaining and adopting appellee Carpenters' contentions concerning the 1903 agreement which the Department had considered and rejected.

3. The District Court erred in failing and refusing to hold that under the Plan the 1903 agreement and 1920 decision of record bar reallocation by national decision of jurisdiction over installation of light iron work in ceiling systems.

4. The District Court erred in failing and refusing to hold that the Plan and the Department Constitution do not bar judicial determination of the questions presented.

5. The District Court erred in dismissing the complaint and in failing and refusing to grant the relief requested by appellant Lathers.

¹⁰ The Plan does not specifically authorize the Appeals Board to suggest that the Joint Board refer any case to a Hearings Panel. The Appeals Board is explicitly empowered under Article II, Section 5, merely to "review and decide any appeal from a decision or ruling of the National Joint Board or a Local Board recognized under Article IV * * *". However, while the Appeals Board's suggestion was ultra vires, we make no point of it, for the source of the Joint Board's inspiration does not appear to be material.

¹¹ This denial of a hearing was technically error, but, as in Humphrey v. Moore, 375 U.S. 335, 350-351, it cannot be said that the Joint Board would have decided the issue differently if a hearing had been held, so we treat the error as inconsequential.

SUMMARY OF ARGUMENT

1. By requiring a finding that a decision or agreement of record does not govern, the Plan "circumscribe[s]" the "power" and limit[s] the authority" (Humphrey v. Moore, 375 U.S. 335, 345, and n. 8) of the Joint Board to refer a repetitive dispute for resolution on a national basis. The Plan does not provide that such a finding shall be "final and binding." Therefore, whether it was "permissible to conclude" that the 1903 agreement and 1920 decision do not "govern" the dispute over ceiling systems is "an issue ultimately for the court, not the [Joint Board or the Hearings Panel] to decide." Ibid., 375 U.S. at 346.

11. Assertion by the Joint Board and the Hearings Panel of authority to determine, in the context of Article III, Section 5, whether the 1903 agreement and 1920 decision are "recognized" or "operative" is sheer usurpation, for the "sponsoring parties" incorporated the answer in the Plan itself, thereby binding the arbitrators. That the Joint Board admittedly grounded its conclusion upon adoption of the very contentions of appellee Carpenters which the Department had rejected highlights the misappropriation of power.

The illegality cannot be cured, as the Hearings Panel attempted, by semantics. Within the context of the Plan, as in common parlance, whether a jurisdictional agreement or decision "governs" disputed work depends only on whether it "covers" or "applies to," i.e., whether it allocates, that work, not on whether the allocation quiets controversy about its assignment or performance. The latter concept is not only entirely novel and incompatible with historic usage; it is inconsistent with the finding requirement itself, for the referral authorization applies only to "repetitive" disputes. If conflict over an allocation "of record" established that the dispute is not "governed," there would be no necessity and no point in the requirement of determining in each case whether a repetitive dispute is or is not governed. Definition which so renders superfluous language of limitation which the contracting parties deliberately retained is blatant "infidelity." Steelworkers v. Enterprise Corp., 363 U.S. 593, 597.

Enforcement of the Plan as written effectuates the manifest objective of the contracting parties to provide a safety valve for situations in which area or industry practice does not conform with an agreement or decision of record by authorizing the Joint Board in such cases to make job and locality decisions in conflict with the decision or agreement, while continuing to protect vested interests in areas where practice and rights "of record" coincide by retaining the bar against national decisions. Arbitrators, no matter how distinguished, are not authorized, directly or indirectly, to substitute a different standard for this contractual scheme.

ARGUMENT

1. Whether the Joint Board is Authorized to Refuse to Recognize the 1903 Agreement and 1920 Decision is Ultimately for the Courts to Decide

Article III, Section 5 of the Plan reads as follows (Green Book, p. 8, Tab. 3):

"Sec. 5. The Joint Board may at its discretion and after conference between contesting unions, held by the Chairman of the Joint Board, refer a repetitive dispute which it finds not to be governed by a decision or agreement of record to the Impartial Umpire for mediation and the establishment of a hearings panel and a national decision."

This provision makes a finding that a decision or agreement of record does not govern prerequisite to reference of a dispute to a hearings panel for national decision.¹³ If a repetitive dispute is found to be "governed" by an agreement or decision of record, it must be settled by job or locality decision, and may not be

"Joint Board Rules and Regulations—The Chairman and Joint Board shall have the authority to establish such procedural regulations and administrative practices as may be required for the effective administration of this agreement, with the approval of the Joint Negotiating Committee, provided such regulations and practices are consistent with the expressed terms of this agreement."

"The Joint Negotiating Committee shall have the power to revise the procedural regulations and administrative practices of the Joint Board." (Emphasis added.)

The minutes of the Joint Negotiating Committee, June 10, 1964, p. 2 (Maso Supp. Aff., Exh. 3, p. 2, Tab 71), shows:

"It was the consensus that with respect to any changes negotiated by the Joint Negotiating Committee, those affecting the National Joint Board Agreement would require ratification by the sponsoring parties and those concerning the Board's Procedural Rules would not require such ratification." (Emphasis added.)

The Joint Summary released to the Press February 2, 1965 (Maso Supp. Aff., p. 2, Exh. 9), says (p. 1), that the "General Presidents ratified the Plan Jan. 13, 1965." In contrast, it says (p. 3), that "[a]ll rules and regulations of either the Joint Board or the Appeals Board must have the approval of the Joint Negotiating Committee." (Emphasis added.) See note 25 p. 46, infra.

referred to a hearings panel, regardless how desirable settlement by national decision may appear. Thus, the existence of a governing agreement or decision "circumscribe[s]" the "power" and "limit[s] the authority" (Humphrey v. Moore, 375 U.S., 335, 345, and n. 8), of the Joint Board and, consequently, of a hearings panel, to allocate jurisdiction on a nationwide basis.

Appellees argue, however, that because the Joint Board is explicitly authorized to make the finding, judicial review is foreclosed. They quote Cox (Appellees' Opposition to Motion for Injunction Pending Appeal, filed Jan. 25, 1967, p. 4):

"... the parties to an arbitration clause may agree to submit to the arbitrator for final and binding decision all questions concerning his own jurisdiction. His award on the issue of arbitrability would then have the same finality as on any other issue. Cox, 'Some Lawyers' Problems in Grievance Arbitration,' 40

Minn. L. Rev. 41, 56 (1955)." (Emphasis added.)

The flaw is that the Plan does not provide that a finding by the Joint Board under Section 5, Article III, shall be final or binding upon the parties.¹⁴ Absence of such a provision, particularly when contrasted with the explicit declarations of finality in other respects,¹⁵ must be read as implying that the draftsmen intended that the Joint Board should have "initial" but not "final authority" to "determine [the] question of arbitrability." Cox, op. cit. supra, p. 58.

Authorizing the Joint Board explicitly to make the arbitrability finding assures it opportunity to do so initially in all cases, rather than only where a court considers arbitrability debatable. Absent such explicit authorization, arbitrators are allowed to pass initially only on colorable arbitrability claims, "[f]or arbitration is a matter of contract and a party cannot be required to submit to arbitration any dispute which he has not agreed so to submit." Steelworkers v. Warrior & Gulf Co., 363 U.S. 574, 582-583.¹⁶ But grant to an arbitrator of initial authority in all cases does not divest courts of their authority and function under Section 301 to determine after its exercise in any case whether the contracting parties "did agree to give the arbitrator power to make the award he made." Ibid.

The law is understandably reluctant to infer preclusion of courts from the "task of determining 'substantive arbitrability,'" (Wiley v. Livingston, 376 U.S. 543, 558),¹⁷ for the result would be to give "the arbitrator unlimited power * * * to impose obligations outside the contract limited only by his understanding and conscience." Cox, Reflections Upon Labor Arbitration, 72 Harv. L. Rev. 1482, 1508-1509. Therefore,

"[w]here the assertion by the claimant is that the parties excluded from court determination not merely the decision of the merits of the grievance but also the question of its [substantive] arbitrability, vesting power to make both decisions [finally] in the arbitrator, the claimant must bear the burden of a clear demonstration of that purpose." Steelworkers v. Warrior & Gulf Co., 363 U.S. 574, 583, n. 7.

"[T]hose who dislike the result should not complain too loudly, for they have only to make their intention more explicit." Cox, Some Lawyers' Problems in Grievance Arbitration, 40 Minn. L. Rev. 41, 57.

¹⁴ The provision of Article III, Section 7 (Green Book, p. 9), that "[d]ecisions of the Hearings Panel * * * shall be immediately accepted and complied with by all parties to this Agreement" obviously has reference only to final decisions which the Panel is authorized to issue in consequence of an authorized reference from the Joint Board. The provision (ibid.), that "[a]ny decision or interpretation by the Joint Board shall be immediately accepted and complied with * * * unless an appeal is taken to the Appeals Board" cannot relate to a finding under Article III, Section 5, because such a finding is neither a "decision" nor an "interpretation" and there is no provision for appeal from such a finding to the Appeals Board. Compare the much more comprehensive finality provisions in the Automobile Carrier Truekaway Agreement (Appendix B, infra), which the Supreme Court in Humphrey v. Moore, 375 U.S. 335, 338-339, 345, n. 8, found ambiguous.

¹⁵ In addition to the clauses quoted in note 14, supra, Article I, Section 5, provides that the decision of the Appeals Board on appeal "from a decision or ruling of the National Joint Board or a local Board recognized under Article IV * * * shall be final."

¹⁶ See Local 205, Etc. v. General Electric Company, 233 F. 2d 85, 101, (1 Cir.), aff'd, 353 U.S. 547; International Union Etc. v. Benton Harbor Mal. Ind., 242 F. 2d 536, 539-540 (6 Cir.).

The issue of justiciability by national decision is not procedural but substantive, because, under the 1965 Plan it is "decisive of the outcome" (Speier v. Randall, 357 U.S. 513, 525), in areas or localities where current practice, on the one hand, and an agreement or decision of record, on the other, coincide. Preservation of jurisdiction over work in such areas is a "substantial right." Cities Service Oil Co. v. Dunlap, 308 U.S. 208, 212. See also Auto Workers v. Hoosier Corp., 383 U.S. 696, 703, n. 4.

Appellee would remedy the omission by reference to Article X of the Department Constitution as amended in 1957:

"All jurisdictional disputes between or among affiliated national and international unions and their affiliated local unions and employers shall be settled and adjusted according to the present plan established by the Building and Construction Trades Department, or any other plan or method of procedure adopted in the future by the Department for the settlement of jurisdictional disputes. Said present plan or any other plan adopted in the future shall be recognized as final and binding upon the Department and upon all affiliated national or international unions and their affiliated local unions." (Emphasis supplied.) Appellees' Opposition to Motion for Injunction Pending Appeal, p. 2.

But Article X invites rather than bars ultimate judicial review, for it provides that jurisdictional disputes "shall be settled and adjusted according to the Plan." (Emphasis added.) A "settlement" by national decision where national decision is not authorized by the Plan is not "according to" the Plan. Article XI of the Constitution (Comp., Exh. 3, pp. 29-30, Tab 4), does not exclude judicial determination of the question whether settlement of a particular dispute by national decision is authorized by the Plan for it contemplates judicial review after internal remedies are exhausted, and, a fortiori, where, as here, none exist.¹⁸

The contrast between the finality provisions of the Plan and the exhaustion requirement of the Department Constitution, on the one hand, and the finality provisions of the AFL-CIO "no-raiding" agreement, on the other, demonstrates, we submit, that judicial review of findings under Article III, Section 5, was deliberately not precluded. In 1962, four years after the Seventh Circuit, in United Textile Workers v. Textile Workers Union, 258 F.2d 743, held the "no-raiding" agreement judicially enforceable under Section 301, the AFL-CIO amended that agreement to provide as follows (AFL-CIO Constitution, Art. XXI, Sec. 20, 21, 49 LRRM 67, Appendix C, infra):

"Sec. 20. The provisions of this Article with respect to the settlement and determination of disputes of the nature described in this Article shall constitute the sole and exclusive method for settlement and determination of such dispute and the provisions of this Article with respect to the enforcement of such settlements and determinations shall constitute the sole and exclusive method for such enforcement. No affiliate shall resort to court or other legal proceedings to settle or determine any disputes of the nature described in this Article or to enforce any settlement or determination reached hereunder."

The knowledgeable draftsmen of the 1965 amendments to the Plan¹⁹ were, of course, familiar with this provision of the "no raiding" agreement, as well as with the necessity, under Humphrey and Warrior & Gulf, of writing specific finality language unambiguously directed to findings of "substantive arbitrability" (Wiley v. Livingston, 376 U.S. 543, 558), if judicial review of such findings is to be avoided. Omission of such language cannot fairly or realistically be ascribed to inadvertence.

It could hardly be argued that the 1957 Constitution barred affiliated unions from resort to the courts to enforce the obligation of the Joint Board under the Plan as it then stood to "adhere strictly to the decisions and agreements of record" in job decisions, pp. 13-14, supra.²⁰ Nothing in that Constitution bars such resort to enforce the Joint Board's continuing obligation under the 1965 Plan to respect published agreements and decisions as a bar to reference of a dispute for national decision.

Accordingly, the validity of the Joint Board finding that no decision or agreement of record governs "going to the power of the [Joint Board] under the contract, * * * presented an issue ultimately for the court, not the [Joint Board or the Hearings Panel] to decide." Humphrey v. Moore, 375 U.S. at 345, n. 8. (Emphasis added.) The court must decide whether it was "permissible" for the Joint Board "to conclude" (ibid., 375 U.S. at 346), that the 1903 agreement and 1920 decision do not "govern" the dispute over installation of light iron work in ceiling systems. The opinion in Humphrey demonstrates (pp. 346-348) that this requires judicial construction of the agreement and determination of the reasonableness of its application to the undisputed facts. The court below refused to be guided by Humphrey because the passage quoted in the first sentence of this paragraph appears in a footnote and because the Supreme Court in that case upheld the arbitrators' decision (Tr. Jan. 16, 1967, pp. 68-70, Tab 48).

Humphrey shows, and courts have explicitly held, that unless a finding of "substantive arbitrability" is entirely immunized by the contract it is subject to "meaningful review." Torrington Co. v. Metal Products Workers Union Local 1645, 362 F.2d 677, 680 (2 Cir.), and authorities cited; see Hays, Labor Arbitration, A Disappointing View (Yale University Press, 1966), pp. 79-83. In the Torrington case the Second Circuit said (362 F.2d at 680-681, n. 6):

"We think more exhaustive judicial review of [the] question [of 'the arbitrator's authority [which is really one of his contractual jurisdiction'] is appropriate after the award has been made, than before the award in a suit to compel arbitration; in this way, the court receives the benefits of the arbitrator's interpretive skills as to the matter of his contractual authority. See Livingston v. John Wiley & Sons, Inc., 313 F.2d 52, 59, n. 5 (2 Cir. 1963), aff'd, 376 U.S. 543."

If a substantive arbitrability finding "is arbitrary, capricious or not adequately grounded in the basic * * * contract, it will not be enforced by the courts." International Assn. of Machinists v. Hayes Corporation, 296 F.2d 238, 243 (5 Cir.). Were it otherwise, arbitrators could circumvent limitations upon their authority by "insubstantial findings of fact screening reality." Drivers Union v. Meadowmoor Co., 312 U.S. 287, 293.

Therefore, the limitations upon judicial authority assumed by the court below (Op. Tr. Jan. 16, 1967, p. 74), are nonexistent. Its underlying attitude (Tr. Jan. 16, 1967, pp. 16-17, 45-47, 66-67, Tab 48)—that all issues arising out of jurisdictional disputes should be settled internally and not become the subject of litigation—simply rejects the premise of Section 301, and of Humphrey and Warrior & Gulf as well, namely, that, unless explicitly and unambiguously excluded by the contract, courts must compel arbitrators, as well as parties, to respect and adhere to substantive limitations.

Appellees, from the outset, skillfully pretermitted consideration of the effect upon the Joint Board's authority of the Department's rejection of Carpenters' contentions and of its 1965 proclamation that the 1903 agreement and 1920 decision are "held operative by the * * * Department," on the plea of "necessary respect of and tolerance for the arbitration process" and the "national policy which strongly favors arbitration in labor disputes," spiced by the "public interest in this private procedure for the settlement of jurisdictional disputes in the Building and Construction industry without work stoppages * * *" (Appellees' Opposition to Motion for Injunction Pending Appeal, p. 3, App. D).

It is true that the law promotes arbitration by according leeway to interpretation and application where the contract and its legislative history are silent. Steelworkers v. Warrior & Gulf Co., 363 U.S. 574, 578-582. But the law does not, and it cannot, permit arbitrators, under the guise of interpretation and application, to substitute their own policy and value judgments for those of the contracting parties, as reflected in the terms and history of the agreement. That would not promote, but subvert, voluntary arbitration.

"Arbitrators * * * are already too prone to become industrial statesmen, [acting] not on the basis of the evidence and the agreement, but in accordance with their views of what will be most likely to increase production, enlighten morale and decrease tension." Hays, The Supreme Court & Labor Law, 60 Col. L. Rev. 901, 926.

II. Refusal to "Recognize" the 1903 Agreement and 1920 Decision as Usurpation

Assertion by the Joint Board and the Hearings Panel of power to hold that an agreement and decision "of record" is not "recognized" or "operative," or legally binding for the purpose of Article III, Section 5 (pp. 18-19, supra), is plain usurpation, for the contracting parties incorporated the answer in the Plan itself, thereby excluding the issue from the arbitrators' province. To hold otherwise is to say that arbitrators are superior not only to the Plan, but to the Department Constitution, for publication of an agreement or decision in the Green Book reflects its recognition under the Constitution of the Department, and invalidation by arbitrators, therefore, in effect amends the Constitution as well as the Plan.

"[The] arbitrator is confined to interpretation and application of the collective bargaining agreement; he does not sit to dispense

¹⁸ On April 13, 1966, appellant Lathers protested to the Department that the assertion of authority by the Joint Board and the Hearings Panel to "modernize any agreement or decision of record" was an "obvious and serious violation of the Plan." The Secretary-Treasurer replied on May 5, 1966, that this objection, does not "raise a question which can be acted upon by the Department." Exhibits 3 and 4 annexed to Sheriff Affidavit of November 16, 1966, attached to Statement of Defendants Dunlop et al., in Opposition to Plaintiff Lathers Motion for Summary Judgment, pp. 5-6, Tab 41.

¹⁹ The minutes of the Negotiating Committee (Supp. Aff. Maso, Exhs. 1-8), reveal the attendance at all times of "Mr. Louis Sherman, Counsel, Building and Construction Trades Department."

his own brand of industrial justice. He may of course look for guidance from many sources, yet his award is legitimate only so long as it draws its essence from the collective bargaining agreement. When the arbitrator's words manifest an infidelity to this obligation, courts have no choice but to refuse enforcement of the award." Steelworkers v. Enterprise Corp., 363 U.S. 593, 597.

The Joint Board's finding (p. 18, supra), as explained by appellees' counsel (pp. 18-19, supra), manifests infidelity to its obligation to be bound by the contract declaration that the 1903 agreement and 1920 decision are "held to be operative." Without semblance of justification in the language or history of the Plan, the Joint Board arbitrarily assumed and asserted power to supersede the Department as the entity authorized to decide whether recognition should be conferred or withheld. The Board's admitted adoption of the very contentions of the Carpenters (Statement of Defendant Dunlop, et al., of Points and Authorities in Opposition to Plaintiff Lathers' Motion for Summary Judgment, pp. 2, 3, Tab 41), which the Department had rejected (p. 19, supra), reverses the Department's judgment, enacted in the Plan.

The Joint Board's declaration (p. 18, supra), that no decision or agreement of record "cover[s] the items in dispute" unquestionably, in effect, erases the 1903 agreement and 1920 decision from the Green Book, for it deprives them of operative consequence in the area of their most palpable applicability, namely, ceiling systems. Indeed, in his 1928 letter initially disavowing the 1903 agreement, Carpenters' President Hutcheson observed: "if any understanding of that kind was entered into it would be pertaining to wire lath and furrowing that might be used on ceilings" as distinguished from "metal studding." (Maso Aff., Exh. 11 (5), Tab 12).

If, as we have demonstrated, the Joint Board's reference of the dispute to the Hearings Panel was ultra vires, the Panel could not acquire jurisdiction by invoking other or different grounds for the Joint Board's reference. The Hearings Panel, however, attempted exactly this. Although the Joint Board had admittedly relied only upon the record as it stood in 1959 (Statement of Defendant Dunlop, et al., pp. 1-2, Tab 41), the Hearings Panel considered and assertedly gave weight to (ibid., p. 2; Comp. Exh. 19, p. 10, Tab 6), an argument of Carpenters based on an abortive agreement limited to ceilings systems which Lathers' Executive Board did not ratify (Maso Aff., Exhs. 24-25, Tabs 64-65; Maso Supp. Aff., pp. 3-5, Tab 39; and related exhibits).²¹

Moreover, despite the Joint Board's equation of the word "cover" with the word "govern," as required by historic usage under the agreement (p. 18, supra), the Hearings Panel ascribed to "govern" an entirely novel and different meaning, namely, prevent recurrent dispute.²² It is too plain for argument, however, that within the context of the Plan, as in common parlance, the test of whether an agreement or decision "covers" or "governs" is whether it allocates the "disputed work" (pp. 15-16, supra), not whether the allocation quiets controversy about its assignment or performance. The latter concept is barred not only by the history of the Plan but by the purpose of its recognition of agreements and decisions of record. If recurrent strife dissipated their binding effect, there would be incentive to renew strife; the Plan would become a suicide pact. In any event, the language of Article III, Section 5, leaves no room for the Hearings Panel's concept for, according to that, the fact that a dispute is "repetitive" would ipso facto establish that it is not "governed." The requirement of determination in each case whether a "repetitive" dispute is or is not "governed" by an agreement or decision of record becomes absolutely meaningless. Definition which renders inoperative a limitation the contracting parties deliberately retained, is, we submit, blatantly unfaithful to the Plan.

In its decision of April 4, 1966 (Comp., Exh. 19, pp. 12-13, Tab 6), the Hearings Panel argued that to hold an agreement or decision of record a bar to resolution on a national basis of a "continuing dispute" would "preclude the clarification, interpretation or modernization of any agreement or decision of record. In an industry with rapid technological and product changes and many old jurisdictional rules, such an interpretation would constitute a severe frustration of the jurisdictional machinery not contemplated by the Plan."

Of course, this is a non-sequitur. Nothing in Section 5, Article III, bars legitimate "clarification" and "interpretation" incident to determining whether a decision or agreement of record "applies to" or "covers" particular disputed work. If technological and product changes materially alter the character or eliminate the existence of work or jobs which were the subject of "old jurisdictional rules," the rules may legitimately be found for that reason not to cover or apply to the new work or jobs, as Transportation-Communication Employees Union v. Union Pacific Railroad Co., No. 28, Oct. Term, 1966, 35 L.W. 4030, decided December 5, 1966, illustrates. But technological and product changes, which, as here, do not alter the character of the job or work involved (pp. 5-6, supra), cannot justify disregard of the rules under the guise of clarification or interpretation, for they cannot defeat applicability or coverage. And mere recurrence of conflict after allocation of disputed work by agreement or decision of record obviously cannot justify reallocation under the guise of "modernization."

The Hearings Panel's further statement (Comp., Exh. 19, p. 12, Tab 6), that "the cited agreement and decision clearly do not govern or determine reasonably or unambiguously each and every part of every ceiling system" (emphasis added), betrays its misconception that arbitrators are authorized to repudiate a standard of allocation accepted by the contracting parties if the arbitrators consider the standard unreasonable. Since the wood-light iron distinction is unambiguously applicable to all light iron parts of each and every ceiling system, and since this dispute involves only light iron parts, the suggestion of ambiguity is incomprehensible.

Disregard of the agreement and decision in most localities, cited by the Hearings Panel in explaining its decision on the merits (Supp. Comp., Exh. 22, pp. 16, 18, Tab 28),²³ of course cannot remove them as a bar to reallocation of jurisdiction by national decision under Section 5, Article III. When the Plan was amended in 1965, a safety valve was provided for just such situations. Indeed, in view of the prominence of the dispute between Lathers and Carpenters over ceilings systems,²⁴ it is likely that the "sponsoring parties" (n. 13, p. 27, supra), had this very situation in mind. The Joint Board was authorized to issue job and locality decisions in conflict with an agreement or decision of record where industry or area practice differed from a governing agreement or decision. But the requirement of abstention from national decision in the face of pertinent agreements and decisions of record was retained (pp. 14-15, supra). Retention in Sections 2 and 5 of Article III of the very phraseology concerning agreements and decisions of record which was deleted in Section 1 "cannot be ignored in the process of construction." Carey v. General Electric Company, 315 F.2d 499, 506 (2 Cir.), cert. denied, 377 U.S. 908.

The contracting parties in 1965 manifestly believed that whatever difficulties existed in consequence of conflict between practice and decisions and agreements of record could be met adequately by eliminating the requirement for adherence to those agreements and decisions in job and locality decisions, by which uniformity throughout a locality could be achieved without repetitive decisions on the basis of "prevailing practice" (Green Book, p. 6, Tab 3). Retention of the finding requirement as a condition precedent to referral for national decision bespeaks refusal to withdraw protection against nationwide divestiture, regardless how large, how repetitive and how persistent a dispute might be. The contracting parties thereby preserved vested rights in agreements and decisions of record in areas where practice and agreement or decision coincide. Should they decide that the solution which appealed to them in 1965 is unsatisfactory, they can easily remedy the situation by amending Article III, Section 5, themselves.

Availability of national decision for resolution of jurisdictional disputes does not depend, under Article III, Section 5, upon need for or desirability of nationwide uniformity in assignment of the work. It is entirely dependent, as appellant Lathers has contended

²² "The decisive issue [under Article III, Sec. 5] is not whether an agreement or decision 'exists,' but rather whether it governs or controls, whether it determines, the dispute." (Comp., Exh. 19, p. 12, Tab 6).

"The National Joint Board at its meeting of November 23, 1965 'found there is no recognized decision or agreement of record covering the items in dispute.' The National Joint Board is empowered under the Plan to make such a finding. A review of the full record is not persuasive that the agreement of January 14, 1903 or the decision of record of April 28, 1920 'governs' the dispute on the installation of ceiling systems." (Supp. Comp., Exh. 22, Tab 28).

throughout (Comp., Exh. 19, p. 12, Tab 6), upon the absence of a decision or agreement of record pertaining to the disputed work. Absence is prerequisite to the exercise of discretion by the Joint Board to determine whether resolution on a national basis is necessary or desirable. Accordingly, even a supported finding of need for national uniformity in work assignments could not establish compliance with Article III, Section 5. Nevertheless, it is well to observe that the "necessity" argument advanced by the Hearings Panel in its April 4, decision, is refuted in its own August 24, decision. It there said (Supp. Comp., Exh. 22, p. 16, Tab 28):

This formulation is at least an implicit concession that no need for nationwide uniformity has been shown. Thus, the claim of "frustration" collapses.

Moreover, it is well to observe that appellees produced not an iota of evidence to substantiate their assertion that "[c]ontinuation of the present uncertain and inefficient system of assigning the work will be productive of labor disputes and work stoppages throughout the United States and Canada" (Memorandum of Points and Authorities in Opposition to Plaintiff's Motion for Temporary Restraining Order, dated September 28, 1966, p. 5, Tab 84). It was not shown that any such work stoppage was in progress or in prospect. What appellees described as the "present uncertain and inefficient system of assigning the work" has been in effect for over a half century (Affidavits of Eby and Downey, Tabs 29, 35, 36). In the absence of any evidence that decisions on a locality basis would be inadequate to achieve uniformity within each locality, and that broader uniformity is essential, decision on a national basis has no effect, and no evident purpose, other than to enrich Carpenters and carpenter contractors at the expense of Lathers and lather contractors.

That the contracting parties themselves are legally empowered to do this by rewriting the Plan does not vest such power in arbitrators, or require that Lathers and contractors who employ them submit to usurpation.²⁵

CONCLUSION

The issue in this case, in the last analysis, is who is to be master, the contracting parties or the arbitrators? Neither directly nor indirectly, neither overtly nor covertly, neither ingeniously nor disingenuously, can arbitrators be allowed, in effect, to delete from the Green Book the 1903 agreement and the 1920 decision, discard its "operative" provision, or erase from Article III, Section 5, the "agreements and decisions of record" clause.

The decision should be reversed with directions to enter judgment for appellants setting aside the Joint Board's reference of the dispute to the Hearings Panel and the Hearings Panel award of August 24, 1966, and declaring that recognition of the 1903 agreement and 1920 decision by the Plan is legally binding and a bar to reallocation by national decision of jurisdiction over light iron work in ceilings systems.

²⁵ Since the Joint Board and the Hearings Panel purported to make the finding required by Section 5, Article III, there is no occasion in this case to consider the legality of omission of the finding requirement from the 1965 Procedural Rules (Comp., Exh. 4, par. 2, pp. 19-20, Tab 5). DEPARTMENT OF THE NAVY
OFFICE OF THE SECRETARY
WASHINGTON, D. C. 20350

MAR 10 1967

Dear Mr. Maso:

8 MAR 1967

You will recall that we came to the Building and Construction Trades Council last March to solicit your assistance and cooperation in support of our Navy's Seabee petty officer recruitment program.

The response of the Council and the membership of the Wood, Wire, and Metal Lathers' Union to our appeal for assistance in obtaining lathers for duty as petty officers in our Seabee Battalions was magnificent. Without this help, we would never have met the heavy demands for Seabees in Southeast Asia.

The men recruited from your organization are doing a fine job as we knew they would, and have made a significant contribution as we strive to meet increasing requirements imposed on the Navy by our responsibilities in Southeast Asia.

On behalf of the Navy, please accept my personal thanks and appreciation for the timely and outstanding response of the Council and the membership of the Wood, Wire and Metal Lathers' Union.

REPORT

from the General Secretary-Treasurer

J. EARL FERGUSON

Credentials for the LIU Twenty-Sixth Convention have now been received from the printer. Credentials will be mailed as promptly as possible to all local unions, state, district and provincial councils in ample time for you to nominate and elect delegates and alternate delegates.

Elsewhere in this issue is the CONVENTION CALL advising you of the various sections of the LIU Constitution relative to nomination and election of delegates and alternate delegates and convention procedure. May we suggest once you receive your credentials that your local union or council proceed as soon as possible to elect your delegate and alternate. This, of course, must be in conformance with section 217b of the LIU Constitution.

After your delegate and alternate delegate have been elected, credentials should be made out accordingly and signed by the president and secretary of the local union or council. Be sure to affix the seal on the credentials. Delegates and alternates must retain the original credentials for presentation when they register at the Convention. Duplicate credentials must be forwarded to headquarters. Upon receipt of the duplicate credentials, they will be checked for eligibility. If found in order, we will immediately send the delegate a check for his transportation expenses. Council delegates are not entitled to transportation expense checks.

Resolutions must be submitted in accordance with the provisions of section 215 of the LIU Constitution. May I suggest to the secretaries of the local unions that they read very carefully the provisions as set forth in section 217c of the LIU Constitution, particularly that portion pertaining to the payment of per capita tax.

The 12th National Legislative Conference sponsored by the Building and Construction Trades Department of the AFL-CIO is coming up in June, and there will be some issues of importance to our trade involved. The Department is hopeful of a good turnout, and they have seldom been disappointed in the past. The issues to be discussed, including situs picketing, are critically important.

This is the time that many of our representatives have an opportunity to make personal contact with legislators from their home district, in the beneficial atmosphere of the nation's capital and the proximity of the headquarters of the AFL-CIO. Legislators know that these representatives come backed up by a most powerful international organization, and these visits seldom fail to leave an impression. However, this alone is not enough.

The Congressman must be convinced that those who visit him representing a group, speak accurately for the group, and that the members are behind him. This is where each one of you can play a role. Before these visits begin, sit down and pen a letter to your own congressman. Tell him what you are looking for—a fair opportunity to exercise the right to picket on the job site. Tell him too, why you favor improved social security benefits, and cite a specific example from your own family or neighborhood of hardship under existing inadequate social security programs. Give him your views on other pieces of legislation needed.

Remember, too, that this legislative conference did not grow out of thin air. Its nourishment came originally from some of those COPE dollars that you have been contributing. How about another for the road?

Sincerely and fraternally,

J. EARL FERGUSON,
General Secretary-Treasurer.

CONVENTION CALL

Official Call to Twenty-Sixth Convention Of the Wood, Wire and Metal Lathers' International Union

TO: All Affiliated Local Unions, State, District and Provincial Councils of the Wood, Wire and Metal Lathers International Union

GREETINGS:

You are hereby officially notified that the Twenty-Sixth Convention of the Wood, Wire and Metal Lathers International Union will convene on Monday, September 11, 1967, at 10:00 a.m., at the Americana Hotel, Miami Beach, Florida, and will remain in session until all official business properly coming before the Convention is disposed of.

Credentials and duplicate credentials for delegates and alternate delegates will be mailed to all secretaries. Each credential must be signed by the president and secretary of the local union or state, district or provincial council, and the seal must be imprinted thereon.

Delegates and alternate delegates must retain their original credentials for presentation to the General Secretary-Treasurer at the Convention. Duplicate credentials for delegates and alternate delegates must be forwarded to the Office of the General Secretary-Treasurer at 6530 New Hampshire Avenue, Takoma Park, Maryland 20012, immediately after the election of delegates and alternate delegates.

Delegates and alternate delegates must be nominated and elected in accordance with the LIU Constitution and applicable law. Therefore, may we suggest that you read sections 207 through 222 of the LIU Constitution, which set forth convention procedure, representation and qualifications necessary for delegates and alternate delegates. Regarding the nomination and election of delegates and alternate delegates, may we suggest that in keeping with the law and the LIU Constitution that the following notice be sent to all members of local unions, state, district and provincial councils at least fifteen days prior to the date of nominations:

Dear Sir and Brother:

This is to notify you that the Twenty-Sixth Convention of the Wood, Wire and Metal Lathers International Union will convene on Monday morning at ten o'clock on September 11, 1967, at the Americana Hotel, Miami Beach, Florida, in conformance with Section 207 of the LIU Constitution. The Convention will remain in session until all business is properly disposed of, which will include nominations and election of a General President, a General Secretary-Treasurer, seven Vice Presidents and a Delegate to the Conventions of the AFL-CIO and National Building Trades Department.

This (Local Union No., State, District or Provincial Council) is entitled to elect one delegate and one alternate delegate. Nominations will be held on (date) , at (location) , at (time) .

The election will be held on (date) , at (location) , at (time) .

Delegates and alternate delegates must be elected in accordance with sections 216 through 217d of the LIU Constitution. We urge your attendance.

Fraternally yours,

The above notice must be sent to all members of your local union or to local unions who are affiliated with your state, district or provincial council, to the last known address at least fifteen days prior to the date set for nominations.

Voting shall be in accordance with sections 127 and 217a of the LIU Constitution.

We urge every local union, state, district and provincial council to have a delegate in attendance at the Twenty-Sixth Convention on Monday, September 11, 1967, at 10:00 a.m., at the Americana Hotel, Miami Beach, Florida. The Convention will continue until all business has been disposed of.

Location of the office of your General Officers will be posted on the bulletin board in the hotel lobby.

With best wishes.

Fraternally yours,

SAL MASO,
General President

J. EARL FERGUSON,
General Secretary-Treasurer

TIME OUT FOR WAR

Wisconsin Lather Apprentice waits for wounds to heal to return to the trade

Norbert Bonn got his call to military service in May, 1966. He was then working toward journeyman status as an apprentice member of Local 225, Kenosha, Wisconsin, and although he was content with his civilian status, he was ready to serve his country as well. Trained by the Army for about eight months, and skilled in anti-guerrilla warfare after a tour at Fort Dix, New Jersey, and Fort Polk, Louisiana, Norbert shipped out and landed in Viet Nam on November 20 as a Pfc. By January 8, his war was over.

Norbert's outfit was assigned to ambush a Viet Cong unit in Hobo Woods near Saigon that day but the unit was itself attacked, and in the scrap, Norbert took a bullet in his left leg and had his right ankle broken by a hand grenade. He was told that one of his buddies got the enemy who threw the grenade.

From Hobo Woods, Norbert was taken to Saigon for two days, then flown stateside and to the Great Lakes Hospital where he convalesced until mid-April. He was expected to go then to Woods Hospital in Milwaukee.

Norbert, who's 23 years old, has been in the lathing trade since 1963, when he became indentured with the

Jerry Ludwig Lathing Co. When he was idling away time in the hospital, he says he "lay on my bed, looking towards the window, thinking how the lath work should be done on such walls."

Secretary and B. A. George Ludwig, Local No. 225, reports that Norbert is very anxious to get out of the hospital and return to the trade. As a result of a wish to turn his hospital time into learning time, Norbert received a complimentary copy of the Craft Book, personally autographed by General President Sal Maso and

General Secretary-Treasurer J. Earl Ferguson.

Norbert has a younger brother, Henry, who is 18, still in Viet Nam, fighting with the First Cavalry, and Norbert hopes that he will return home safe and sound when his tour is over.

Norbert himself will probably have a stiff ankle and knee for a long time, but he's not complaining. Toward the end of March, when the accompanying picture was taken, he was expecting to lose part of one foot. He is now able to get up and down stairs, and making good progress.

In the Great Lakes Hospital near the end of March, Apprentice Norbert Bonn was visited by Local No. 225 Secretary and B.A. George Ludwig and Mrs. Ludwig.

Dear Sir & Bros.

On behalf of the executive board and membership of Local #423 Ottawa, Ontario Canada, I have been requested to write a letter of appreciation to you for the quick response in reference to a special dispensation to combat a rival union that exists in the city of Ottawa. The results of this special dispensation have been most rewarding. Although we cannot speak on behalf of the other Locals in Canada we are sure they too, share with us their sincere thanks for your deep concern for the various Locals throughout Canada.

We wish also to extend to you a sincere vote of confidence for the fine quality of leadership you have shown in your determination to fight back at such a powerful union as that of the carpenters. Local #423 would not be in existence to-day as our work consists mostly of the work that is in dispute between the two International Unions.

May you continue to remain in good health to carry out the tremendous struggle you have placed upon your shoulders, so that we as members of the L.I.U. shall regain the work that is rightfully ours.

During the course of the last two and one half years we have marvelled and admired the quality of leadership shown to all members of the lathers International Union.

It is our desire to have this letter placed in the Lathers Journal for all to read, and with best wishes we remain sincerely and fraternally yours;

Questions & Answers

The second part in the series telling you why the proposed new law is needed, how it helps your family.

Q: Sure, benefits will increase over the years. So will the "premiums"—the taxes we pay. You can see that from this year's proposals. Why don't we just put in a cost-of-living escalator on Social Security benefits—to keep them on a par with prices?

A: There is nothing wrong with the principle of an escalator arrangement if it is properly applied. But an escalator should not be used as a way of keeping inadequate benefits in the same place. The AFL-CIO believes that basic benefits should be raised by 50% quite apart from escalator provisions.

Also an escalator clause should take into consideration living standards as well as living costs. If the general standard of American life rises, aside from prices, that of retirees and other Social Security beneficiaries should rise as well.

This doesn't rule out an escalator right now—as long as it's agreed that basic increases are also needed.

Q: But let's say I'm 35 or 40 years away from retirement. I'll pay money all those years, but I won't get any more benefits than somebody who only paid 10 years at the same rate. Is that fair?

A: In one sense, no; in another sense, yes. Let's look.

The proposals now before Congress would set a special, higher minimum benefit for retirees who had paid Social Security taxes 25 years or more. That's a first attempt to meet the problem.

However, if you're lucky enough to live to 65, and to have earned the maximum tax base for all those years, you shouldn't really resent it. You might have bought a life insurance policy at 25 or 30, and paid the premiums over the same period. You would be happy to reach 65, but you would lose the game. You would have won—in dollar terms—if you had died 20 years earlier.

Every insurance system is based on averages and probabilities, including Social Security. There is no way of guaranteeing that every player will get back more than he put in, or even as much. But your chances are infinitely greater under Social Security.

First, you are only putting up half your bet; the employer is matching you.

Second, there are more ways you can win. If you live to 65 you have the pension. If you die earlier you have the death benefit and survivors' support. If you're disabled before 65, or sick afterwards, you also collect.

Sure, in any kind of insurance program, public or private, some will pay more than they collect. But the odds are better with Social Security.

Q: Just the same, it seems to me that the big thing these days is the old folks — medicare, bigger retirement checks and all that. I'm not against helping the old people, but aren't we going a little too far?

A: No, we're not; even from the standpoint of the very young, if they took a good, clear look at the facts.

Sure, Social Security has generally been discussed in terms of the old folks, and some young people may be fed up with it. But actually, it's a young people's program, too.

Let's start with the young and move up.

Suppose one of the old folks gets sick. You'd be right there with all the help you could give, even though it killed you—and it might have, financially, until a couple of years ago. Not anymore, thanks to medicare. You might be struck with the deductible but you'll get off easy. That's Social Security.

Or you're driving home late one night and some nut with hot wheels knocks you into the branches. If you're just crippled, Social Security will keep you and your hopes alive; if you're dead, Social Security will take care of your wife and kids.

But let's say you get old—and we all do. Inevitably you get the word—sorry about that, old boy, but you've had it. The pay checks stop right there.

You'll join a great big club, in which there are mighty few millionaires. The average single member has a Social Security income of less than $1,000 a year; the average couple, about $1,700.

Do you think that's "too far"? Do you think an increase of 15% or 20%—or even 50%—would be "too far"? Would you like to live on this kind of income?

Younger workers may not feel like shedding tears for the aged, but consider just one statistic. About a third of the aged don't have a telephone, because they can't afford it. How would you like that, come 65?

Q: But this tax thing still bugs me. Under the income tax, the more you make, the higher rate you pay. But everybody pays the same rate on Social Security, even the millionaires. Do you think that's right?

A: No, it's not—but it's not as unfair as it sounds. The benefit formulas are arranged to pay more, in proportion, to those with the lowest earnings. So while the lower-paid are taxed proportionately more when they're working, they get a bigger break when they collect.

Also, the higher wage base will bring in more money from the better-paid, which will help a little.

However, you still have a point. The present setup dates back to the Great Depression, when there was an urgent need to provide some sort of income to the aged, right away. No matter what kind of insurance system was set up, they wouldn't have anything much in the way of credits; so everyone else paid a little more to make up the actuarial difference.

This may seem pretty peculiar to later generations, raised in an affluent society. But 30 years ago, younger workers were more than willing to pay more than their share so that the elderly would have a chance to live out their lives in dignity and independence.

By now, of course, this problem is mostly behind us, but the debt remains. And so eventually the Social Security system should be enriched by a contribution from the general revenues of the federal government, which are collected more nearly according to the ability to pay. But that's down the road a bit.

Meanwhile, the system as it stands gives you the nation's best chance to come out a winner. And the odds will get better as time goes on.

Q: Let's look down the road a little farther. There's going to be a push for bigger pensions, for expanded medicare—maybe covering everyone—and all the rest. Who's going to pay for that?

A: To a great degree, you are. Let's not make any bones about that.

You want a secure old age, not lavish, but with enough money to live decently. It has to be paid for, one way or another; partly, perhaps, with a company pension plan (using money you might otherwise have had in wages) and through Social Security (half paid for by a tax on employers—money you would be unlikely to get otherwise).

You want some kind of protection against the unexpected—death, disability, chronic illness—for yourself and those you're responsible for. Only Social Security can do that job for the aged, and it does it better than anything you can buy anywhere else for anything close to the price.

Yes, Social Security is going to get bigger. It's going to get more expensive. It's going to annoy you as you pay your share.

But where could you get a better buy?

Q: But seriously—where will it all end?

A: We in the AFL-CIO hope it won't end until the Social Security concept in the United States catches up with and surpasses the rest of the world.

Of all the free, western nations—the lands of our forefathers, the creators of our national culture—we are the most laggard in social welfare, in caring for the aged, the ill and the deprived.

In part this is because we Americans set so high a price on personal self-sufficiency and freedom of opportunity; "any boy can become President" and all that. Yet the concept of adequate social welfare does not conflict with the American ideal, but rather complements it.

"Any boy can become President" if he has a fair chance. In today's society this means adequate food, adequate housing and adequate education. This chance must be open to the children of the poor widow and the young offspring of the retiree.

If West Germany can spend 17% of its gross national product; Belgium, 14.4%; Britain, 11.1%; Ireland, 8.9%, for social welfare, surely the United States can do better than 7%.

In cold fact we Americans not only do poorly by the indigent, the aged and the ill; we do poorly in protecting the young against the burdens of the old. This is not just faulty in principle but short-sighted in practice. For all our sakes, let us do better.

A Farewell for Ambassador Henning

Former undersecretary of Labor John F. Henning was given a pleasant sendoff to his new job as Ambassador to New Zealand by a number of labor leaders at a March reception attended by LIU General secretary-treasurer J. Earl Ferguson. Hosts for the reception were AFL-CIO Building and Construction Trades Department head C. J. Haggerty, and his wife.

Ambassador Henning had been Director of the California State Department of Industrial Relations before coming to Washington in 1962 to accept the appointment as Undersecretary of Labor.

Among the well-wishers at the reception were Secretary of Labor Willard Wirtz, AFL-CIO President George Meany, Assistant Secretary of Labor Esther Peterson, Sen. Wayne Morse (D.-Ore.) and Reps. George P. Miller (D.-Calif.) and Harold Johnson (D.-Calif.)

New Jersey State Council Resolution

Organizations grow in direct proportion to the knowledge, effort and tenacity of the leader of that organization.

WHEREAS: Since January 6, 1964, General President Sal Maso has vigorously fought for the trade jurisdiction of the Lathers' International Union, pursuing all avenues of fair play and correct procedure; and

WHEREAS: Because of his desire to instruct, inform and guide the Lathers throughout the country and Canada, he has traveled tirelessly addressing the members of local unions, district councils, state and provincial councils in reference to the various aspects of our ever-changing industry, instilling in all groups a constant desire to fight militantly to protect our rightful trade jurisdiction; and

WHEREAS: We are proud to know of his many triumphs in his home state of New Jersey; in 1931 he was elected Business Manager of Lathers' Local No. 143; in 1940, after serving as Acting President from 1934, he was elected President of the New Jersey State Building & Construction Trades Council. Prior to his election to the State Council, he served as President of the Paterson Building & Construction Trades Council and the Passaic County Central Labor Union.

He is a member of the Executive Committee of the Greater Paterson Economic Development Council and has been Chairman of the Paterson Housing Authority, Commissioner of the Paterson Board of Education and has a long record of public service and civic achievements.

Among his many community activities were the United Community Chest & Council of Paterson, the N. J. Camp for Blind Children, the N. J. Society for Crippled Children and Adults, the National American Red Cross, the Passaic County Grand Jurors Association, and Rotary Club No. 70 of Paterson.

Over the years he has served on numerous commissions during the administrations of former New Jersey Governors' Hoffman, Moore, Edge and Driscoll and is presently a member of Governor Hughes' Committee on Equal Opportunity.

THEREFORE BE IT RESOLVED:

That the New Jersey State Council of Lathers go on record endorsing our General President, Sal Maso, for re-election to his office at the 26th Convention of the Lathers' International Union to be held at the Americana Hotel, Bal Harbour, Florida on September 11-15, 1967; and

BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED:

That this resolution be sent to the International Union for publication in "The Lather."

Philosophy of Labor

by Reverend Joseph L. Donahue, C.S.V.

Be Reasonable

Perhaps no other vice has wrought so much evil, and brought so much misery in its train as drunkenness. It begets poverty, impurity, licentiousness, loss of sense of honor of manhood. Poverty stalks in its wake, and misery is ever at its side. If you doubt this go to the home of the drunkard. See the mother of his children sitting through the long watches of the night awaiting his return, hoping for it and yet fearing it.

Every man's nature is a battlefield whereon is fought the fierce fight between the forces of good and evil. No one born of woman is spared this bitter struggle. Often our souls are torn and wearied by this ceaseless struggle. We are prone to wonder, and sometimes complain at the mystery of temptation. Why have we to struggle against ourselves? Why is virtue so difficult and vice so easy? Why have we a tendency to do what is wrong?

The answer to the above questions is to be found in the nature of man. He is composed of body and soul. The body is endowed with senses, appetites, and passions ever craving unlimited satisfaction. The soul possesses the faculties of reason and free will. Reason dictates the folly and viciousness of immoderate indulgence in the desires of the body. Between these two imperious forces the will is dragged now one way and now the other.

Man must be led by reason. It alone will lead him through the dark ways of his life. If man does not follow the dictates of his reason, and abide by the commands of his conscience he reduces himself to the level of the brutes of the field. He is no better than the beasts whose sole concern is the satisfaction of their appetites. Reason dictates temperance and moderation in all things, while appetites and passions clamor for immoderate and unlimited satisfaction. Here lies the struggle of which we are conscious.

Let us look at temperance as opposed to drunkenness. Strictly speaking temperance means moderation in the use of intoxicating liquors, and does not necessarily imply total abstinence. The moderate use of spirits, wine or beer is not opposed to the virtue of temperance, nor can it be said that a man who drinks in moderation is intemperate.

Drunkenness consists in the loss of reason through excessive indulgence in alcoholic liquor. Modern science has discovered that alcohol is a deadly, habit forming drug. Furthermore science has discovered that alcohol has a particular affinity for the top of the brain, which is the particular part through which the will operates. Therefore everytime a man drinks he is to that extent destroying his will power. Alcohol creates a craving for itself, and as this craving increases, the will power decreases, with the result that a habit is very soon formed.

Reliable statistics show that at the present there are more than 6 million drunkards and heavy drinkers citizens of the United States. This means that more than 6 million human beings are in the habit of losing their reason, of giving way to their lower appetites, of reducing themselves to a state lower than that of the beasts of the field. More than 6 million are slaves to their appetite for a deadly poison, shackled and bound in a terrible, and degrading slavery.

Some people mistakenly imagine that alcohol taken in moderate quantities is a food, and has strengthening and stimulating properties. Science has proven beyond all doubt that this is erroneous. Accurate experiments have proven that if a man drinks only one glass of beer his efficiency on that day is lowered eight per cent. If he drinks three glasses of beer daily for twelve days experiments show that his efficiency is lowered at the end of that time from 25 to 40 per cent, according to the temperament of man, and his powers of resisting the effects of the poison.

These cold and colorless facts of science are amply supported by the knowledge that each one of us has of the evil wrought by drunkenness. Should not these facts lead a reasonable man who desires success, who wishes to do the best work of which he is capable to abstain altogether? Liquor is not a temptation to a man who never drinks, and why should any one increase the number of temptations with which he has to battle? Man has enough natural temptations with which he has to battle—without manufacturing additional ones. Prudence would seem to point to total abstinence as the wiser course to follow.

If you wish to be efficient, if you wish to succeed, if you wish to do the best work you can, if you wish in the future to avoid a bitter struggle with powerful temptation leave liquor of all kinds alone. As a wise man once said: "It goeth in pleasantly, but in the end it will sting like a serpent, and spread poison like an Asp."

New Work from Old Buildings

Like automobiles, buildings seem to need a new face every so often, regardless of how healthy their innards are, in order to attract tenants or owners. The result may be lathing work that wouldn't have existed, because when a building has a thorough facelifting, it's a good bet that complete demolition was economically unfeasible. In addition, the nature of remodelling work is such that it keeps the content of lathing and plastering high up on the scale.

Members of Local 42, Los Angeles, working for Clyde Hawk Lathing in Los Angeles, know just how much can be involved. This summer they helped to give an aging, block-long building on Santa Fe Avenue a new exterior.

The design of the new facade was by Burnett C. Turner, AIA, of Los Angeles, and it incorporates large louvered screens in the lathing and plastering to decorate and to diffuse the direct rays of the sun. The facade actually unifies three three-story portions and two one-story sections, all of which date back 45 years. The overall length is about 550 feet.

The entire ground level portion of the facade is plate glass windows and doors. The lath and cement plaster facade above was hung on the old structure with specially cut furring channel, secured with an anchoring device, with other channels bracketed by welding. The entire facade used 2 1/2 inch pressed metal studs. Additional support was provided by the use of specially-cut 2 1/2 inch stud pieces which were welded between the bracketed channels. Both studs and furring channels were pre-cut. Metal lath was then tied on to both the studs and furring sections. There were a lot of exterior corner reinforcements and expansion joints.

THERE is no glossing over the scope of the liberal defeat in 1966. Yet, it can be said that without COPE's best effort ever the defeat would have been more severe. Most of the new liberals who survived 1966 made it by slim margins, and in many instances COPE's program provided the margin.

Prior to the election, it had become clear that so-called "white backlash" had taken its toll among union members as in the community at-large. Though its precise effect is beyond accurate measurement, some conclusions about it can be made.

1. In 1966 voting statistics, backlash shows up most often not as a switch but as a drop in voter turnout in blue collar and middle income areas. In Cicero, Illinois, for example—where racial feelings were strong—the Democratic vote dropped about 25% from 1962 senatorial figures, and the Republican vote dipped slightly.

2. In state after state, the Democratic vote failed to come out in numbers comparable to 1962, the last off-year election. The most extreme example occurred in Detroit, where Governor Romney actually polled 11,000 fewer votes than in 1962, but the Democratic gubernatorial vote plummeted by 152,000.

3. In blue collar and middle income wards, the pattern was the same in many cities as in Detroit, notably in Chicago, Philadelphia, Denver, Milwaukee, Phoenix, Minneapolis, Cincinnati, Louisville, Memphis. More than through actual voter defection, then, liberal candidates in these areas were hurt by the stay-at-homes.

Yet, there was vote-switching in some areas, and much of it must be attributed to backlash. Its most serious effects were felt in California.

The California gubernatorial battle came on the heels of two years of intense public focus on racial issues—the 1964 open housing referendum, 1965 riots in Watts, 1966 riots in San Francisco and, a week before the election, highly-publicized vandalism in Alameda.

One assembly district in Alameda

1967 And Beyond: A Plan for Action

switched from 59 percent for Gov. Pat Brown in 1962 to 65 percent for his victorious GOP opponent Ronald Reagan, in 1966. A similar district in Los Angeles switched from 58 percent for Brown in 1962 to 65 percent for Reagan in 1966.

Similar vote-switching occurred in blue collar wards in Omaha, Nebraska, where riots occurred shortly before election day, and in Baltimore where a Democratic candidate made an open racist appeal.

A final problem factor was the sharp drop in the Negro vote from 1962 in all but a few areas outside the south.

COPE's Role

One of the ironies of 1966 was that widespread defeat of liberals came in a year when COPE performed better than ever. It brought home the lesson—by no means a new one—that COPE, though a significant factor, is but one factor in an election. Labor can never account for more than a minority of votes. In close situations, it can provide the margin of victory. In a landslide situation similar to 1966, it can at best take satisfaction in helping prevent even more calamitous results.

Two major factors helped stem what could have been a more far-reaching electoral defeat for liberalism:

1. COPE was provided with more assistance than ever before, from President Meany and the Executive Council through to the ranks of state and local central bodies and from the international unions. From all, COPE had more cooperation, more manpower, membership lists for data processing pilot projects and more coordination of campaign contributions. This produced the best organizational effort ever mounted by COPE.

2. Planning and organizing for the 1966 elections began early in 1965 and continued through the campaign.

The result was significant victories in some campaigns, but the accomplishments cannot obscure the disturbing problems of poor voter turnout and the unsolved "white backlash." Perhaps information found in the following facts will help us solve these.

1. As the average age of the population decreases, so does the average age of union members. In the next five years, 26 million new voters between 21 and 23 will be added to the rolls.

2. More and more, our white members with the rest of the white population, will live in suburbs.

3. Cities are increasingly becoming Negro ghettos. Between 1960 and 1965, the Negro population in cities increased two million, and, in the suburbs, only 400,000.

To meet these new circumstances the following approaches seem worth considering.

Intensified political education through existing national and state AFL-CIO machinery and in international unions, with special appeals to our younger members.

Development of local COPE's on a community basis in order to "go where our members live," which, increasingly, will be in the suburbs.

No solutions are guaranteed, but some questions are suggested:

1. Where does political action and education fit into the program of your own local, state or central body?

2. How much of the resources of these respective bodies is directed to political action and education?

3. Has there been a pattern of increased awareness of the need for political action and education, and has it been translated into action? If not, why not?

The answers to these questions might, in part, produce the solutions to the problems confronting labor's political effort in 1968.

U.S. - Canada Unions Share

By Les Finnegan

WASHINGTON, (PAI)—For more than 100 years Canadians and Americans have been referring to their 300-mile "unguarded border" stretching from the Atlantic to the Pacific. Both countries speak of it proudly as the world's longest unmilitarized frontier.

But the U.S. and Canada share another unique feature.

Nowhere else in the world do two sovereign nations share the same democratic labor movement. The vast majority of Canadian and American union members belong to labor organizations that operate on both sides of the border, and this has been true in some cases for a century or more.

Today 71% of all Canadian unionists—and about the same percentage of unionists in the U.S.—are affiliated with unions that are jointly and simultaneously Canadian and American.

How did it all start, this unique internal sharing of the same unions? The answer goes back more than 100 years and it involves a forgotten sidelight of North American labor history.

The fact is that the U.S. and Canada came close to sharing identical trade unions with England. Indeed, for many years they did. In the decades following 1850 at least two large British unions had a considerable membership both in the U.S. and Canada. The Amalgamated Society of Carpenters and Joiners and also the Amalgamated Society of Engineers were active both in the U.S. and Canada throughout the second half of the 19th Century. And—incredibly—the British Carpenters union was even an affiliate of the AFL. This British union had members in the U.S. and Canada as late as the 1920s.

But Canadian workers had started to organize branches and locals of U.S. unions as early as the 1860s. Among the first unions to claim membership on both sides of the border were the Iron Molders and the Printers. When the Iron Molders first formed their union in 1859 there were already molders' branches in five Canadian cities. This was probably the first international union in the U.S.-Canadian sense. The Printers became the second. As time went on the growth of international unions was so steady that by 1900 they represented more than half of all organized workers in Canada. By 1911 that figure had climbed to 90%.

But in addition to the historical explanation there was another reason—a hard, pragmatic reason—why millions of Canadian and U.S. workers found it advantageous to belong to the same unions. The reason was that they found themselves working for the same employers. Typical examples of firms with plants and factories both in Canada and the U.S. are General Electric, Westinghouse, General Motors, Ford, Chrysler, U.S. Steel, Motorola and RCA. A leader of the Canadian electrical workers summed it up this way: "It takes an international union to deal effectively with an international corporation."

But also, to a large extent, Canada and the U.S. have similar economic and social problems. Living costs, for example, are comparable. This has meant that Canadian and U.S. workers have come to share the same bargaining goals. They seek almost the same gains in wages, hours, job security, medical and surgical insurance, pensions and other benefits.

How has this unique sharing of unions by U.S. and Canadian citizens actually worked out? Has it meant—as Communist critics predicted—that the Canadian unionists would be dominated by the Americans because the unions south of the border have enjoyed greater numerical strength and larger financial resources? Do Canadian and American workers share the same degree of rights and privileges? Do they have the same responsibility for policy-making decisions?

These and other questions have just been answered in a new book by Canadian university professor John Crispo, who is undoubtedly the outstanding authority on relations between the Canadian and U.S. labor movements.

Titled "International Unionism—A Study in Canadian-American Relations," the book is the first comprehensive appraisal of relations between Canadian and American labor that has been made in a generation.

The study's conclusions are forthright. Professor Crispo begins his summary with a statement that the international unions shared by Canadians and Americans have been Advantageous not only for the workers but also for employers and the general public.

FAST HANGAR BENDER

This bender makes a saddle in the time it takes to mark the wire using old-fashioned methods. The bender is light, and easy to operate. In use, you simply hold the wire as you would for marking, with your thumbnail at the line. The jaws of the bender are set on top of your thumbnail, and a squeeze of the handle, a lift on the lever, does the trick. $7.50 postpaid.

"THE INJURY TO ONE IS THE CONCERN OF ALL"

REPORT

from the General President

SAL MASO

As the chief executive officer of our international union, I feel it my responsibility to inform you from time to time on the organization and administration of the responsibilities of all of the officers. I have previously drawn a parallel between our union and the democratic states within which it operates. In both the United States and Canada, the ultimate power of the executive officer is drawn from the franchise of the individual citizen, and so it is with the LIU. It is your needs, and your wishes, which are daily translated into action by your officers and staff.

Organized constitutional unionism today—and that is exactly what you have at work for you as a member of the LIU—is in some respects akin to big business. We're not dealing with the same problems, obviously, but the techniques needed and the challenges of administering the needs of more than 18,000 skilled building tradesmen demands a level of administrative competence equally as professional as that of the business community, with the additional demands of having a keen sensitivity for a fellow human being.

Organization is important, but no matter how skillfully an organizational document may have been penned by those who are skilled in the art of writing legislation and constitution, its ultimate effect depends upon the people who breathe life into the organization.

For this reason, I would like to take this opportunity to tell you a little more about your officers—to give you something of the view that I have of all of these most capable and dedicated workers who keep the wheels of our organization turning. I refer to your General Secretary-Treasurer, J. Earl Ferguson, our distinguished Vice Presidents, and our international representatives and deputy representatives and local union officers. They make up a top-ranking administrative team.

Our General Secretary-Treasurer, for example, has serviced our state, provincial and district councils and local unions in a way that is most deserving of appreciation. Our international vice presidents are an extremely dedicated group of people. Our international representatives and deputy international representatives service the needs of the members in their respective jurisdictions on the highest plane.

Our local union representatives are also an important cog in the machinery, and are called upon to make many sacrifices in the discharge of their responsibilities, as you members are well aware.

Above all, however, is the membership support without which we could not operate. Without the sincerity and loyalty of our members in the international organization, the best intentions and work of your officers and representatives would be to no avail.

Many of you have had an opportunity to meet the General Secretary-Treasurer personally. J. Earl Ferguson has been a member of the LIU since 1919, when he joined local 2 in Cleveland. For 25 years he dedicated himself to the trade, working in Cleveland as well as various parts of the country, and developing a knack for helping men to work together. In the course of events he was assigned supervisory responsibilities many times, and by 1927 had begun to serve his Local Union in a number of official posts. He became its business agent in 1944, and immediately tackled the improvement of apprenticeship training in the area. As a result of this work he was appointed to serve on the first Lathers International Apprenticeship Committee. He also served as Secretary-Treasurer of the Buckeye State and Lake Erie Councils of Lathers, and in 1952 was appointed recording secretary of the Cleveland Building and Construction Trades Council.

First seated on the Executive Council of the LIU in 1952, Brother Ferguson remained in this post until his election as Secretary-Treasurer of the LIU in 1964.

Our distinguished First Vice President, Cornelius J. Haggerty, has a major responsibility to

all building tradesmen through his position as President of the AFL-CIO Building and Construction Trades Department, a post he's held since 1960. Brother Haggerty joined local 72, Boston, in 1915, and first served as a building trades union officer in 1928, when he was elected as the business manager of Lathers Local 42 in Los Angeles.

In 1929, he was elected Second Vice President of the LIU, and he subsequently served in a number of posts in the Los Angeles Building and Construction Trades Council, and the California State Federation of Labor. In 1958, he was elected secretary-treasurer of the merged California labor federation of the AFL-CIO, and became the First Vice President of the LIU that same year.

Second Vice-President E. Russell Baldwin became a member of Local 73 in his home town of St. Louis, in 1930. His father was one of the charter members of the Local and served as its president for more than 50 years.

Vice President Baldwin

During his years in the trade, Brother Baldwin served on a number of committees, and was elected Chairman of the Executive Board of Local 73. He resigned the position to become Business Agent of the Local in 1960, and was re-elected in 1963.

At the present time Brother Baldwin serves on a committee of the St. Louis Building Trades Council, responsible for promoting work for AFL-CIO members; is President of the Missouri State Council of Lathers, Secretary-Treasurer of the Midwest Conference of Lathers, and is a Committeeman on the Joint Apprenticeship and Training Program of St. Louis and vicinity. He is an advisor to the St. Louis Industry Council Promotional Program.

Third Vice President Creighton Howard White began his lathing career as an apprentice to Local 49, Pueblo, Colorado in 1939. He worked at the trade until it was interrupted by military service. In 1948 he became a journeyman of Local 374, Phoenix, Arizona.

Vice President White

Brother White has served the LIU as Business Manager and Financial Secretary of Local 140. An International Representative, he has been a delegate to the Texas State AFL-CIO, and many other construction industry councils and boards. He is a Director of the Texas Bureau for Lathing and Plastering, and a member of the Executive Board of Lone Star State Council and the Dallas Building Trades Council. Brother White was elected Vice President of the LIU in September, 1964.

Robert J. Hamilton, our Fourth Vice President, entered the lathing trade as an apprentice of Local 74. In 1937 he became a journeyman and soon an apprenticeship instructor.

Vice President Hamilton

Brother Hamilton served many years on the Apprenticeship Board of Local 74, as well as the Executive Board. He has been elected a delegate to numerous International and Local conventions and is a member of the International Joint Apprenticeship Committee. He served as advisor to McGraw-Hill in the preparation of their Apprentice Manual, and assisted Business Forum in preparation of an apprentice lather correspondence course.

He was elected Vice President of the LIU in 1964, and Secretary of the LIU Executive Council in 1965.

Fifth Vice President A. H. Burton entered the trade in 1927 in Saskatoon, Saskatchewan. He worked continuously at the trade until World War II when he entered military service. After the War, he resumed lathing work in Vancouver, with Local 207. Later, after moving to North Surrey, British Columbia, Brother Burton was elected to many posts in Local 356. In 1950 he was elected Secretary of the Western Council of Lathers.

In 1954, Brother Burton became an organizer for Western Canada, and has served in this capacity since. Elected a Vice President of the LIU in 1964, he has served for fourteen years on the B.C. Apprenticeship Advisory Board, and has also been a member of the International Apprenticeship Advisory Committee.

Sixth Vice President, Henry J. Sheerin, was born in Boston, Massachusetts, and entered the trade as an apprentice with Local 72, Boston. Brother Sheerin became a journeyman in 1948. While working at the trade, he attended the Bentley School of Accounting at night.

Members of Local 72 elected Brother Sheerin to membership in the Executive Board, a post he served for three years before becoming Financial Secretary. He was in this latter office for nine consecutive years. Since 1963 he has been Business Agent for the Local, and in 1964 was elected a Vice President of the LIU.

Our Seventh Vice President, John Sheehan, was born in New York City, and began his Apprenticeship in Local No. 46 with the W. J. Scully Lathing Firm. He has served in the capacity of both Shop Steward and Foreman, and has been a member of the LIU for approximately twenty years. He was elected Vice President of Local No. 46 in 1956 and President in 1959, a position he still holds.

In addition to this he has been a delegate to the New York State Council of Lathers; the New York State Building Trades; the New York State Federation of Labor. John is also a member on the Board of Governors of the New York Building Congress; a Labor advisor to the National Lathing and Plastering Promotional Bureau, and a member of the National Apprenticeship Committee for the Lather's International Union.

Vice President Sheehan

This is your team of outstanding leaders, and I hope that in telling you a little more about them, I've given you a new sense of pride in belonging to the LIU. Shortly after the 1964 convention, in a letter to all of the Vice Presidents, International and Deputy Representatives, I made the following comments. I think they are just as valid today as they were then: "It shall always be my purpose to further the interests of our International Union and all of its locals, and I know this is your aim too. Therefore, we must fight together to preserve our work and to maintain our trade jurisdiction, but we must do this united toward the common goal of protecting the best interests of all the members of the International Union. In the past I have received 100% cooperation from you, and I know I can look forward to the same cooperation in the future."

A surprise luncheon was held recently in New York's Waldorf-Astoria Hotel to honor a tireless, dedicated servant of the working man. The occasion was the 75th birthday of Walter Matthews, but in the forefront of the minds of the many leaders in attendance, were the contributions that Brother Matthews has made to humanity in the long span of a very full and rich life. On the opposite page is a picture of the head table at the event.

The Business Manager and Secretary-Treasurer of Local 46, New York, Brother Matthews has been a close associate of mine for many years. Walter and I, together, attended many conventions, including those of the Building Trades Department, the AFL, the AFL-CIO and the LIU.

I have known Brother Matthews for a long time, and I know him to be a dedicated man—one who is at the same time very human, and who has helped many people in need during his long life. He has made many sacrifices for the entire labor movement while he served the interests of the members of Local No. 46 as well. I would say without reservation that there are few men who could measure up to his dedication and willingness to serve labor and humanity.

Walter's luncheon was attended by many notables: judges, labor leaders, civic leaders, and eminently successful businessmen who knew and respected the work that he has done and continues to do.

He has been a member of Local No. 46 all of his adult life, and his card dates from 1916. He is Vice President of the New York State Council of the AFL-CIO, and holds a number of other titles. He became Secretary and Business Agent of Local No. 46 in 1928.

I am sure that every member of his local is indeed honored in having such a man to lead them, and that the membership of the LIU at large is equally honored. If all of his friends had known in advance that Brother Matthews was being honored, I'm sure it would have taken an armory to hold those who came. I want all to know that I salute a man of his honesty, integrity and dedication as a true representative of lathers.

I would like to call your attention to the successful conclusion of a strike in Binghamton, New York, which has proved once again the value of your legal defense fund. I have reproduced below the text of the letter from Secretary-Treasurer Joseph P. Lorenc, Local No. 57, which explains the situation in detail:

Dear Sal,

I want to take this opportunity to thank you for your tremendous and inspiring support during our recent strike. As you know we brought it to a successful conclusion and as every member in our Local knows, it would not have been possible without your help.

We know that your leadership in our International Union is the best and the greatest, and I want you to know you have the utmost respect of our Building Trade Members here in Binghamton. They feel that our motto "The injury to one is the concern of all" applies to a small Local like ours, for our Locals success was a victory for every Local in our International Union, because whatever happens in Binghamton can happen anywhere in the country.

We also would like to thank you for sending an International Representative to guide us through this strike. We feel that Marshall Ferguson did a splendid job in giving us aid and support, and without him it would have been difficult to be successful. Marshall has gained the respect of the Building Trade Members because of his wise and inspiring leadership, and they speak very highly of him here in Binghamton.

We also want to thank you for sending in to Binghamton our International Attorney to help in our strike. We fully realize that the extra per capita tax for our Legal Defense Fund was certainly the best decision you ever made as far as finances are concerned.

On behalf of the Officers and members of Local No. 57, please accept our thanks and appreciation for all you have done for us. May God bless you.

With best wishes, I am,

Sincerely and fraternally yours,
JOSEPH P. LORENC
Secretary-Treasurer

WITH reference to our lawsuit against the Hearings Panel and the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America, we are at the present time awaiting a decision from the Appellate Court.

Summertime, when the livin' is easy. With the Memorial Day weekend and the kickoff of the summer vacation season already behind us, it's time to think about safety all summer long. The idyllic scene on the cover is enticing, to be sure, but make certain that when you plan your vacation it is not only planned for safety when you get there, but on the road, too. Slow down and live a little.

REPORT

from the General Secretary-Treasurer

J. EARL FERGUSON

The J. P. Stevens firm, guilty of flagrant violations of the labor laws over the past two years, has been brought to task by the National Labor Relations Board. We earlier reported to you of the Stevens' firm unwillingness to allow the workers in the textile plant to organize, and the Government's continued purchasing of goods from the firm, despite the fact that the NLRB found the company guilty on a number of violations and has termed its resistance to organizing "massive and deliberate unfair labor practices," and "flagrantly unlawful conduct." In a recent unanimous order, the Board ruled that the textile chain must furnish the Textile Workers Union of America with the names and addresses of all the workers in its 27 North and South Carolina plants. One of the most serious charges against the firm—owned by former Army Secretary Robert T. Stevens—is that it has fired at least 88 employees for union activity. Under the terms of the NLRB order, the firm must notify all employees of the Board's decision, and give access to the plants' bulletin boards for a period of a year.

Unfortunately, Stevens has not shown good faith in complying with NLRB orders in the past, and even now more charges are accumulating. The Textile Workers Union is contemplating action on these. As soon as an NLRB decision is rendered, the firm takes it to the courts for further delays. A decision is not expected until this fall on a case that goes back to 1963.

Stevens' continued defiance of the NLRB emphasizes weakness noted by Boyd Leedom, Chairman of the NLRB as far back as the Eisenhower administration. "It begins to appear doubtful," Leedom said, if any remedy legitimately devised within the framework of the Labor Management Relations Act will right the wrongs of an employer who persists in violations in the way the respondent (Stevens) has persisted."

There are several constructive steps that could be taken. Most important, the Congress should put teeth into the National Labor Relations Act. In addition, any firms repeatedly found in violation of labor law should not be "rewarded"—as Stevens may be right now—with government contracts. It's deplorable that Stevens has been granted $54,000 under the Manpower Training Act to train 117 workers in textile occupations. Also, during the period when Stevens was flagrantly violating NLRB orders, it was receiving huge government orders for textiles.

We think there is no alternative on this last question. The Department of Labor should act immediately to permanently revoke the training grant, and bar any such grant in the future to any other firms who have been found in violation of the NLRB.

When you sit down to write that check for electrical service, you may be paying more than twice as much as a lather in another city who uses the same amount of electricity. If this is the case, the chances are that your electricity comes from an investor-owned utility, while his comes from city-owned plants.

This can make a big difference, as was recently revealed by U.S. Senator Lee Metcalf (D-Mont.) and his executive secretary, Vic Reinemer, in their book called "Overcharge." The volume grew out of years of study, and reports that U.S. taxpayers will be bilked of about $11 billion by the year 1980 unless something is done to cut the rates of the privately-owned utilities down to size. Some other interesting facts were brought to light. The average manufacturing industry takes home scot free about 6 per cent of its total sales dollar. The investor-owned utilities take home about 14 percent, and some go as high as 20 percent. All of the investor-owned utilities' profits are charged against the residential and commercial users, with industry getting its power at the utility's cost.

Another strike against the investor-owned power companies is that they don't return as much money to the communities as do the city-owned facilities. An electric power plant can help get much-needed community facilities. This was done in Jacksonville, Florida, where profits went toward the purchase of a coliseum, auditorium, city hall and street and sewer improvements instead of into the pockets of stockholders.

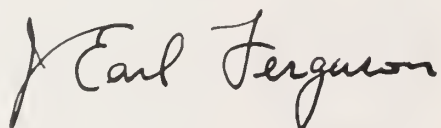

What's the situation in your city? Next time your electric bill comes in, check the charge per kilowatt hour. If it's much above 1.75 cents—the average for municipally-owned power systems—you might start asking some questions down at City Hall.

Credentials have been mailed to all local unions and councils. Secretaries should have them by this time. If you have not received your credentials, kindly advise this office so that we may send you your duplicate copies.

We urge your local union or council, as soon as your delegate and alternate delegate to the LIU Convention have been elected, to kindly send duplicate credentials to our headquarters at 6530 New Hampshire Avenue, Takoma Park, Maryland. Be sure the local union or council seal is imprinted on the credentials.

Credentials must be checked for eligibility. Transportation checks will be mailed in ample time for a delegate to purchase his ticket.

Sincerely and fraternally,

J. EARL FERGUSON,
General Secretary-Treasurer.

PROTECTION FROM PREFABRICATED MATERIALS

Supreme Court makes an important decision that collective bargaining agreements to protect workers from prefab materials are constitutional, and the material can be boycotted.

In two recent cases, the Supreme Court has held legal construction union agreements which protect jobsite workers from prefabricated materials, and said that they have the right to boycott such materials. The court ruled in two cases by 5 to 4 margins that "before we may say that Congress meant to strike from workers' hands the economic weapons traditionally used against their employers' efforts to abolish their jobs, that meaning should plainly appear. . . ."

Legislative history, the majority opinion said, does not show that Congress intended to outlaw agreements designed to preserve work for employees of a primary employer.

The decisions covered two cases, the first a dispute between the Carpenters and the Philadelphia General Contractors Association and the second between the Asbestos Workers and the Houston Insulation Contractors Association. The first case involved the use of prefabricated doors on a housing project, the second the use of off-site precut materials for insulating pipes.

Justice William J. Brennan, writing for the majority in both cases, said that the national labor law gives unions and management wide latitude to negotiate their differences and that Congress "had no thought of prohibiting agreements directed to work preservation." Arguments against such agreements should be addressed to Congress, Brennan wrote. "It may be that the time has come for re-evaluation of the basic content of collective bargaining," he added, "but that is for Congress."

Brennan was joined in the majority by Chief Justice Earl Warren and Justices Abe Fortas, Byron R. White and John M. Harlan. Justice Peter Stewart for the minority, including Justices Hugo L. Black, William O. Douglas and Tom C. Clark, said national labor law condemns agreements under which an employer agrees to refrain from handling products of another manufacturer and that the Philadelphia and Houston contracts were illegal. The dissent added that the court majority has "substituted its own notions of sound labor policy for the words of Congress."

In both cases the union, under terms of the agreements, directed its members not to hang the prefabricated doors or to install the precut insulating materials.

The National Labor Relations Board had upheld the right of the Carpenters in Philadelphia to refuse to install the prefitted doors under their contract. The U.S. Seventh Court of Appeals reversed the board and ruled the action violated the "hot cargo" Landrum-Griffin amendments to the NLRA. The top court reversed that finding and supported the board's position.

Both Democrats and Republicans in the Senate are pushing for a bill to make on-site picketing legal once more for the building and construction trades. Seven Democrats and three Republicans are sponsoring legislation which would return to the trades their traditional right.

The two chief sponsors of the legislation are Senators Wayne Morse (D.-Ore.) and Thomas H. Kuchel (R.-Calif.), who led off with major speeches marking the introduction of the bill into the Senate. The purpose, Morse told the Senate, is to "restore parity of treatment . . . between construction workers and their nonconstruction brethren." Those of you who have followed the issue closely know that the inequities of the law — principally brought about by a court interpretation of the Taft-Hartley Act restrictions on "secondary" boycotts — work unfairly against construction trades.

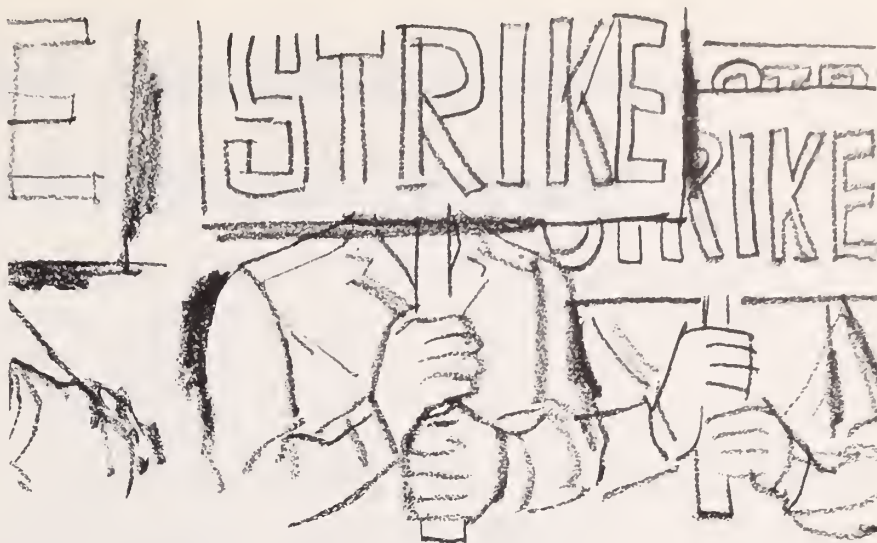

Senator Morse added that a contractor who employs a non-union sub — the major reason for job-site picketing — is not an "innocent bystander" or a "neutral" third party to a labor dispute on the site. The secondary boycott ban, he points out, is designed to protect employers who are not involved in any way with a labor dispute, and therefore really does not apply in many construction site cases.

In his speech, Senator Kuchel noted that the 1967 proposed legislation is virtually the same as that proposed by Eisenhower in 1954 and co-authored by John Kennedy when he was a Senator. "It is high time action was taken," Kuchel said.

Other sponsors of the bill are Senators Clifford Case (R.-N.J.), Joseph Clark (D.-Pa.), Philip A. Hart (D.-Mich.), Jacob K. Javits (R.-N.Y.), Lee Metcalf (D.-Mont.), Eugene J. McCarthy (D.-Minn.), and Harrison A. Williams, Jr. (D.-N.J.).

In the House, hearings on a bill introduced by Rep. Frank Thompson, Jr. (D.-N.J.) have already been concluded, and the bill has been OK'd by the full House Labor Committee. In late May it was awaiting action by the House Rules Committee in scheduling it for floor debate and a vote.

Although this session of Congress has been less productive than the last, the Situs Picketing liberalization legislation may get to a vote on the floors of both houses before adjournment. The bipartisan support and the long record of need give it great urgency. In the last session of Congress the bill moved very close to predicted passage when it was blocked in the House Education and Labor Committee by Rep. Adam Clayton Powell, who refused to clear the bill for floor consideration. It therefore died when Congress adjourned.

"The bill was on its way," remarked Building and Construction Trades Department head Cornelius J. Haggerty in a recent radio interview program, when Powell's "unprecedented act" stopped it cold. "It had cleared the committees on the House side and was on the calendar for action. We had plenty of votes to pass it in the house, and I feel sure the same was true in the Senate," Haggerty said.

In early testimony before the House, Labor Secretary Willard Wirtz said the bill was "long overdue." He reminded the House that four presidents have favored the amendment.

Virtually every segment of organized labor went on record in support of the legislation in the House hearings. AFL-CIO President George

Meany gave it his unqualified blessing, and the Industrial Union Department, the Maritime Trades Department and the Metal Trades Department, backed it up. The Railway Labor Executives Associations also endorsed the measure, speaking for all 23 affiliated unions, with the observation that "one of the oldest and greatest traditions of the American labor movement is that an injury to one is an injury to all."

Walter P. Reuther, President of the Industrial Union Department, noted, "there can be no justification for depriving building and construction tradesmen of the same rights enjoyed by workers in virtually all the rest of the nation's industries. This injustice cries out for speedy correction," and failure to rectify it would be a "grave injury" to our democratic system.

Predictably, employer groups opposed the bill. Spokesmen for the U.S. Chamber of Commerce testifying in the House hearings said that labor unions already have too much power, and that Congress should be considering tougher labor laws instead of more lenient laws.

Before formal consideration of the measure begins in the Senate, it will have to pass the House.

Southern California District Council of Lathers

WHEREAS: We the delegates of Southern California District Council of Lathers are fully aware of the work and sacrifices being made by our General President Sal Maso on and in behalf of the entire membership of our International Union.

Buckeye State Council Resolution

The delegates of the Buckeye State Council of Lathers, at their meeting held on April 22, 1967, in Cleveland, Ohio, wish to express their sincerest appreciation to General President Sal Maso and General Secretary J. Earl Ferguson for their inspiring efforts in carrying out the duties of their respective office, and

WHEREAS: Their dedicated service and resourcefulness has gained new stature for the L.I.U., and

WHEREAS: They diligently strive to make right the injustices that have been rendered to the membership of the L.I.U., and

WHEREAS: They have performed the duties of their respective office with dignity and have shown the true meaning of our motto "THE INJURY TO ONE IS THE CONCERN OF ALL," and

THEREFORE, NOW BE IT RESOLVED:

That the delegates of the Buckeye State Council of Lathers unanimously endorse Brother Sal Maso for re-election to the office of General President and Brother J. Earl Ferguson for re-election to the office of General Secretary at the 26th Convention of the L.I.U. to be held at the Americana Hotel, Bal Harbor, Florida on September 11-15, 1967, and

BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED:

That a copy of this Resolution be mailed to the General Secretary with a request that it be published in the "LATHER."

Welcome to a New Council

A charter was recently presented to the South Carolina State Council of Lathers. Shown receiving the charter from General President Sal Maso is N. A. (Nate) Esclavon, President, and James Miller, Secretary (between Mr. Maso and Mr. Esclavon). With delegates, in the middle of the back row, is International Representative Walton Parker.

Congress Considers Other Issues of Interest to Labor

Among the issues now pending before Congress of interest to organized labor and the construction trades, are amendments to the social security laws. Among other changes, the President has asked for old age social security benefits to be increased by an average of 20 percent, and an increase in the ceiling on allowable self-earned income from the present $1,500 to $1,680. By late May, the only Congressional action on the measure was completion of hearings in the House, but a number of legislators and organizations—the AFL-CIO among them—has been pushing for the legislation.

The series of rallies organized by the AFL-CIO to demonstrate the mass public support behind the social security bill have been an outstanding success. In a series of rallies top AFL-CIO officers and distinguished speakers have participated, including Vice President Hubert Humphrey as well as legislators and civil rights leaders.

In an address at the New York Rally, AFL-CIO Legislative Director Andrew J. Biemiller spoke for George Meany, noting that the same kind of rank-and-file support is needed for the social security amendment as was so effective in getting medicare through. President Meany feels that the bill is a "down payment" on a needed 50 percent increase in social security tax paid by workers and employers.

In Indianapolis, one of the featured speakers was Senator Vance Hartke, who has introduced legislation to remove the earnings limitation on people receiving old age benefits under social security. The Senator pointed out that the law now places no limit on people receiving post-retirement income from rents, stocks and bonds, or interest from invested money, as is the case with earned income. Since he was elected in 1958, Senator Hartke has been instrumental twice in raising the earnings limit, and has consistently urged its removal completely. "It is time," he said, "we fulfill our obligations to those who pay their own way through life and wish to continue without being a burden to others."

Senator Hartke pointed out that nearly a third of all retired persons fall in the poverty class. "When the $1.40 an hour federal minimum wage took effect this year, the full-time earnings of a worker at the minimum became $2,800. As low as this is, it is nearly three times the average Social Security benefit of single retired workers and more than 60 per cent higher than that of a retired couple," continued Senator Hartke.

"The purpose of the Social Security program is to provide security, and particularly the security of an income after retirement. So long as the limitation remains, we give that security in greater degree to those who are already the most secure in their accumulation of resources. We must extend it also to those who find they must continue to work."

Two other social benefit bills have been introduced by Senator Hartke. One would provide protection for employee pension funds, and the other would raise the individual income tax exemption from $600 to $1,000.

Hartke's system of protection for private pension funds relies on a public trust fund concept, supported by premiums from the participating pension plans approved by the treasury. A companion bill has been introduced in the House by Rep. Theodore Kufnerman (R.-N.Y.). The system could be compared with the insurance for bank deposits provided by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation.

Hartke says that there have been almost a million American workers deprived of pensions they helped to pay for under private plans that folded through a business failure or merger. Most private pension plans remain sound as long as the business remains healthy, but cannot continue to provide benefits if the continuing source of industry income is cut off.

Hartke's system would pool contributions from all participating pension plans as a hedge against this eventuality.

In justification for an increase of the personal tax exemption from $600 to $1,000, Hartke points out that the $600 figure has become obsolete with the increase in the cost of living. The figure was adopted 20 years ago, he notes, and the cost of living in the period has increased by 40 percent. Prior to World War II, individual income tax exemption was $750, was reduced to $500 in 1942 for wartime tax revenue, and then only partially replaced with the $600 limit in 1947. "Thus," Hartke said, "we have never returned even to prewar levels, let alone modernize the tax exemption in accord with more recent cost-of-living increases."

Another interesting suggestion from Hartke is to give the taxpayer a tax break roughly equivalent to the 7 percent investment tax credit recommended by the Administration to business. "While I certainly favor giving a tax credit to help the expansion of industry—and thus create more jobs," Hartke said, "I am making a strong fight to give equal treatment to the individual American taxpayer."

The proposal is to reduce the 7 percent excise tax on auto sales to 4 percent, and reduce the 10 percent excise tax on telephone calls to 3 percent.

Under another legislative proposal—from Rep. Philip Burton (D.-Calif.)—single persons in certain categories would get a head-of-household deduction to lessen their tax load. Congressman Burton would grant such a break to all unremarried widows and widowers, all individuals over 35 who have never been married, or those who have been separated or divorced for three years or more. He would continue, of course, the current tax leniency for married heads-of-household.

"As a practical matter," Burton said, "working men and women in these categories have substantially the same financial responsibilities as those presently recognized as heads of households under present law."

Greater Boston District Council Resolution

We, The delegates to the Greater Boston District Council of Lathers wish to express our sincere gratitude to our General President, Sal Maso, and commend him for untiring militancy in protecting the work jurisdiction of our International Union from encroachment.

WHEREAS: Through his aggressive court action he has instilled the rank and file membership with a universal resolve to diligently protect our rightful trade jurisdiction; and

WHEREAS: General President Maso, by his dynamic leadership, has manifested his deep concern for the good and welfare of the L.I.U.;

NOW THEREFORE BE IT RESOLVED:

That the Greater Boston District Council of Lathers endorse our General President Sal Maso for re-election to the office of General President of the Wood, Wire and Metal Lathers International Union at the Convention to be held at the Americana Hotel, Bal Harbor, Florida on September 11-15, 1967; and

BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED:

That Vice Presidents C. J. Haggerty, E. R. Baldwin, C. H. White, R. J. Hamilton, A. H. Burton, H. J. Sheerin, J. M. Sheehan and General Secretary J. Earl Ferguson be endorsed by this Council for re-election. Their actions in working for the best interests of the membership of the L.I.U. have warranted this endorsement.

Plaster vs. Wallboard In New York City

The Plastering Institute of Greater New York recently released a paper on the comparative benefits of lath and plaster construction, and some important excerpts from the paper follow:

"There are approximately 115 City Housing projects in New York City, all of them currently in lath and plaster. These projects, a majority of which are unquestionably subject to the most strenuous wear or greatest neglect, contain a total of more than 130,000 units whose walls and ceilings are maintained and repaired by a crew of only 30 plasterers working on a year-round basis. The cost of keeping this enormous number of units in proper condition amounts to slightly more than $2. per year per unit. We urge the reader to consider whether such a job could be done at such a price if the buildings in question had been built with walls and partitions of gyp. board.

"Finally, we should like to add a word of caution. The reader will inevitably seek a Con against which to measure the Pro. We have stated above that the criteria for comparing plaster with gyp. board had been 'badly thrown out of focus' by gyp. board promoters. We are not baying at the moon. For example, two years ago the Owens-Corning Fiberglas Corporation published a handsome and selectively detailed booklet entitled, 'Solutions to Noise Control Problems in the Construction of Houses, Apartments, Motels and Hotels.' This study features, on pages 12 through 21, 'a series of wall constructions' (appropriately not labeled 'standard') which have differing abilities to reduce or impede airborne noises.

"The series selected and examined 20 different wall constructions, each neatly graphed and in cross-section detail. Only five of these constructions are of plaster. Of these five, one specifies 3/8-inch gypsum lath and plaster (about as thin as one could go) and another specifies plaster alone on one side and 1/2-inch gypsum lath and plaster on the other. It is also noteworthy that the first eight examples presented in the series specify gyp. board constructions whose sound transmission ratings improve radically from the low 30's to the 50's. Only after this excellent progression has been established do the writers introduce the simplest lath and plaster construction, one which boasts an unflatteringly low STL rating. In an equally prejudicial way, the ratings of the first eight (wallboard) examples are based on controlled laboratory findings. The first plaster example is rated on the basis of field tests.

"Such heads-I-win, tails-you-lose presentations, well disseminated by national sales forces, have made a true comparison of plaster and gyp.

board increasingly difficult for architects, builders and public officials in the last several years. We believe it is time to go back to primary sources and to look at all the facts. This is particularly true for those charged with planning and overseeing the rebuilding of our cities.

"The Plastering Institute does not list the comparative merits of plaster versus gyp. board simply as an exercise in self-defense. Nor will its membership indulge in the pointless game of name-calling or shouting that 'my materials is better than your material.' We are secure in the conviction (1) that plaster is in fact the superior building material, and (2) that buildings constructed with plaster partitions are sounder, both structurally and economically, than similar buildings made of gyp. board."

Special Joint Meeting

Lathers Play A Vital Role

The Assembly Hall is an excellent example of the flexibility of lath and plaster systems, and demonstrates the effort being made by lathing unions to produce highly skilled workmen who are not only fine mechanics, but who also have a feeling for architectural design." This is the way architect Jim Lawrence, of the Forest Lawn architectural staff, described the role of lathers in helping to build the new facility in Hollywood Hills. The attractive building, as are so many public buildings today, was designed with sound control as a primary concern. The architects wanted the "ultimate," and with Lathers from Local 42, working for the Clyde Hawk Lathing company, they came as close as is humanly possible with the knowledge of sound as it is today.

"For the stage looking back," says architect Lawrence, "there are no dead pockets in ceilings and walls. To achieve the desired sound values, ceilings and walls take unique shapes. On much of the metal lathing work, we had to play the job by ear, relying heavily on the Clyde Hawk people. Particularly helpful was Bud Rutherford, the foreman, who was instrumental in accomplishing the design through highly skilled layout work. He was fussier than we were, and we think that we are pretty fussy."

Inside the building, three decorative, curved, suspended ceilings were engineered by the Forest Lawn Company's staff, headed by Walter N. Montgomery, AIA. The ceilings are suspended on hangers dropped from a metal deck roof.

The ceiling canopy over the stage spans 65' across the Assembly Hall. This ceiling is separated by a curtain slot and a feature lighting slot. The other decorative curved ceilings extend a lesser distance across the hall and are separated by another lighting slot.

These ceilings all have 4" insula-

Both architect and owners of the new Forest Lawn Assembly Hall in Hollywood Hills praise lathers' skill and feeling for design tion above the metal lath installation. The curved ceiling design was followed by forming the 1½" carrying channel on the job site and tying the carrying channels to the hangars. The ¾" cross furring was then installed.

The Clyde Hawk crews then tied 3.4 metal lath to the framing members. Ceilings are finished with smooth cement plaster.

Adding to the lathing challenge on these ceilings were several areas where curved light troffers were constructed. Here, too, lathers bent the carrying channels to achieve the design.

Walls are constructed with 4" structural steel studs in lengths varying from 28' to 36', ¾" furring channels, metal lath and smooth finish plaster. Walls are insulated with 2" insulation batts.

There are three louvred metal sections 30' high and 20' wide, installed on the Assembly Hall side walls. The louvres can be adjusted from the projection booth and will serve to absorb the sound.

The Assembly Hall has a specially designed projection booth with three projection ports and three viewing port. The booth is constructed with structural studs, furring channels, metal lath and is finished with smooth cement plaster. Casing beads were used to trim port openings.

In the foyer lathers constructed a suspended semi-circular shaped ceiling. Here the crews bent ¾" furring channels on job site to complete the design and applied metal lath to framing members. This ceiling also has a smooth plaster finish. The foyer ceiling houses a large lighting assembly.

There is also a suspended soffit above the entryway built with metal lath and finished with smooth plaster. This soffit accommodates entryway lighting.

At far left, lathers Tim Whitesell and Frank Hawk tie metal lath on decorative suspended curved ceiling in the Assembly hall. The two other views show metal lath application on the suspended ceilings at other locations in the Hall as it neared completion. The left picture shows a 65 foot curtain and feature lighting slot. The other shows another lighting slot separating intricately lathed ceilings.

Plastering work on the Assembly Hall at the Hollywood Hills Cemetery was done by plastering contractor Ralph F. Jones. General contractor was L. E. Dixon Company.

Carl Wetzel, son of Raymond Wetzel, who is President of Local No. 5 in Detroit, Michigan, won't give up easily. In the action-packed world amateur ice hockey championships, held this spring in Vienna, Carl was kissed by a hot puck but stuck with the game despite the blood-soaked bandage around his head, and when it was all over, he was credited with 75 saves. Although the U.S. lost the game to Czechoslovakia, 8-3, Wetzel's performance landed him the job of tournament goalie for the U.S. Because Carl had played professionally with the Detroit Red Wings in the National Hockey League, he was ineligible to go on to the Winter Olympics next year.

Like his father, Carl is pursuing a lathing career, and is now an apprentice in Local No. 5, when he's not busy catching pucks in top-bracket hockey games.

Badger State Council Resolution

We, the delegates of the Badger State Council of Lathers, at this meeting held on April 1, 1967 at Milwaukee, Wisconsin, wish to express our sincerest appreciation to our General President, Sal Maso, for the tremendous effort he has put forth to protect the trade jurisdiction of the Lathers; and

WHEREAS: General President Sal Maso has rendered aid and assistance wherever needed to keep all local unions, state and district councils intact; and

WHEREAS: His sincere, and dedicated service to the lathers of our International has given our International Union new leadership and respect;

NOW THEREFORE BE IT RESOLVED:

That the Badger State Council of Lathers and its delegates this 1st day of April, 1967, do hereby unanimously endorse General President Sal Maso for re-election to the office of General President of the Wood, Wire and Metal Lathers International Union at the forthcoming convention to be held at Bal Harbor, Florida on September 11-15, 1967.

BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED:

That a copy of this resolution be forwarded to General President Sal Maso requesting that it be published in the next issue of the "LATHER."

A Hospital Designed to Grow

When the Tri-State Baptist Convention, of Memphis, Tennessee and Arkansas planned its new structures for the Baptist Memorial Hospital in Memphis in 1950, the organization recognized that the hospital would have to accommodate increasing numbers of patients. Memphis is the largest medical center in the mid-south, and the city attracts patients from all over the area. With growth capability therefore pretty important, plans were laid for expansion. The first major addition was a 13-story building called the Madison East Unit, which was begun in 1952, and completed in 1955 at a cost of about $8 million. Then, construction was begun on a second, almost identical wing, called Union East, which was designed from the outset to grow, ultimately, as tall as Madison East.

Madison East, itself, was not through growing. Then 13-stories tall, it had been built solidly enough to rise to 19 when the expansion program for this complex of buildings was complete, and Union East would, therefore, be 19 stories too. The foundations and the first floor of the wing, completed in 1962, were built strongly enough to take the load.

In 1965, work was begun to raise Union East another 18 stories, and to add six floors to Madison East. At that time, the Baptist hospital was turning away hundreds of patients a month, as the growth in the needs for patient beds outstripped even this growth plan, which is one of the most unusual and carefully thought-out in the United States.

As work progressed on the new additions, a peak work force of about 17 lathers, employed by the J. D. Strong Lathing and Plastering firm of Memphis—all members of Local No. 55—were busy installing lath for suspended lath and plaster ceilings. All of the patients' rooms were constructed with lath and plaster for the cleanliness which is indispensable in hospitals.

Out of the 19 stories walled in, however, lathers will finish only 15. The remaining four will be left as shells, to be completed subsequently at the rate of about one a year.

As Union East's floors went in, work forged ahead on the final six stories on the original Madison East, and like the top floors on the newer wing, these will be finished off at a later date.

All of the lathing work, which was supplied by J. D. Strong to general contractor S&W Construction Co.,

Inc., was supervised by foreman Willie Woods.

Beyond the basic floors, ceilings and walls of the hospital building, great planning has gone into the selection of materials, and the design of room furnishings. The hospital planning team meets weekly to consider whether the very latest innovations or new materials may be used.

Missouri State Council Resolution

The Wood, Wire and Metal Lathers' International Union has as its General President, Sal Maso, and as its General Secretary-Treasurer, J. Earl Ferguson, presently due for re-election at our next International Convention, to be held at Miami Beach, Florida, September 11-15, 1967.

WHEREAS: General President Sal Maso and General Secretary-Treasurer J. Earl Ferguson have given so completely of their time as members and officers of the Wood, Wire and Metal Lathers' International Union, and having exhibited to the highest degree the characteristics of honesty, integrity, and moral character; and

WHEREAS: The membership of our International Union would be best served by maintaining in office these fine, dedicated Union Officers;

THEREFORE, NOW BE IT RESOLVED:

That the delegates of the Missouri State Council of Lathers, here assembled at a meeting in Columbia, Missouri, March 18, 1967, go on record as unanimously endorsing for re-nomination and election, Sal Maso, for General President, and J. Earl Ferguson, for the office of General Secretary-Treasurer, of the Wood, Wire and Metal Lathers' International Union; and

BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED:

That this resolution be published in the "Lather" at its next publication, so as to give notice of this action taken.

The day that made the difference, of course, was Nov. 8, 1966, election day. And the difference is glaringly apparent in a comparison of the charts.

At top is the Congressional Quarterly boxscore on progress of major legislation at about the time of Easter recess in the first session of the 89th Congress, 1965.

Below left is the CQ boxscore as Congress went into its Easter recess little more than a week ago. You can almost feel the difference.

A sense of urgency swept the 89th Congress. There was much to be done, and the liberal class of 1964 that came in on the Johnson landslide meant to do it. By Easter recess in the first session of the 89th Congress:

- Medicare was well along;
- Appalachia aid was already enacted;
- Regional medical centers legislation was underway;
- The House had passed and the Senate was working on sweeping education legislation;
- Both bodies were conducting hearings on higher education;
- Water pollution control was about to go on the books;
- A major housing bill was en route;
- Overhaul of our restrictive immigration laws was imminent;

- Manpower amendments, drug controls and the voting rights bill all were in the works.

As the chart below left shows, no sense of urgency prevails in the 90th Congress. Though there is still much to be done, the congressional will to do it is missing.

It vanished November 8 when the solid liberal majority in Congress was chopped, and the power of the conservative coalition was resurrected.

As the 90th Congress went into the 1967 Easter recess, headway on major legislation was at a minimum, as the chart shows.

The only program enacted involves supplemental funds for the war in Viet Nam. The Senate approved a consular treaty with the Soviet Union. Some progress has been made on the investment tax credit and congressional reform.

Other legislation is in the hearing stage at best. Much of the action centers not on needed new programs but on funding existing programs. Many of these are in trouble in the new Congress.

It's all because of election day 1966, which is something to chew on for there's going to be another important election day in about a year and a half.

103 Years of Combined Service

Few father-son teams in the LIU can boast the long record chalked up by Vice President E. R. Baldwin and his father. The elder Mr. Baldwin was initiated as a member of the LIU in 1901, and Vice President Baldwin became a member in 1930. Combined, they have 103 years, an enviable record deserving of high praise. Our congratulations to both, and our wish that they both may continue in good health to realize a fervent hope for many more years of service.

Support For National Bargaining

A massive two-day lobbying effort was organized by the CLC in mid-April to counteract moves by the Quebec-based Confederation of National Trade Unions to replace national bargaining with sectional bargaining. The importance of retaining national-level bargaining was explained to members of Parliament by over 200 members of the CLC who knocked on doors to discuss the issue.

The union delegates, who came from most parts of Canada, were welcomed to Ottawa by Claude Jodoin, CLC president. "This is a question of principle," Mr. Jodoin told them. "We stand for the co-operation of all races, creeds, colours and languages."

Before starting their lobbying the delegates attended a briefing session under the chairmanship of Joseph Morris, CLC executive vice-president. Donald MacDonald, CLC secretary-treasurer and a member of the Canada Labour Relations Board, outlined the background of raids against CLC unions and of attacks on the existing legislation and on the Labour Relations Board.

"Efforts are being made to break down a system that has been built over the years and which has served Canadian workers well," he said. "The Labour Board is completely independent and has been since its inception. It is a complete falsehood to say that parties cannot make their representations in their own language. On a number of occasions the CNTU has declined the services of a translator or simultaneous translation that are provided by the Board."

William Dodge, CLC executive vice-president, said the CLC had rallied support to wage a battle on a strictly trade union position—the preservation of national units which had brought benefits to workers in all parts of Canada.

Louis Laberge, president of the Quebec Federation of Labour, outlined the position of that organization and pointed out that the CNTU had opposed the breaking up of bargaining units in Quebec, yet sought it nationally. Mr. Laberge said:

"It is not merely a matter of determining whether a bargaining unit is to be cut to measure as political expediency for the sake of a minority group of employees at Radio-Canada or on the railways; but whether the Quebec public service sector is to be carved up by department or region; whether the organization of Alcan personnel is to be mangled; whether there is to be recognition of cultural bargaining units at Canadian Vickers, at CIL and at the Royal Victoria Hospital. In other words, whether to admit trade union plurality within an enterprise any time it might be claimed by a minority of the workers."

Yvon Cherrier, vice-president of the Association of Radio and Television Employees of Canada, outlined the situation affecting CBC employees. The CNTU was no longer a labour organization, it had become a part of the separatist movement, he charged.

Arthur Gibbons, executive secretary of a group of major railway unions, pointed out that 18 railway unions negotiate on a national basis and their collective agreements apply on a national basis.

Claude Edwards, president of the Public Service Alliance of Canada, said throughout 60 years of efforts to obtain collective bargaining for the civil service the CNTU had stood on the side lines giving no support; the CLC had supported the civil servants. Then, when bargaining was attained, the CNTU was attempting to step in to break up units. Present plans call for 72 bargaining units in the federal civil service and further fragmentation would result in chaos.

Forest Industry Agreement Signed

A significant agreement between two major unions covering an important part of their West Coast operations was announced today by Claude Jodoin, president of the Canadian Labour Congress. The unions involved are the International Woodworkers of America and the International Brotherhood of Pulp, Sulphite and Paper Mill Workers. The agreement, between Local I-85 and the I.W.A. and Local 476 of the I.B.P.S. & P.M.W., which resulted from discussions concerning the new pulp operation at Gold River, BC., is designed to avoid jurisdictional differences and to pave the way for a closer working relationship between the two organizations.

"As a result of CLC concern in a situation developing in the British Columbia forest industry, meetings were arranged with the two unions in Ottawa late last month," Mr. Jodoin said. "These discussions resulted in a proposal being advanced by the Congress as the basis of a working agreement between these two important affiliates of our organization. Both unions operate in the same industry and in many instances they have contracts with a common employer."

"The proposal made by the Congress was that where the two unions deal with a common employer the operations should be covered by a joint collective bargaining certificate; and that the jurisdiction of both affiliates should be registered with the Congress. It was further proposed that the two unions use this proposal as a basis for developing a mutual assistance agreement leading to the eventual creation of one organization in the industry. It was also suggested that joint negotiations be entered into when the parties are involved with a common employer."

FIRST MINIMUM WAGE LAW FOR WOMEN MASSACHUSETTS 1912

In 1912 the state of Massachusetts passed a minimum wage law governing working women. This law was enacted following an investigation initiated in 1910. After the Bay State passed its law eight other states followed suite in the following year.

The Massachusetts law was based upon the needs revealed in the investigative findings. Minimum wage protections by statute were real advances, but they came at a time when state legislators were giving attention to a wide range of topics in the interest of bettering the conditions of the working people.

At the time of the minimum wage law enactment, there was strong opposition from the entrenched employer interests. But the investigation in Massachusetts had been thorough and the facts literally spoke for themselves.

Women are indebted to the action of the National Consumers' League which made minimum wage for women a part of their ten-year program beginning in 1910. A year later the Women's Trade Union League took parallel action.

The momentum set up by Massachusetts has continued to move giving women a continuing progress in decent wages. That early law was indeed a landmark of labor—especially of women in the labor force.

Visions of Huck Finn! The memory seems to get dimmed by years and our own progress into the age of scientific revolution, but there are still those quiet times, on a lake all his own, for a boy to board a raft with his dog for a short trip into yesterday — or maybe tomorrow. What would you give for a small slice of this yourself?

REPORT

from the General President

SAL MASO

In today's construction world the pace of change is as rapid as anything that could only have been dreamed about a few years ago, and the responsibilities that this rate of change places upon any organized trade are serious indeed. The lathing trade is no exception. There are few areas of the country where you haven't already seen such innovations as large-size lath, thincoat plaster, and automatic tying machines. Furthermore, there have been significant changes in the makeup of our population, and in the attitudes and interests of our young people.

There has been, in the last generation, a revolution in the techniques of interesting people in buying things, and this applies to construction as well as to consumer goods. Whole new techniques of promotion and advertising have helped to sell more of the products of our labor, thereby creating more jobs and in the same stroke making it possible for more of the producers to be consumers as well. Our new world is populated by new buyers—by people who now expect to be shown why this product or that product is better, and our “customers” are no exception.

Right now, these changes in the way things are done—in the way that society moves ahead—make it more and more obvious to those of us who are in daily contact with the industry as well as the trade that two of the missions of the LIU are becoming increasingly inter-related, and important.

I'm talking about Apprenticeship and Promotion, and in the framework of an increasingly competitive construction world. I needn't remind you of the potential impact of competitive materials.

In the last few weeks, I have attended a number of significant meetings: the annual meeting of the lathing and plastering industry which was held the first week in June, which I will tell you more about later, and the mid-June legislative conference of the Building and Construction Trades Department of the AFL-CIO. I've also been constantly on the road, as many of you know, talking with members, the business agents of our locals, and international representatives out in the field where the work is actually taking place. From all of this recent experience there is one major conclusion that should be drawn, and I would like to make it as emphatic as possible.

Promotion of your trade is essential to survival. Unless we make it our business, from individual member to the international headquarters office of the LIU, to tell the architects and the building owners what we can do, and how well we can do it, we may find lathing a trade without an industry.

We need to include the promotional clause in every single local agreement that is signed. We must attack, within the limits imposed by Federal law, the job of jointly promoting the lathing and plastering business with the contractors.

However, regardless of how vital trade promotion is—and I can assure you that it is essential—promotion without manpower is folly. Apprenticeship is the lifeblood of the LIU and any labor organization. In recent weeks there have been a number of calls for men in various areas of the country, and it is essential that we be able to continue to man these jobs. Therefore, I want to underscore the urgent importance of apprenticeship.

It is for this reason that I am pleased and proud to report the announcement of a home study course for apprentices by Leo Schultz, Director of the Joint Apprenticeship Program. The course, which is available at no cost to all areas contributing to the National Lathing Industry's Joint Apprenticeship Program, is a modern, scientifically engineered course.

In areas where there are too few apprentices for a classroom, the Local Joint Apprenticeship Committee can register the apprentices with the National Joint Program for the correspondence course, and the Local Committees will then be kept informed of the progress their apprentices are making in the course. This availability opens up many areas to related instruction where there was no opportunity before.

In addition to the efforts of Leo Schultz, who I want to commend for a truly outstanding job, a great amount of time and knowledge was injected into the course by Jeremiah Burns, Co-Chairman of the Joint Apprenticeship Program and, as most of you know, a respected and capable New York City lathing contractor. Jerry—who I have had the honor of knowing for many years, and for whom I have the greatest personal respect—gave generously and unselfishly of his time.

Also active in the preparation of the course was Vice President Robert Hamilton, who did a great service to the LIU and the industry.

The course is principally a supplement to on-the-job and classroom training, and provides tailored guidance by correspondence. Developed and administered by a professional correspondence organization, it provides each apprentice with five manuals and study guides which cover:

Safety, types of lath structures, materials and tools.

Blueprint reading, partition erection, pilasters, columns, wall furring, openings in walls and partitions.

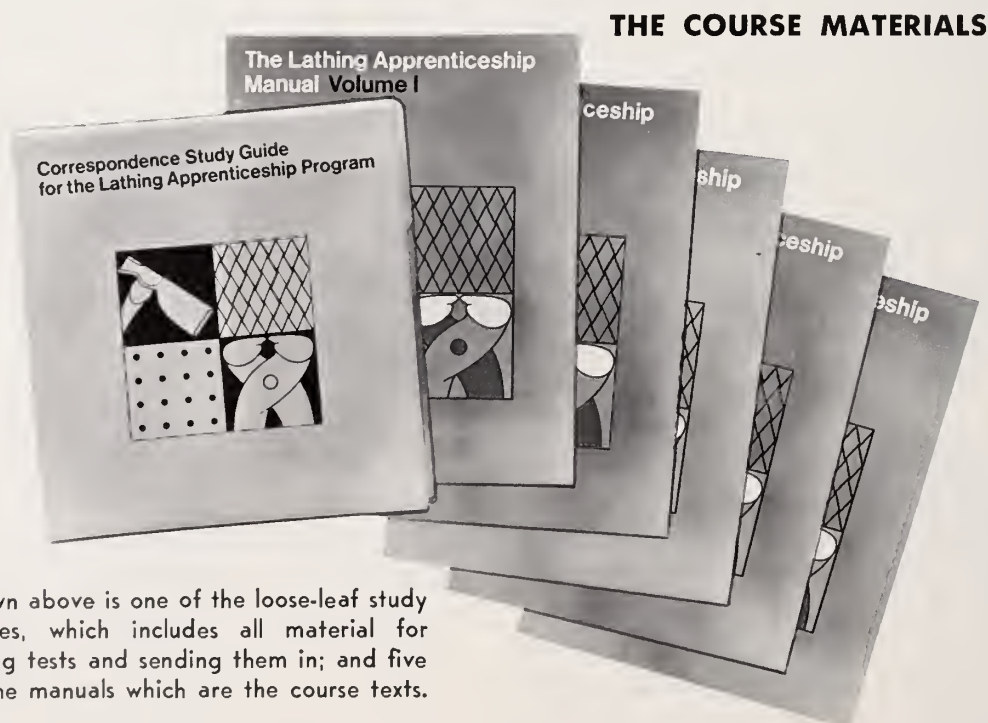

Layout and construction of ceilings, trim and accessories, special construction, exterior wall construction.

Layout and construction of barrel ceiling, lunettes, domes, pendentives, groins and free-form structures.

Acoustical walls and ceilings, fireproofing and fire rating, welding, special bases of lath, prefabricated structures.

Written in clear, plain language, the course uses a step-by-step approach, and is filled with on-the-job problems, instead of theoretical exercises. The apprentice, to complete the course, must demonstrate throughout his completed lessons that he can put his learned knowledge to practical application in solving various kinds of problems.

The course texts are fully illustrated, with clear photographs showing materials, procedures, systems, and structures of all types, from the simplest to the most elaborate. The information is up-to-date, covering the latest refinements and techniques which will be increasingly in demand.

Thoroughly reviewed and approved by a committee of experts, the course represents a major step in our efforts to man for the future. Apprentices enrolled in the course are required to pay a fee of $25, which is fully refunded when they complete the course.

To support this excellent material it is essential that every local agreement include the one cent per hour provision for apprenticeship. I have urged this in the past, and will continue to urge each and every local to do this. Here at LIU headquarters, I will continue to do everything in my power to back up every local that takes the initiative in this regard, and urge them to let me know if there is any obstacle whatsoever standing in the way of full implementation of the apprenticeship program.

Another major event that I want to discuss is the work of the Contracting Plasterers and Lathers International Association at its recent convention. Held from June 1 to June 6 in French Lick, Indiana, this was a working shirtsleeves conference for the most part, at which I had a great number of meetings to attend, and many national industry representatives to talk to. As expected, much of the joint concern centered on apprenticeship here too, and there were meetings on promotion efforts, labor/management relations, the Pension Plan and other subjects which used up every spare moment.

I came away with renewed faith in the contractors, and redoubled awareness of the urgency of the need to promote, and to man jobs. There was a great deal of good will at this meeting. There was also continual requests from the industry representative there to give them men, and I must emphasize this once more, in conclusion. If we don't concern ourselves with making sure that there is a continuing stream of well-qualified men available to take on the jobs which are becoming available, the construction industry is going to have to find another technique.

As of mid-June, there was no report on the jurisdictional dispute on acoustical ceilings, but I will notify you as soon as we receive word.

Sincerely and fraternally,

SAL MASO, General President

Georgia State Council Resolution

We, the delegates of the Georgia State Council of Lathers, at this meeting held on April 30, 1967 at 158½ Auburn Avenue, N. E., Atlanta, Georgia:

WHEREAS: A man that is dedicated to the Lathing Industry and came all out to protect trade jurisdiction and did not surrender to enemy forces when they were trying to infringe upon our trade jurisdiction, President Sal Maso's works have been proven to be satisfactory under duress.

NOW, THEREFORE, BE IT RESOLVED:

That the Georgia State Council of Lathers and our delegates go on record and all out in endorsing our General President, Sal Maso, for reelection to the office of General President at the 26th Convention of the L.I.U. to be held at the Americana Hotel, Bal Harbour, Florida, on September 11-15, 1967.

BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED:

That a copy of this resolution be sent to the General President, Sal Maso, for publication in "The Lather."

Adopted by the Georgia State Council of Lathers April 30, 1967.

REPORT

from the General Secretary-Treasurer

J. EARL FERGUSON

President Johnson has taken some long-needed action against those firms which defy the labor laws of the land and still get fat government contracts, such as the Stevens textile firm which we have discussed in previous reports. The President has directed Attorney General Ramsey Clark to make a survey of remedial measures, following a meeting between the President and a Committee of AFL-CIO Representatives who had been directed by the AFL-CIO Executive Council to discuss the problem with the chief executive.

The members of the commission—Former President David Dubinsky of the Ladies Garment Workers; President William Pollack of the Textile Workers Union; President I. W. Abel of the United Steelworkers and President Lee Minton of the Glass Bottle Blowers—reported that they had a “sympathetic hearing” with the President.

This is an encouraging step in the right direction. Nevertheless, we wish to urge that action on the problem at the national level move rapidly beyond the study stage, and end finally and completely such a flagrant abuse of the good will of the people of the nation. A simple solution, as we have mentioned before, would be an executive order from President Johnson which would treat transgressors of labor law in the same way that violators of laws against minority group discrimination are punished. They can be denied government contracts.

Some important new information about apprenticeship and discrimination has been unearthed in recent Senate hearings. Questioning Labor Secretary Willard Wirtz, Chairman Ribicoff (D-Conn.) of the Executive Reorganization Subcommittee asked where the detailed report “Negro Participation in Apprenticeship Training” was hiding. It was a year-long study by two professors from the University of Texas, and it was submitted to the Labor Department in December of 1966. “I am going to arrange this week for its full release,” Wirtz replied, and the report was shortly in the hands of the Senators. The first paragraph summarizes the professors’ conclusions: “Although we are persuaded that discrimination continues to be an important problem, we are convinced that its relative importance has declined in recent years and that measures to recruit, train and counsel qualified applicants currently are much more important.” Among the detailed findings:

- The young Negro who is qualified to enter the trades is not interested. He would prefer to become a doctor or lawyer.
- There is really little hostility against minority group members, once they get into apprenticeship programs.
- Control of apprenticeship programs should remain in the hands of local administrators, and not be administered from above.

The study concluded, also, that legal punitive measures, although still necessary, are not the best answer. “Negative sanctions alone,” the report states, “are likely to be ineffective because they exaggerate the importance of discrimination, and create a defensiveness by the parties that will produce only token changes.”

“There can be little question,” the report continues, “that these punitive measures have done much to at least lower the formal racial barriers to Negroes. At the same time, however, they have created certain fears and suspicions by unions, employers, and government apprenticeship agencies which make it difficult to implement cooperative efforts to open job opportunities to Negroes. Anti-discrimination agencies have generated hostility in the construction industry particularly by giving the impression that the government is going to use ‘blackmail’ . . . in order to require preferential treatment by Negroes, which could not be done legally under the law.

The report's authors think that the international unions bear the greatest responsibility in eradicating discrimination because they have the power, and behind it is the threat of increasing government regulation and damage to the movement if the problem is not solved. "It would seem better," they state, "for the internationals to proceed vigorously—through trusteeships—against the worst offenders than to let discriminating unions damage the whole labor movement."

Another point in the report refers to the "meager results of the recruiting campaigns undertaken in various northern cities during the early 1960's."

What can be done about the problem? The professors say that the best therapy would be specialized educational programs to bring Negroes up to the achievement levels of whites. "It is not surprising," they say, "that the average Negro high school graduate should have difficulty passing even a fair test for entering into an apprenticeship program." Also valuable, they think, would be pre-apprenticeship training to qualify Negroes better.

After all of the criticism that the Building Trades have been subjected to over this matter, we think it is high time that impartial information, such as that revealed in the still-unpublished report, be given the widest possible reading.

The TVA and the Tennessee Valley AFL-CIO just celebrated a 30th anniversary—the 30th year of labor-management harmony. In a banquet ceremony in Chattanooga, Tennessee recently marking the long record of amity, President Gordon Freeman of the IBEW told nearly 750 representatives of labor and management from all TVA states that the experience is a "yardstick" of labor relations. Director William Simkin of the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service said it was a "living monument" that was worthy of emulation.

We wish to add our congratulations, and wish all concerned another 30 years of cooperative understanding.

Convention time is fast approaching. Credentials have been coming in at a fairly good pace, and are being processed as quickly as possible. Sections 207 through 222 of the LIU Constitution set forth the rules that govern Convention procedure.

Resolutions must be in compliance with Section 215 of the LIU Constitution.

Delegates and alternate delegates must make their own reservations for rooms at the Americana Hotel in Miami Beach. All locals and councils were mailed cards for this purpose. Should you need additional cards, please advise.

Sincerely and fraternally,

J. EARL FERGUSON,
General Secretary-Treasurer.

Western Canadian Council Resolution

WHEREAS: We the delegates assembled here at the Washington-Oregon State Council of Lathers and Western Canadian Council of Lathers on the 29 day of April 1967 in the city of Vancouver, B.C. are fully aware of the untiring time and sacrifices that our General President Sal Maso is giving on and in behalf of the entire membership of the Wood, Wire and Metal Lathers International Union and we know that he will continue to give this time and sacrifices to protect and defend our trade jurisdiction in our present fight with the carpenters and will leave no stone unturned to regain and retain the work which rightfully belongs to the lather and;

WHEREAS: All the officers of the Wood, Wire and Metal Lathers International Union assist and give their full support to our International General President Sal Maso in his efforts so therefore let it be;

RESOLVED That this convention of the Washington, Oregon State Council of Lathers and Western Canadian Council of Lathers go on record as unanimously endorsing General President Sal Maso and all incumbent officers for re-election at the Wood, Wire and Metal Lathers International Union convention which is to be held in Miami, Florida in Sept. 1967.

SIGNED: WESTERN CANADIAN COUNCIL OF LATHERS
HERB FULLJAMES, President
SIG. A. ANDERSON, Fin. Secy.-Treas.

RESOLUTION

WHEREAS, the Wood, Wire & Metal Lathers International Union is carrying out its progressive objectives through the efforts of the Officers of our International, specially through the untiring efforts of our General President, Sal Maso. His vision and dynamic personality has won the respect of the members he represents, the employers and the leaders of the other building trades; and

WHEREAS, since taking over the reins of the International, he has fought tirelessly to establish our organization in the position of leadership and respect. He has adjudicated all matters on a fair and reasonable level; and

WHEREAS, legal tactics have been employed judiciously whenever necessary to protect and perpetuate our trade jurisdiction; and

WHEREAS, President Maso has traveled extensively throughout the United States and Canada, informing, alerting and uniting the members of the Lathers International Union; and

WHEREAS, we recognize and appreciate his outstanding ability and foresight;

THEREFORE BE IT RESOLVED that the New York State Council of Lathers go on record endorsing General President Sal Maso and all incumbent Officers for re-election at the 26th Convention of the Wood, Wire & Metal Lathers' International Union to be held in Bal Harbour, Florida in September, 1967; and

BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED that a copy of this Resolution be sent to the International Union for publication in The Lather.

It's Time to Save Our Cities

In the average central city today, the slum is the problem. While the majority of the population steps up the spendable take-home pay ladder, the festering, decaying portions of our cities, where the destitute live, cry for assistance. The Building Trades have pledged themselves to do their part, whatever it takes, to right this wrong.

In recent testimony before a Government Operations subcommittee headed by Sen. Abraham A. Ribicoff (D-Conn.), Building Trades President C. J. Haggerty and other top Department leaders said the construction unions stand prepared to come up with the "practical technology and highly efficient procedures," and that slum housing is the nation's "most important and urgent" domestic problem.

Presenting the Building Trades viewpoint, Haggerty testified:

"We are here this morning, Mr. Chairman, to offer no quick final solutions. We cannot in good conscience tell your committee that we can offer to build houses at half price. We are sure you know that solution oriented persons—whether they are from universities, or other institutions—to succeed in solving this tremendous problem must of necessity first become problem oriented. There must be a movement from those who envision happy dreams toward those who are capable of developing a practical solution.

"We have no instant solution, nor do we have any 50% discount ideas to solve a problem which, in our opinion, will involve multi-billions of dollars, and which must be put realistically to work quickly. We have not yet seen or heard any other group come forward with a comprehensive plan to generate real action, to get the problem out of discussion, on to the drawing boards and underway to reality. Certainly, no one person has the ultimate answer.

"We enthusiastically supported the creation of the new cabinet Department of Housing and Urban Development. We enthusiastically supported the Demonstration Cities program and we failed to see them approach the problem in a 'brick and mortar manner'. We see the same old diversification and dilution among and between agencies.

"For example, we see Housing Assistance Administration doing housing construction in Philadelphia, while the Bureau of Indian Affairs is constructing housing in Alaska. We see an agency charged with the largest construction program in the history of the world, with no trained construction personnel, labor or management, on its top staff with one exception, this being a labor relations director in Housing Assistance Administration.

According to a recent column by Richard L. Wilson, National Columnist, there are 21 Federal Departments and Agencies, 150 Federal Bureaus and divisions and 92,000 units of local governments all tied into 400 statutory grants-in-aids programs. It is hard to imagine that anyone could ascertain how they are overlapping or diluting each other, while our urban problems suffer as a result of attendant confusion.

"We recently received a pamphlet entitled "Science and the City". This was a report on the famous Woods Hole Conference conducted by Housing and Urban Development during the late summer of 1966. The purpose of this conference was to discuss the problems and arrive at solutions for the urban development needed in the next decade.

"We would hesitate to comment on this brochure, except that several adverse conclusions based on erroneous findings are directed toward the construction industry and building and construction unions.

"The report stated that we resisted material changes. We have readily accepted and adapted to hundreds of changes made by material manufacturers, innovators, architects, engineers and have never hesitated to put these in place.

"We have been criticized in that report, along with the industry, for failure to go along with or conduct research. That charge is fantastic. We presently have underway a costly study being conducted by the Battelle Memorial Institute to determine where and what is the present and future of prefabrication, the use of new materials, new methods and new techniques and tools in the Building and Construction Industry. We were unable to get reliable figures on these aspects of the industry from government sources.

"We have representation on the Building Research Advisory Board of the National Academy of Sciences. That body is continually looking into research to better our entire industry. We are represented on the Urban Rehabilitation Subcommittee of that group, which is now in close contact with the entire problem we face this morning. We have also engaged outside consultants on the manpower problem to determine if we are training enough young men in the construction field.

"We are deep into research on our own, with no grant in aid. Nor are we opposed to material innovations, new size of equipment, new methods of installation or new tools. We invite you to go on any construction job that we man, and see for yourself how we are doing it faster, better and cheaper than last year or ten years ago. Since 1948, we have almost doubled the dollar volume of construction put in place, with a smaller work force.

"I would like to mention here a few facts about our segment of the total work force. I want to do this to put in proper perspective our part in the overall economy and the effect our employment opportunities have at any given time on the entries into the work force.

"Construction is the largest industry in the country in dollar volume—larger than agriculture, automobile and defense combined. We have a work force of about 3½ million. We have about 70% of the 208,000 registered apprentices. On the other hand, there are about 300,000 manufacturing concerns—300 of which employ almost 10 million persons. These, along with all other industries, service and otherwise, only account for about 30% of the total registered apprentices. I mentioned these figures to point out that we are not really the best source to absorb the unemployed or the untrained. In addition, we are continually plagued by unemployment which runs about double the national average.

"I wanted to touch on these points in order to clarify some popular misunderstandings related to our role in the construction industry; and in particular, the part which we will take in the tremendous job of rebuilding our cities.

"It is often held that such rehabilitation work should provide massive job opportunities for the urban poor, unskilled and disadvantaged. The simple fact is that any appreciable rehabilitation work typically requires more skill—not less skill—than building new homes. The searching out and replacement of faulty timbers and structural members, the modernization of plumbing and lighting systems, and the repair of masonry often requires considerably greater judgment and skill than the building of new housing. While some adjustments in manpower may be possible, the discussion needs to start with the hard reality that rehabilitation does not consist of simple, or unskilled, or factory-like repetitive operations.

"It has been widely hoped that new technology may be discovered to reduce, by half, the costs of rehabilitation work per housing unit. This is a fine hope—but dramatic new technology does not exist.

"It is widely believed that massive rehabilitation only awaits the cooperation of the building industry, labor and contractors alike. A realistic appraisal of the problems which impede an acceleration of rehabilitation would largely emphasize the importance of a series of difficulties, often having their origins in local, state and federal government agencies.

"There is serious question whether our present governmental approach to rehabilitation and renewal will yield the significant results the country desires in the foreseeable future.

"It is well known that a very considerable volume of repairs modernization and additions now takes place in residential construction. But this is not true in slum properties generally. While there are many reasons for this state of affairs, two simple factors stand out. First, the slum resident has little, if any, money to put into modernization and repairs; and second, there is little profit to be made by a builder or contractor who is doing such rebuilding and modernization. These deficiencies might well be attacked directly.

"A public policy designed to increase the income of the resident of the slum by increasing unemployment compensation, improved welfare payments, increased minimum wages, job development for the unskilled and poorly educated, as well as improved social overheads in the slums, would provide the higher family incomes from which improvements in housing can come. Put more income into the hands of the slum families and they will be in a position to afford improved housing.

"At the same time, the rebuilding of urban areas must be made profitable to builders if any substantial increase in the amount of such work is to take place. This may seem a strange statement for unions to make, but it is the way our system works. At the end of World War II when the soldiers returned home, there was a great shortage of housing. This housing was not provided by detailed programs of regulation by the government. Rather, housing legislation made it attractive for builders to build. In a remarkably short time, we filled our most urgent housing demand. Detailed government rehabilitation plans, new ideas of nonprofit corporations, ideas of slum people building their own housing, or dreams of new technology, will not produce rehabilitation and renewal as effectively as providing clear incentives to builders and contractors. They will, in turn, develop practical technology and highly efficient procedures to do the work.

"In closing, Mr. Chairman, a point I would like to stress is that we in the Building and Construction Trades Department feel strongly that the success of any renewal or rebuilding program mainly is dependent on the use of people highly trained and widely experienced in the construction business. These individuals must know their industry from A to Z and this includes not only the building tradesmen, but the engineers, the architects and the contractors. In this tremendously important national objective, which our department supports without equivocation and which we feel is being given invaluable impetus by this committee, the primary responsibility must be borne by those individuals thoroughly familiar by their training and know-how in all phases of construction."

"Steve" Brodeur Passes On

A man of vision, his foresight and counsel was of great value to the lather.

He picked up the nickname in World War I, when his Navy buddies noted his inclination to go for the long shots. They called him "Steve Brodie," and throughout the rest of his life, Lionel Brodeur carried the nickname "Steve" proudly, as well as a continuing itch to move ahead of the pack even if it meant taking some personal risks.

Ill health finally forced Steve's retirement at age 66 in 1964, and his death on May 13 of this year was a real blow to his many friends and associates within the labor movement. Steve had served for years as business agent of Local 53, Philadelphia, and he had been a Vice President of the LIU and an International Representative. He took some time away from his union activities in World War II to serve as Chairman of the Third Regional Board of the War Labor Board, and on the national Board as well. Two years after the war, he was elected Vice President of the LIU, and served as a representative on the east coast for the then General President William J. McSorley. Steve also served as President of the Pen-Del-Mar Council of Lathers.

Among the far-sighted visions that Steve had, as far back as the close of World War II, were workers' social benefits such as health and welfare programs and insurance. "Workers need something that will stay with them all of their lives . . . that doesn't fluctuate as rates do," Steve remarked in 1949.

Another project was the establishment of building codes where they didn't exist. Cooperating with industry groups, Steve helped to set up building codes for the City of Philadelphia, which had nothing beyond minimum fire-proofing requirements just after World War II.

Brother Brodeur

Steve was enrolled as a member of the LIU in 1926 in old local 95, Philadelphia, which has since become local 53. He worked as a journeyman and foreman for various Philadelphia contractors.

In 1935, he was endorsed by the Philadelphia Building Trades Council for building and industrial inspector in the Pennsylvania State Department of Labor and Industry, and was soon made safety engineer. After three years of state service, he left to take over the Local 53 Business Agent position.

Steve garnered the respect of the industry as well as the lathers for whom he fought tenaciously. "Formidable in carrying the ball for labor gains," a 1949 article said of Steve, "his forthrightness in dealing with contractors has only served to add to his fine reputation among employers. Lathing-Plastering contractors look on Brodeur not in a resentful way, but as a man who sees clearly the problems facing the trade and is doing considerable to solve them."

The officers and members of the LIU join members of Local 53 in extending sympathy to the family, which includes three sons, Charles, David and Joseph, who are members of the LIU. Charles is an International Representative.

Resolution of Respect

WHEREAS, Almighty God, in His infinite wisdom and power, has seen fit to remove from our midst Brother Lionel "Steve" Brodeur, No. 32799, and

WHEREAS, Brother Brodeur was a true and loyal member of this Local Union, serving it unselfishly as Business Representative for many years, and

WHEREAS, Brother Brodeur dedicated himself to the labor movement and particularly the Good and Welfare of the Lathers and our Industry, and

WHEREAS, Brother Brodeur relinquished much of his free time by serving as President of the Pen-Del-Mar Council of Lathers, and

WHEREAS, Brother Brodeur extended himself still further by serving his country during World War II, as a member of the Regional War Labor Board, and

WHEREAS, Brother Brodeur at a time most men consider slowing down, assumed the exacting responsibilities of International Organizer, and

WHEREAS, Brother Brodeur will be missed by his many friends within our International Union as well as the Labor Movement in general and in particular by the members of Local 53, therefore be it

RESOLVED, That the members of Local 53 extend their deepest sympathy to his bereaved family, and further be it

RESOLVED, That the charter of Local 53 be draped for thirty days as a token of respect, and that a copy of the above resolution be sent to the family of Brother Brodeur and to the International Union for publication in "The Lather."

At the left is visible a part of one of the cone-shaped soffits over an entrance, showing the 4-inch pressed metal studs.

Lath and Plaster Outside and In Dramatic and creative use of the traditional materials gives Anaheim, California, a landmark convention hall

For centuries almost beyond recall, the Japanese have been living in convertible houses, where the walls can be moved about almost at a moment's notice, to adapt the home to various uses: large, open rooms for parties and group gatherings, a number of small quarters for taking care of numerous guests who remain overnight. Although the basic principle is attractive, the Japanese partitions leave much to be desired from Western standards of durability and privacy.

A similar flexibility, but with walls solidly constructed out of lath and plaster, has been built into a new convention center landmark near Disneyland, in Anaheim, California. The Anaheim Convention Center has been designed by the architectural firm of Adrian Wilson and Associates, AIA, so that one very large convention can use the whole center, two relatively large groups can use the building, or several smaller organizations—simultaneously and without conflict or confusion.

Associated with the arena are administration areas, kitchen facilities, a utility and mechanical building, and storage and maintenance rooms. The complex is fully air-conditioned, and spectacular and versatile lighting effects have been made possible through thorough study before the lighting system was designed. Special effort was also made to accomplish near-perfect acoustics.

Lathers of Local 440, Santa Ana, California, working for L. A. Lathing Co. played a major role in the construction. The whole complex relies on the flexibility of design afforded by lath and plaster to give it combined beauty and utility. From the outside, the domed, arched-over roof gives a modern look. From East to West, the roof is shaped like a parabola. From North to South, as an ellipse. The arch sweeps over the roof from East to West. Faces of the arch are constructed of 4-inch structural steel studs, paper-backed welded wire fabric lath, and cement plaster. The cone-shaped soffits over entries are constructed with 4-inch pressed metal studs, paper-backed welded wire fabric, lath and cement plaster. The pressed studs are tied directly to the structural studs, and also suspended out from the domed roof structure.

On the ceiling area underneath the arch, 3.4 expanded metal lath is tied onto suspended framing members, and the ceiling area is finished in acoustical plaster.

The suspended metal lath ceiling in the concourse area dips on a 135 degree angle from level height to the side wall.

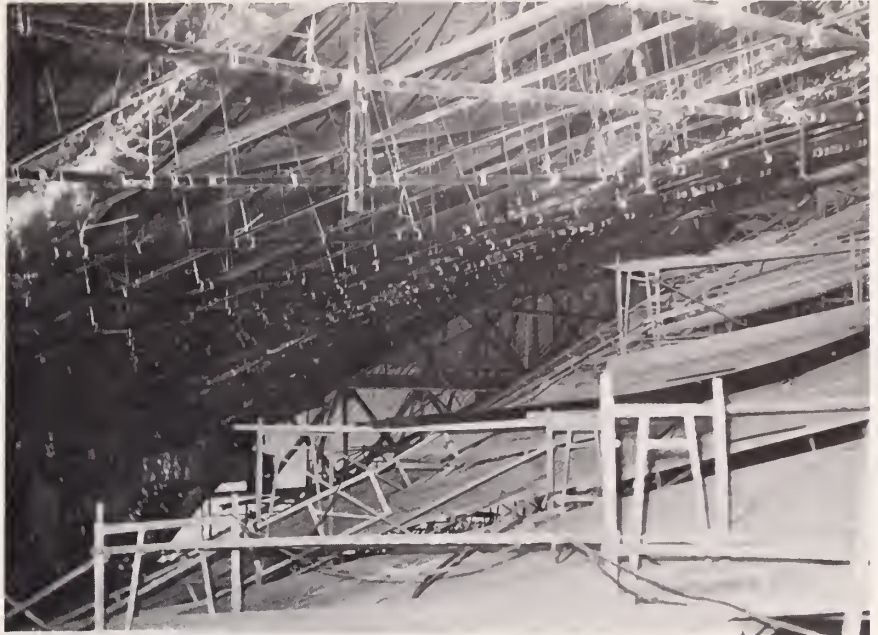

The "V" columns of the concourse are constructed of $\frac{3}{4}$ -inch furring channels and 4-inch pressed metal studs at the corners, with expanded metal lath tied on for a gypsum plaster finish.

Work in the 1500-seat assembly hall was exacting, too. Walls and ceiling have been constructed with triangularly-shaped offsets. The walls are constructed with 4-inch structural steel studs, metal lath and gypsum plaster. On two sides of the hall, the lathers projected columns from walls, built a soffit on top of the columns about 10 feet off the floor, and applied the triangular offsets with the narrow ends abutting the platforms. Wood in the panels between the offsets gives a pleasing contrast.

In the rooms designed for the use of reporters and editors covering the shows at the center, suspended metal lath ceilings are featured. In the lounge for the pressmen, lathers constructed dome-shaped light troffers with projecting lower edges by bending furring channels on the site. The finish coat is acoustical plaster.

The general contractor on the job was Del E. Webb Corporation. Plastering was done by Boone Plastering Co.

Our thanks to the Lath Industry News, Lathing Institute of Southern California, and Executive Editor Jack Clark for the Pictures and story information.

Lather delegates join over 4,000 building tradesmen for the 12th Annual Building Trades Legislative Conference, where the fire is lit under efforts for jobsite picketing laws.

Charting a

Lathers Locals were well represented when more than 4,200 building tradesmen poured into Washington in mid-June, for the 12th Legislative Conference of the Building and Construction Trades Department of the AFL-CIO.

Tops on the list of all legislative priorities, of course, was situs picketing, and Department President C. J. Haggerty says that the representative of construction labor were not in Washington "with hat in hand." The 18 affiliated unions, he quickly pointed out, boast "over 8,400 local unions in over 600 cities throughout the 50 states, with over 3.5 million members."

Additional emphasis for labor's program was made by AFL-CIO President George Meany, who keynoted the conference with the observation that labor has, for years, been interested in legislation that would benefit everyone—not just labor men and women. Examples in point are Medicare, the expansion of the minimum wage law and federal aid to education.

Mr. Meany didn't overlook Situs Picketing. He reassured the delegates that opposition from such groups as the National Association of Manufacturers was really a good omen. He pointed out that the NAM has opposed just about every successful proposal that would help the worker and his family.

The first day of the four-day conference was devoted primarily to speeches, and it was on the first day that President Lyndon Johnson dropped by to thank labor, through the delegates, for the support that has always come from labor in times of crisis.

The remaining days of the conference were left mostly open, so that delegates could visit their congressmen and talk shirtsleeves diplomacy about the coming election back home. "They listen," one lather delegate said, "when we arrive, because they know we represent a lot of the votes back home."

The attitudes of the congressmen

Guests of the LIU at the luncheon held in conjunction with the AFL-CIO Legislative Conference included, L-R: Frank Machido, Secretary, IBEW and Secretary, N. J. State Building Trades; Skip Neale, Executive Secretary, Kentucky State Building and Construction Trades Department; Painters' President Bud Raftery; Joseph Power, Executive Vice President of the OPCMIA; LIU General Secretary-Treasurer J. Earl Ferguson (front); John Guzzi, President of the New Jersey Building Trades Council (rear); LIU General President Sal Maso (front); J. C. Turner, Vice President of the Operating Engineers (rear); Pete Fosco, Secretary-Treasurer of the Laborers; John Hauck, Secretary-Treasurer of the OPCMIA; Father Donahue, Chaplain, Cook County Building Trades Council; LIU Counsel Lou Wilderman; BCTD President Neil J. Haggerty; Pete McGovern, B.A. Local 46, LIU; Tom Murphy, President of the Bricklayers, and Eddie Leonard, President of the OPCMIA.

Legislative Course

During the conference, which attracted a capacity group to the Washington Hilton Hotel's immense ballroom (above), itself an interesting lath and plaster job, President Johnson spoke about the continuing support which American organized labor has always lent in times of hardship. The President is shown at left, speaking to the delegates, while labor leaders including LIU President Sal Maso listen closely.

were being measured at the same time that the power of the labor vote was being brought home to them. Department President Haggerty said that delegates will be very useful in mapping labor's political strategy over the next year.

The recent rail dispute was discussed by both George Meany and Labor Secretary Willard Wirtz, who followed him as speaker on the first day. Meany had asked the delegates, during their visits to their congressmen, to express their united opposition to any compulsory arbitration of the rail dispute, and Wirtz commented subsequently that he doesn't defend the administration's railroad bill "in principle" but that he backs it because of "necessity."

Wirtz is solidly behind the on-site picketing bill, however, and other major planks in the Building and Construction Trades Department's legislative program. He said charges of discrimination against the building trades are "totally unfair," and that although the record is not completely unblemished, there has been "as complete, as honest, as sincere and potentially effective a movement to meet this problem in the building trades as in any other American institution in the labor movement or outside it."

The "front page headlines" about discrimination, Wirtz said, leave untold the story of the many cooperative projects, involving the building trades and the community in programs designed to help minorities and to raise the standard of living for poorer citizens. The racial problem in the building trades, Wirtz noted, has not been finally solved, but it "has been distorted out of all reasonable perspective."

Addressing himself to the subject of the draft as well, Wirtz said he would not personally grant deferments, but that as long as college students are given them, the same policy should be applied to young people in apprenticeship programs and other job-training efforts.

Representing the U. S. Congress were House Majority Leader Carl Albert (D.-Okla.), and House Republican Leader Gerald R. Ford (D.-Mich.). Albert pledged help in moving the site picketing bill toward passage, while Ford gave it qualified support. He said he favors restrictive amendments.

Speaking for the Building trades Department, General Counsel Louis Sherman said there is work going on to try to resolve the differences before the bill gets much farther. If this cannot be done, however, a floor fight is almost inevitable. AFL-CIO Legislative Director Andrew J. Biemiller pointed out that in stark contrast to last year, when Adam Clayton Powell was in the driver's seat of the House Education and Labor Committee, the bill now enjoys the full support of the chairman, Rep. Carl D. Perkins (D.-Ky.) Speaking on the opening day of the conference, Perkins himself underscored Biemiller's remarks by giving the bill his unqualified endorsement. Other Congressmen speaking in favor of it during the Conference were Sen. Russell Long (D.-La.). Sen. Thomas Kuchel (D.-Calif.), a sponsor of the bill, Sen. Wayne Morse (D.-Ore.) and Sen. Ralph Yarborough (D.-Tex.).

In mid-conference, a luncheon sponsored by the LIU hosted many of the leading representatives of labor in attendance. In addition to those shown in the picture at far left, the LIU was honored by the presence of William Cour. Chairman of the National Joint Board; National Bureau Director Gene Sheid and Apprenticeship Program Director Leo Schultz, among others. (For more pictures, please turn the page.)

CANADIAN NEWSLETTER

The Next Thirty Years

The following excerpts are from a recent speech by the Minister of Forestry and Rural Development, Mr. Maurice Sauvé, at the Italian pavilion at Expo '67 in Montreal:

... Let us consider very briefly what destiny awaits Canada during the coming years.

Probably the most significant factor will be the tremendous expansion of our cities. Our high rate of agricultural productivity is one of the chief reasons for the shift to the city. Just recently, the Economic Council of Canada pointed out that agriculture's total manpower needs do not exceed 7 per cent of the Canadian labour force; that 92 per cent of the population increase between 1951 and 1961 was concentrated in the urban areas and that, between 1961 and 1966, this 92 per cent had almost reached 100 per cent. Strange as it may seem, here, in the Province of Quebec, the Montreal area is the only one whose population has increased between 1961 and 1966. . . .

In the field of employment, jobs in the tertiary sector (office workers, salesmen, professionals and so on) are increasing far more rapidly than in the secondary industries (manufacturing, building, etc.), following the pattern set in the United States.

It is also interesting to note recent trends in housing construction. Today, apartment buildings, those hives of human habitation, account for more than 30 per cent (the figure will soon reach 40 per cent) of all housing units built in Canada.

Public expenditures afford another revealing indication of the trend in modern Canada. By themselves, the budgets of provincial and municipal governments (including regional and metropolitan authorities) account for three-quarters of overall government operating expenditures in Canada and four-fifths of total capital investments. According to Professor Hanson, of the University of Alberta, these proportions may be expected to grow even larger during the next few years.

Urbanization, as a phenomenon, has but recently ceased to scare us. The spectre of the large city swallowing up the countryside and tempting farmers away from their land is now a thing of the past. Nowadays we are well aware of the advantages of urban agglomerations and of the tremendous possibilities offered to men when they live together in vast communities.

But, how should we view this trend? What is the significance of urbanization in our own Canadian context? I do not wish to sound overly alarmed, nor do I wish to seem to be meddling with something which at first glance seems far removed from my departmental responsibilities, but I do believe that the phenomenon of urbanization calls for urgent and concerted research on a vast scale within an overall strategy. The scale of the research must be vast on account of the very dimensions of the problem; a concerted effort is needed because there is practically no aspect of federal or provincial policies which does not sooner or later have an impact on urbanization, and the results must be brought into an overall strategy because we must make up our minds where we want to go and weigh the consequences of every decision taken by all three of our levels of government. We must bear in mind that the situation has already reached the point where our traditional political structures are threatened with paralysis. If the present trend of city growth continues, Canada will shortly comprise five or six urban centres, surrounded by a desert, or at best by a tundra. The situation calls for quick and efficient action because, at this present moment, no large city in the world can claim to have found satisfactory solutions to the many problems raised by massive concentrations in limited areas; problems of transportation, water pollution, housing, communications and so on.

Just now I was saying that Canada is a prosperous country. I must avoid leaving you with the impression that everyone in Canada has easy access to all the advantages of modern civilization. I will spare you further statistics, but I would like you to remember that, over and above the large numbers of men and women rejected by the labour market on account of age inability to learn a new trade, an increasing number of people will be deprived of their jobs as the production of consumer goods is gradually taken over by machinery. Yes, the term for it is automation.

We know that machines, robots, will dominate tomorrow's society. The science and techniques of cybernetics are called upon to wield considerable influence over our daily lives. They will play their part in education, industry, the services and government. Let Canadians be pioneers in the field, let us lead the way for others. Fortunately, we are still at an early stage of our development. We can still choose between the highway of technical progress or follow others in the byways of conformity and tradition.

Lathers Local No. 49 Resolution

WHEREAS, the officers and members of Lathers' Local No. 49 are continuing their endeavor to protect the trade jurisdiction of the Wood, Wire and Metal Lathers' International Union;

WHEREAS, the General President, Sal Maso and the officers and representatives of the Lathers' International Union have waged an offensive program to regain all jurisdiction which rightfully belongs to the L.I.U. and,

WHEREAS, the Dunlop hearing panel has returned an arbitrary, unfair and capricious national decision awarding certain jurisdiction on the installation of acoustical ceilings to carpenters, therefore;

BE IT RESOLVED, that the entire membership of Lathers' Local No. 49 be recorded as endorsing the action taken by General President Sal Maso in his efforts to retain our work jurisdiction and,

BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED, that Lathers' Local No. 49 be recorded as endorsing General President Sal Maso to be nominated and elected to the office of General President at the 1967 convention of the Wood, Wire and Metal Lathers' International Union.

The officers and members of Lathers' Local No. 49 request that this resolution be pulished in "The Lather."

Central New York District Council Resolution

An organization to grow and prosper must depend on the leadership of its General President, and

WHEREAS, General President Sal Maso has given his untiring and aggressive leadership to reestablish the image of Wood, Wire and Metal Lathers International Union as a progressive influence in the construction industry, and

WHEREAS, President Maso has kept the membership fully informed on the developments affecting our Trade Jurisdiction and our industry, and

WHEREAS, President Maso has given his untiring effort for the Good and Welfare of the entire membership of the Lathers International Union, and

NOW THEREFORE BE IT RESOLVED, That the delegates of the Central New York District Council of Lathers at their meeting of April 15, 1967 go on record as endorsing our General President Sal Maso for reelection to the office of General President of the Wood, Wire and Metal Lathers International Union at the Convention to be held at the Americana Hotel, Bar Harbour, Florida on September 11-15, 1967.

BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED, That this Resolution be forwarded to the General President for publication in "The Lather."

STATEWIDE AGREEMENT IN MICHIGAN

Herman L. Beerman Dies

A veteran lather, who had been a member of Local 73 for many years, died recently in St. Louis. Brother Herman L. Beerman, who enrolled in Local No. 73 in 1905 and subsequently served as secretary of Local No. 73 and on the St. Louis District Council for about 40 years, was 90 at the time of his death. He had been in poor health for a number of years.

Among some of his noteworthy jobs were the artificial rock constructions at the St. Louis and Detroit zoos. He supervised lathing work on both of these projects.

STAY-AWAY NOTICE

Members are requested to stay away from Local 9, Washington, D. C. There is a shortage of work in the area.

LATHERS WANTED

Journeymen Lathers are needed throughout the State of Indiana. Please contact Local Business Agents before going in.

LATHERS WANTED

Journeymen Lathers are needed in Louisville, Kentucky. Please contact Local 18 Business Agent Charles Hill, Sr., at (502) 368-8433, before going in.

IN APPRECIATION

I would like to thank all locals for their generosity and thoughtfulness while I was unable to work.—Harry W. Hogan, Local 53

- Super thin blade for cutting ease and speed — specially tempered for durability and dependability.
- Proper "pitch angle" of head provides knuckle room clearance and insures direct blows for overhead work.
- Handle securely wedged to blade for "stay-tight" assurance.
- 12 row sharp milled oval face provides an accurate blow from any angle without slipping.
- Beautiful high polish finish. Temper line can actually be seen!
- Best grade hickory handle with large grip area for perfect balance—less tiring.

La FOLLETTE SEAMEN'S ACT MARCH 4, 1915

When President Woodrow Wilson signed the LaFollette Seamen's Act on March 4, 1915, he completed the final step of enactment into law of legislation which brought a new measure of advance, comfort and security to seamen on American vessels.

For many years Andrew Furuseth, Norway-born seamen's leader and for 50 years secretary-treasurer of the Sailors' Union of the Pacific, led the fight for protective legislation for seamen. The "Old Viking" enlisted the aid of Wisconsin's great progressive, Senator Robert M. LaFollette, Sr. This dauntless pair, with strong trade union allies, fought for a protective act and a bill was signed in 1915 after passage over vigorous opposition of employers.

The new act abolished imprisonment for leaving ship in a safe harbor; new wage rates were granted; standards of living and food allowances were raised; a nine-hour day in port was decreed; new liability regulations of the owner were passed; new job protection and safety measures were included in the act. These and other improvements in the lot of seafaring men made the LaFollette Act truly a landmark of labor.

"THE INJURY TO ONE IS THE CONCERN OF ALL"

REPORT

from the General President

SAL MASO

Every convention it is customary for the General President to present a fully detailed report on the activities which have been carried out under his direction in all of the various programs of the LIU. My full report is in the final stages of preparation now, in order to be ready for presentation at the convention, but as it will not be seen by those of you who do not attend the convention, I consider it extremely important to summarize here for you the highlights of our progress since the last convention.

It has been, and still is, my policy to keep you fully informed. I have travelled thousands of miles in all kinds of weather, and at all hours of the day and night to inform you and to rally your all-out support in our fight to protect our trade jurisdiction. An informed membership is our greatest strength.

I wish to thank the team which has supported me and worked with me during the past three years. You were introduced to all of them in my last report. From our able General-Secretary Treasurer, J. Earl Ferguson, to all of the Vice Presidents, this has been an outstanding administration. Nevertheless, it could not operate without the support of the entire membership, which my administration has enjoyed fully since the last convention. Never before have all of us been called upon to face such important problems, the highlights of which follow:

Jurisdictional Disputes

On June 10, 1963, the Ceiling System Agreement was proposed, and our Executive Council rejected it the same day. Delegates to the last convention overwhelmingly rejected it. Accordingly, I acted by firmly holding that the agreement never became effective and so advised the Carpenters and the National Joint Board.

Following the last convention I appointed a negotiating committee consisting of John Sheehan, Robert Georgine, and Kenneth Edwards to meet with a like Committee of the Carpenters. Committee members expressed the determined view of the LIU that the 1903 agreement between Lathers and Carpenters was valid, and clearly specified that the Ceiling System work belonged to the Lathers. It affirmed the Decision of April 28, 1920, which is also set forth in the Green Book and supports our claims.

The Joint Board for the Settlement of Jurisdictional Disputes ignored the Green Book and improperly referred the dispute to a Hearings Panel. I repeatedly objected to this improper action, and asked the Joint Board and Hearings Panel not to proceed, and to abide by the Plan.

They ignored the pleas, set a hearing on ceiling systems, and further advised us that a hearing would be set later on the controversy over metal stud work. My honest efforts to have this matter settled within the house of organized labor were rebuffed. And we had no alternative but to go to court.

A step-by-step of the court proceedings has been printed in the "Lather." The Courts have enjoined the Joint Board and the Hearings Panel from putting an unfair decision into effect on Ceiling Systems, and although there has been no final decision, we have obviously established the fact that there is merit in our case.

Another important legal case involving jurisdiction is that of the Local No. 140 vs. Omega Drywall Construction Company, heard before Judge Sarah T. Hughes in the District Court of the United States for the Northern District of Texas, Dallas Division. There was an agreement between local No. 140 and Omega which spelled out work jurisdiction. Later, Omega secured a contract for the interior gypsum board and metal stud partitions, all exterior stucco, all interior metal lath and plaster and ceramic tile on a dormitory job. Lathers were not employed to install metal studs and drywall. A grievance was filed, and the Joint Grievance Committee held for the Lathers. Omega ignored it, forcing Local No. 140 into court. Judge Hughes enforced the decision of the Joint Grievance Committee. In her decision, she specifically referred to the 1903 Green Book agreement, giving recognition and status to it, further support for our position.

Other Legal Matters

Throughout the period since the last convention our legal affairs have been admirably handled by General Counsel Louis H. Wilderman, Esquire, and his partner, Richard H. Markowitz, Esquire. In a number of these cases, on which the General Counsel has kept me fully advised, I requested his participation directly before the National Labor Relations Board and the Courts.

The General Counsel and his partner have also attended important legal meetings with the General counsels of the other International Unions affiliated with the Building and Construction Trades Department, AFL-CIO at which they have discussed and analyzed NLRB and Court decisions, situs picketing legislation, joint administration of promotional funds, the Civil Rights Act of 1964, and I have received full reports on these.

The National Bureau

I have given all possible aid and support to the National Bureau and to the Local Bureaus of the promotion of lathing and plastering, and I urge all members to do likewise. Even though the law still bars jointly administered Bureaus, lathers may act in an advisory capacity. Some of our Locals have designated local advisors, and more should do the same.

General Pension Fund and General Pension Plan

In 1963 there were 30 locals participating. As of July 15, 1967, there are 80 confirmed participating locals, and one under consideration, with 860 contractors participating. More Locals intend to incorporate the Fund and Plan in their agreements when they come up for negotiation.

I know that some of our Locals have had their own Pension Plans for many years.

We would like these Locals to become part of the General Pension Fund and Plan, and wherever there are legal or actuarial problems standing in the way, the Locals should become parties to the General Fund and Plan for part of the hourly contributions now being paid into these Local plans; or, if this is not possible, they should negotiate with their employers for at least 10¢ per hour for each member, paid into the General Fund.

The benefits of coverage under the General Fund and Plan are obvious. A large number of members move from place to place, and if covered by the national plan, they will receive credit as they move; as long as the local unions where they secure employment are parties to the National Fund and Plan.

The Trustees are always striving to improve the General Pension Fund and General Plan. A revised plan was issued on January 1, 1966 which gives members a chance to determine the amount they wish to have contributed, as long as it is in multiples of 5¢. There is also a 90¢ increase for each 5¢ contribution per 1000 hours worked. The old plan fixed the contributions at 10¢ an hour, and $2.00 per month of pension benefits. Under the revised plan, pension benefit is determined by hours worked and the amount of contribution paid. At 15¢ an hour, retirement would be $2.00 per 1000 hours; at 20¢, $2.90, and at 35¢, $5.60. The maximum hours allowed in the old plan was 1,200. The new figure is 1,500. The old minimum for credit was 400 paid hours a year, and the new is 200. You have much greater control over your pension.

Provisions have also been added for payments to beneficiaries in the event of death before actual application for benefits. At age 55, with 15 years in good standing, a member is provided with an opportunity to complete the forms which will guarantee his beneficiaries 60 monthly payments if he should die before retirement.

Bookkeeping has been streamlined since the General Pension Fund and Plan was established. It is now accomplished by leased data processing equipment.

In mid-July, 1967, $850,000 had been invested through the Manufacturers Bank and Trust Company, with a return of 4%.

Local No. 102, Newark, New Jersey, transferred its local pension fund of $30,000 to the LIU General Pension Plan and Fund in February, 1967, and increased their contribution from 10¢ to 35¢ an hour.

The number of retirees has increased to 23.

Information about the new Plan is contained in a booklet, which gives general answers to often-asked questions, and examples of pension calculations. This booklet is available through Mrs. Lillian Marsh, Administratrix, General Pension Plan, 6530 New Hampshire Avenue, Takoma Park, Maryland.

This is an excellent pension plan, and we would like to see every local union participate, so that all members will have freedom of travel coupled with income security.

Apprenticeship

A strong apprenticeship program in each local is an absolute necessity. In our fight to preserve our trade jurisdiction we must be able to man the jobs. Furthermore, under the law, we must have apprenticeship programs which are operated in accordance with the Davis-Bacon Act and the Civil Rights Act of 1964, in order to reap the benefits under them.

The National Lathing Industry's Joint Apprenticeship fund is jointly administered by the LIU and the contractors. Jeremiah Burns, lathing contractor in New York, and I are co-chairmen. The program Director is Mr. Leo Schultz, and he is doing an excellent job.

One of the greatest weaknesses has been the lack of related instruction in all locals, except the 30 or 40 which have large apprentice groups, or those which are close enough to other locals to allow apprentices to attend joint classes. This need has been filled by the recently-announced correspondence course, which became available in June, 1967. It is made up of five courses, specially designed for our industry, each with its own manual and study guide. The correspondence course is a comprehensive, professional, modern system of instruction, which covers all of the newest techniques and materials. It is a course that we may all be proud of, and should put to good use.

Already in the planning stage is a journeyman refresher course, and work will begin on this as soon as the home study course details are all taken care of.

The National Program is also looking forward to placing regional apprenticeship coordinators in the field to assist local committees.

To take full advantage of all of these benefits, and to make sure that our programs are meeting legal requirements, each local bureau should be affiliated with the National Bureau. In addition, each local union should become an active party in the organization and operation of Local Apprenticeship Bureaus.

COPE and Building Construction Trades Legislative Conferences

It is only through COPE, and the Building Construction Trades Legislative and Political Fund that we can assert our political strength, to prevent our economic gains from being stripped away by anti-union legislation. We must be constantly aware of possible changes in the labor laws, and ready to counter any adverse moves. This means unqualified support for COPE, and for the Building and Construction Trades Legislative and Political Fund.

Funeral Benefits

The International has paid 646 claims against the Funeral Benefit Fund amounting to $358,200.00, from January 1, 1964 through June 30, 1967. We had $364,333.83 in the fund, with all claims paid through May 30, 1967.

Territorial Jurisdiction

As you are aware, a number of matters involving territorial jurisdiction have come to my attention during the past three years, and I have given these my very careful consideration. A number have been worked out amicably, and several others are pending because of a lack of detailed information. On the whole, however, our International Union has not been plagued by bitter fights over territorial jurisdiction, which is a tribute to our Local Unions and to our members.

Organizing

As a member of organized labor of long standing I know the importance of service to our membership, and I am, therefore, in constant touch with the International Representatives. Because they cover large geographical areas, I have assigned deputy representatives many times to assist in matters of importance. I have also visited many of the local unions throughout the United States and Canada to handle pressing organization problems.

Many Local Unions have participated in organizing campaigns in their local areas under the direction of the Building Trades Council, in cooperation with the Local Unions of other International Unions in the Building and Construction Trades Department.

I urge all of our Local Unions to make every effort to put on a Business Agent in their jurisdiction part or full time. The money thus spent will be investment in job security and job opportunity, and it can be raised through working dues.

Since the last convention we have formed the Lathing Industry Division to organize workers who manufacture, sell, handle or service products, tools and equipment used in the lathing industry. The organization of these workers strengthens the LIU and gives additional security. Local Unions can help in this effort by informing me and the International Representatives of plants and establishments in their areas related to the lathing industry which are presently unorganized.

Executive Council

Since the 25th Convention, there have been three meetings of the Executive Council, and the fourth is to be held before the convention at Bal Harbour, Florida. Full reports of the earlier meetings have been published in The "Lather" and a report will be distributed at the convention.

The Lather

A look at our magazine, with its high quality of editorial layout and design and printing speaks for the wisdom of the decision to have Merkle Press, Inc. take over production and printing since the last convention. This change has been a most constructive move.

In Conclusion

I would like to extend my sincere thanks and appreciation to the Officers and Members of all Local Unions, State, District, and Provincial Councils and to our International Vice Presidents, our International Representatives and Deputy International Representatives, for their cooperation and the many courtesies afforded me since I took office as General President.

I sincerely believe the Delegates assembled at this coming Twenty-fifth Convention will give careful deliberation to the many issues which will come before them for consideration and action, and as a result thereof our entire membership throughout the United States and Canada will be benefited.

Respectfully submitted,

SAL MASO, General President

Northern Illinois District Council of Lathers Resolution

WHEREAS: The 25th Convention of the Wood, Wire, and Metal Lathers International Union instructed General President Maso to do everything necessary, including legal litigation, to preserve and protect that trade jurisdiction that rightfully belongs to the Lathers International Union; and

WHEREAS: The General President, along with all of the General Officers and International Representatives, have faithfully, with unswerving dedication carried out the mandate of the 25th convention; and

WHEREAS: The General President has also toured the United States and Canada to encourage all local unions, regardless of size, to work hard to protect not only our trade jurisdiction but to carry out the trade union principles upon which our organization has thrived since its inception; and

WHEREAS: General President Maso has received the full cooperation of General Secretary Treasurer J. Earl Ferguson and all seven of the General Vice Presidents: Therefore be it resolved, That the Northern Illinois District Council of Lathers, at this meeting, do hereby endorse the re-election of Sal Maso, J. Earl Ferguson, and all incumbent Vice Presidents.

Resolution carried unanimously.

Delegates in attendance:

REPORT

from the General Secretary-Treasurer

J. EARL FERGUSON

At this time of the year the initial burst of popular interest in the work of Congress wanes. Many people are on vacation, including the Congress itself at times during the summer, and the grinding legislative process buries in the inner sanctums of our legislature many of the bills that were headlines when introduced months ago. This by no means implies that what's happening on Capitol Hill is any less important to you, and there are a number of proposals you should be aware of.

Among the measures which have been somewhat out of the public limelight, yet important to you as an individual wage-earner and as a member of organized labor, is a proposal that would make it tougher for an individual to go into bankruptcy. None of us plan on becoming bankrupt, yet it is impossible to forecast with certainty that we never will, and to let legislation that would treat the destitute harshly slip through simply because it is not of immediate personal importance is to default on a social obligation.

The proposed legislation, which would prevent an individual from declaring bankruptcy unless he could prove beyond doubt that he could never pay the indebtedness back out of future earnings, was the subject of hearings recently, and AFL-CIO Spokesmen spoke out strongly against the bill. AFL-CIO Legislative Director Andrew J. Biemiller told a House Judiciary subcommittee that the bill not only prevents an honest debtor from a discharge of his financial burdens, but also denies the individual rights which are granted to all other debtors, including corporations.

"The bill does not cure the economic evil of supereasy credit, the dominant cause of wage earner bankruptcy," Biemiller said, "but encourages easier credit still by placing another collection weapon in the hands of the already too-heavily armed creditor."

The fictitious corporation, he noted, the proprietor, the partner, the farmer, the professional man are all given more generous treatment than the proposed bill allows to the wage earner, and this is "gross discrimination." What's needed is not discriminatory pressures on the consumer, but a truth-in-lending law with teeth, and without compromise such as those which have been incorporated in the pending legislation. Garnishment of wages should be limited so that Merchants are forced to think twice before luring low-income families into expensive purchases carrying high credit charges.

A very progressive plan to broaden the educational opportunities and benefit at the college level has been introduced in the Senate, and has won bipartisan support. Both Senator Vance Hartke (D-Ind.) and Thomas H. Kuchel (R-Calif.) introduced legislation for a Work-Study Cooperative Education Program in the nation's universities and colleges. The bill anticipates the campus impact of returning Vietnam GIs eligible for College tuition through the new GI bill.

A plan providing for alternate period of work and study, the proposed law would make it possible for two students to occupy one seat, in a year-round classroom schedule the Senators point out. It has the added advantage of making formal education more meaningful, because the student has an opportunity to get his feet wet in the workaday world of this chosen field of study while he absorbs the academic theory.

The cost to the government of the proposed plan would be surprisingly small. Hartke and Kuchel estimate less than $8 million a year. Already, Hartke and Kuchel point out, there are 112 institutions operating such plans, with 56,000 students involved, and these students develop a total income of $95 million during their work periods away from the classroom. With the GI schooling benefits somewhat reduced from the level of the World War II bill, this opportunity could make the difference for many students between a college degree and none. It would be of particular help to those who come from homes in the middle to lower income brackets, and it would also make easier the transition of our young brain power from classroom to full-time job.

Joining Senators Hartke and Kuchel are sixteen Senators, both Republican and Democrat. We think the bill deserves serious consideration.

One of the most neglected people in the country are the farm workers, who are, even today, at the mercy of employers. Despite the progress made by construction tradesmen and industrial employees, farm workers have not made any great strides in organizing for collective bargaining and the enforcement of reasonable demands. When they try, repressive and often illegal tactics are employed. One reason that the farm managers have gotten away with this has been the fact that the Taft-Hartley Act does not apply to the agriculture industry, and there are no legal barriers to the arbitrary firings, blacklists, yellow-dog contracts and even arrests on trumped-up charges which have been taking place.

A remedy for the situation has been introduced in the House by Representative James G. O'Hara (D-Mich.). The bill would extend Taft-Hartley Law protection to agriculture, and authorize the same form of pre-hire agreements presently permitted in the construction industry. His legislation has been endorsed by Labor Secretary Willard Wirtz and AFL-CIO President George Meany. Discussing the bill, Meany pointed out that farm workers "suffer more than any group from recurring unemployment," but that they are eligible for jobless benefits only in Hawaii and Puerto Rico. They are not covered by workmen's compensation in most states. Their wages are the lowest of any group, and fewer than 30 percent are included under the wage-hour law. They are not covered by social security.

Meany said that the mobility of the farm worker is no excuse for not covering him. On the contrary, it increases the need for coverage. Their situation is closely akin to that of the construction workers who likewise move from employer to employer.

We think the benefits that we have won in collective bargaining, as well as in social and economic security, should equally apply to the farm workers.

Even though you have an interest in these issues, you may ask, "What can I do?" The first part of the answer is to write to the Representatives and Senators from your own area—who know that you are in a position to vote for them next time around—and tell them where you stand. The second course of action is to continue to lend your full support to COPE. While it is obvious that you cannot personally press for the legislation that interests you in private conversation with your Washington representatives, the political representatives of the Building and Construction Trades Department of the AFL-CIO can—and do. Remember that it is your COPE dollars that make this possible.

Elsewhere in this issue, we have published a schedule setting forth the various locations and times that the various committees will meet, and, of course, the location of the office of the general officers. I am sure this will be most helpful to those in attendance at the Convention.

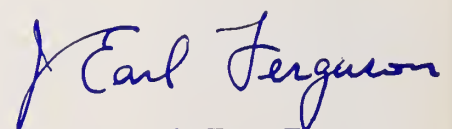

Transportation checks have been mailed to those local unions who have had their credentials accepted by our office for referral to the Credential Committee. As credentials are received and accepted by our office for referral to the Credential Committee, transportation checks will be mailed. The per-day expenses for local union delegates will be paid during the Convention.

Only local union delegates will receive transportation checks plus per-day expenses from the Convention Fund. An alternate delegate who replaces the regular delegate from a local union will receive the expenses that the delegate would have received. Alternate delegates not seated at the Convention will not receive any expenses. Resolutions must be submitted pursuant to section 215 of the LIU Constitution.

Hotel reservation cards have been mailed to all local unions and councils. Therefore, those attending the Convention will be responsible for their own hotel reservations.

We will be ready to assist you in any possible manner we can and are looking forward to seeing you at the Convention.

Sincerely and Fraternally,

J. EARL FERGUSON,
General Secretary-Treasurer.

General Secretary-Treasurer.

PATTERNS OF LABOR LEGISLATION

In every session of Congress scores of bills are thrown into the hopper designed to rewrite at least some part of the nation's laws affecting labor-management relations.

Aside from 1947—when the Taft-Hartley Act was passed—and 1959—when the Landrum-Griffin became law—few of these proposals get beyond the introduction stage.

Proposals that are not acted upon, however, should not be disregarded. They provide a meter, a measuring stick to determine the areas of greatest pressure for legislation, both pro-labor and anti-labor.

The National Labor Relations Board has just released a study of bills introduced in Congress between January 7, 1959, and August 25, 1965, to amend the National Labor Relations Act. Excluded are those proposals which eventually became part of the Landrum-Griffin package, passed in 1959.

During this period—approximately 6½ years—there were a total of 272 measures introduced.

The largest number, 54, involved the construction industry and 43 were for situs picketing—to permit strikes at the site of construction projects with several employees when there is a labor dispute with any one of them.

The next largest number of bills were in the area of union security, 53. All but a handful of these called for repeal of Section 14(b) of Taft-Hartley, the provision which legalized state "right to work" laws. Some 26 such bills were introduced in 1965, alone.

Five members of Congress introduced separate measures to prohibit the use of professional strikebreakers in labor disputes affecting interstate commerce. The printing trades, particularly, have been engaged in a major campaign to pass such legislation on the state and local level.

Proposals affecting labor are still being introduced in the 90th Congress. Whereas there are a number of pro-labor bills—such as situs picketing and extending coverage of labor law to farm workers—the vast majority of measures are clearly anti-labor, reversing the pattern since 1959. Some three dozen such anti-labor measures have been introduced to date.

It is no accident that more of these bills are concerned with various forms of compulsory arbitration—particularly in amendments to the Railway Labor Act. A critical debate took place in recent weeks over HJ Res. 559 and SJ Res. 81—the Administration proposal in the railroad shopcraft dispute.

This, today, is the area of greatest pressure.

Lathers' Local No. 235 Resolution

For many years this local union has been under the thumb and rule of Contractors and others. Our Trade Jurisdiction slowly but surely being taken away. Our members just barely keeping the charter, because deep down they were good union members and needed only leadership.

WHEREAS, Since January 6, 1964, General President Sal Maso has given us this leadership and vigorously fought for our Trade Jurisdiction and has taught us to fight as well, and

WHEREAS, Because of his desire to teach, inform and guide us and all Lathers throughout the country we have been successful in reclaiming much of our rightful work, and also through the help of President Maso this local was successful in striking for and winning a new Working Agreement that was long overdue. Without the guidance of President Maso and his help with legal and financial assistance, a combination of Contractors, Carpenters and Plasterers all working together would have succeeded in breaking our strike, and

WHEREAS, We are proud to have Sal Maso as our General President.

THEREFORE BE IT RESOLVED, That Lathers' Local Union No. 235 goes on record endorsing our General President, Sal Maso, for reelection to his office, at the 26th Convention of Lathers' International Union to be held at the Americana Hotel, Bal Harbour, Florida on September 11-15, 1967, and

BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED, That this resolution be sent to the International Union for publication in "The Lather."

Rocky Mountain District Council Resolution

WHEREAS: The Rocky Mountain District Council of Lathers is continuing its endeavor to protect the trade jurisdiction of the Wood, Wire & Metal Lathers' International Union;

WHEREAS: The General President Sal Maso; and the officers and representatives of the Lathers' International Union have waged an offensive program to regain all jurisdiction which rightfully belongs to the L.I.U. and

WHEREAS: The Dunlop hearing panel has returned an arbitrary, unfair and capricious national decision awarding certain jurisdiction on the installation of acoustical ceilings to carpenters: Therefore be it

RESOLVED: That the Rocky Mountain District Council of Lathers be recorded as endorsing the action taken by General President Sal Maso in his efforts to retain our work jurisdiction, and be it further

RESOLVED: That the Rocky Mountain District of Lathers be recorded as endorsing General President Sal Maso to be nominated and elected to the office of General President at the 1967 convention of Wood, Wire & Metal Lathers' International Union.

The delegates to the Rocky Mountain District Council request that this Resolution be published in The Lather. Voted on and approved at meeting of July 16, 1967; meeting held in Colorado Springs.

HOW SAFE IS THE MEAT YOU EAT?

Recent Congressional testimony has revealed shocking health hazards in the meat packing industry, particularly in the ground meat products such as sausage and hot dogs. Contamination in the form of the contents of slaughtered animal intestines, hair, dirt, insects and even potentially harmful insecticides from the hides is getting into the food products that the consumer may be buying at his grocery store.

The fault is not that of the merchant, who cannot be expected to inspect and control this aspect of his business. The responsibility must be placed in the hands of the meat packers, at the point of manufacture.

The revelations were made during Congressional hearings on H.R. 1314, a bill which would strengthen the meat inspection laws. During these hearings, the AFL-CIO charged that Americans who believe all meat and meat products have been inspected by the federal government "are being deluded into a feeling of false security."

Andrew J. Biemiller, director of the AFL-CIO Department of Legislation, told the subcommittee on Livestock and Grains, of the House Committee, on Agriculture, that consumers "of course are not fully protected."

The AFL-CIO spokesman called for "strong, effective meat inspection legislation, including the coverage provisions of H. R. 1314." He said, "Because of the importance of meat in the diet of all Americans, we consider this legislation of the greatest importance to the health and welfare of our members as it is to all consumers."

Biemiller said that American families do not realize that, some 15 percent of all meat slaughtered in the nation and some 25 percent of all meat products processed are not federally inspected.

"Some of this production undergoes state inspection," he added, "but even the best of the state programs, when they exist, leave something to be desired."

Urging modernization of the 60-year-old law, Biemiller declared that, "Serious illness can be caused by unwholesome and unclean meat. The consumer is being bilked into paying normal prices for some meat which comes from sick animals and even from animals which died from causes other than slaughter."

"Scandals, especially concerning meat which has been processed into meat products have occurred in recent years. New means of handling meat animals and processing meat, unforeseen 61 years ago, are creating problems which the 1906 Meat Inspection Act simply does not cover."

He charged that proposals of the meat industry and the National Association of State Departments of Agriculture "would be a hoax on the consumer" compounding present illusions about protections.

This issue is of immediate importance to you and to your family. You cannot be sure that the food that you provide for them through your hard labor is safe, and in mid-century America, this is inexcusable. We therefore urge your individual action in contacting your Federal legislators from your voting district.

Local Boosts Rapid Plaster

New work is coming the way of lathers of Local 2, Cleveland, through the farsighted efforts of the Local's Business Representative, Charles R. Pinzone. The reproduced clipping shows a story which ran in the construction section of the Sunday, June 11 Plain Dealer.

In addition to the effective press relations program launched by Brother Pinzone, he has organized and conducted seminars among Contractors in the Cleveland area in cooperation with the OPCMIA, and these, too, have proven that it pays to advertise. Since the seminars, 3 large apartments, a 20-story office building and over 200 homes have been converted to lath and plaster from originally-specified substitutes. The work of Brother Pinzone bears watching, and we urge all locals to follow his example. A good start is the organization of a local promotional fund.

FHA Allows Use of Rapid Plaster

Hailed as the greatest advancement in the plastering industry in half a century is Rapid Plaster, a thin, two-coat plaster to be applied over gypsum lath with the help of a catalyst, aluminum sulphate, sprayed on the lath just prior to plastering.

Developed by the combined committees of plastering contractors' associations and plastering and lathing crafts unions, it has just been given the go-ahead by the Federal Housing Administration for prototype use in FHA-insured properties.

THE INDUSTRY views Rapid Plaster as giving the lath and plaster industry a new weapon in competition with dry wall construction, according to Charles R. Pinzone, business representative of Lathers Union Local 2 here.

According to the Contracting Plasterers' and Lathers' International Association announcement, the aluminum sulphate is sprayed on installed gypsum lathing and, while the lath is still wet, a first coat of plaster is applied, not less than one-sixteenth of an inch thick.

Two hours later the second, or finish, coat is applied to bring the total thickness of the lath and plaster to half an inch. Standard plaster on wood lath is decidedly thicker. This speed of drying means that both walls and ceiling plaster can be completed in a matter of hours, Pinzone said. The surfaces can be painted the following day.

The new finish is said to be highly resistant to abrasion, gouging, nail-popping, impact damage and cracking, has a minimum load weight and calls for minimum clean-up operations.

The surface can be washed, papered, steamed and re-papered. It can have a smooth or textured or colored finish. Cost is said to be comparable to competitive substitutes.

Winterich Selected

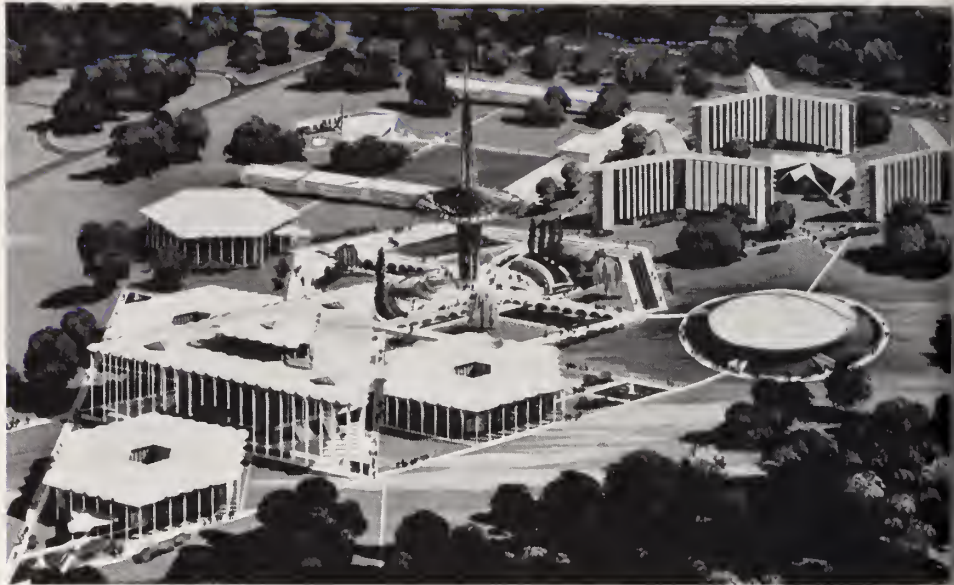

The selection of Daniel L. Winterich, 3829 Washington Boulevard, University Heights, for craft membership has been announced by the Guild for Religious Architecture, Washington, D.C. Winterich is a branch manager for the I. T. Verdin Co., manufacturer of carillons and bells.

ORAL ROBERTS BUILDS A UNIVERSITY

The stately 6-story columns which surround the Learning Resources Center:

Artists rendering of completed University. The Prayer Tower in the center is the last structure to be completed.

If your son ever told you that he could skip a college lecture then catch up with it after he completed his homework this evening, you'd be mighty skeptical. Anybody who'd spent a day or two in a college or high school classroom knows that professors don't repeat lectures for individual students. Or do they?

At Oral Roberts University, a $163,200,000 complex of 7 sparkling white ultra-modern buildings located near the heart of Tulsa, Oklahoma, they do, through the still-astounding developments of commercial electronics. Among the many up-to-date features of the university is a complete computerized "information retrieval" system which permits a student to seat himself in front of a small TV screen, strap on a pair of headphones, dial a series of numbers on a telephone-like dial, and start taking notes as his professor appears and speaks to him from the recording tape facilities.

Other marvels include closed-circuit television used to relay to large lecture classes small demonstrations, films, and slides from other portions of the university grounds.

The electronic innards of Oral Roberts University are, however, not what strikes the visitor with immediate awe. It is in the sculptured, sweeping curves and sharp angles, executed on a massive scale in lath and plaster construction, that ORU delivers the bold exterior drama, reflection of the boldness of the academic approach within.

The Learning Resources Center, considered the focal point of the University, rises six floors from a triangular plan, sharply braced around the outside of the three sides by six-story lath and plaster columns. The overhanging sawtooth lath and plaster canopy catches alternate highlight and shadow of the southern sun, a welcome break from the slab-sided "modern" construction characterized by Frank Lloyd Wright as "tombstones."

Lath, constructed by members of Local 228, Tulsa, and plaster and portland cement finish, were selected throughout the university's buildings first because of the design. The striking concept could be expressed in many areas with the ancient materials and techniques at lower cost than with substitute materials. The ever-present columns were more cheaply executed in this fashion than if they had been precast concrete. In addition, many of the design elements could be handled only with the sculptural versatility of lath and plaster. A glance at the interior of the library makes this obvious.

Furthermore, the University's Builder, Oral Roberts Evangelistic Association, Inc., wanted the texture, fire and sound resistance, durability and strength of lath and plaster.

The Lather

A spectacular home for a university modern from the ground up grows under the skilled hand of members of Local No. 228, Tulsa, Oklahoma.

Thanks to Sherren Maurushat of the Metal Lath Association and David Reichert of Red Topics magazine for assistance in preparing this story.

Central stairwell captures the imagination and proves the drama of lath and plaster.

The library section, visually conveying quiet, and a freedom unusual in such structures.

Knowing they would have to live with the architecture and the maintenance bills for a long time to come, they selected quality.

The student body and the academic program at ORU is growing with the physical plant. In September, 1965, the first class of 275 freshmen entered ORU's undergraduate program, looking forward to a full junior college curriculum. One year later, the courses had been expanded into a three-year curriculum, and the immediate goal is to make the University a full four-year undergraduate institution with full credits from the North Central Accreditation Agency that rates universities in the area and gives them a formal stamp of approval.

By the end of 1966, ORU had seven buildings about completed; the Timko-Barton Hall housing the Graduate School of Theology, a dining hall, auditorium and lobby; Braxton and Shakarian Halls, which are dormitories; the Learning Resources Center which has been called "one of the most creative facilities on the American Campus today," by the Educational Facilities Laboratory of the Ford Foundation; the Health Resources Center, which incorporates a swimming pool and other athletic facilities as well as medical and psychological clinics, and the power plant. The last structure in the current building program is the Prayer Tower, a central 200-foot needle, interrupted by an observatory-like projection about halfway up, which has been designed to symbolize the interest in religion on the campus. "Prayer is fashionable on this campus," Oral Roberts tells incoming students. The Prayer Tower will be surrounded by five acres of sunken gardens and campus, and will house the information center and a ministerial prayer group.

As funds are available, the University will continue construction work to erect a memorial auditorium, a fine arts building, science building, humanities building, more dormitories, and a student union building.

ORU has blossomed so rapidly and attractively, that it has become a tourist attraction in the Tulsa area. Behind the concept is a philosophy which runs counter to the trend away from the individual in today's society. "I want you young people to know that at this university you are not an IBM card, here you are a person for whom someone cares," Roberts said to opening class. The architecture agrees emphatically.

Lather Judge is Honored

The Honorable Lewis Mongelluzzo, Member of Local No. 53, Philadelphia, praised at Dinner

Among those who honored the judge at the dinner were (L-R): Harry A. Short, Business Agent, Local No. 53; Father Schifalacqua, Brother Mongelluzzo's pastor; Brother Lewis Mongelluzzo; Mrs. Rose Mongelluzzo; Louisa Attanasio, his granddaughter; Mrs. Maryellen Maguire; Jack Maguire, Secretary, Local No. 53.

The Honorable Lewis Mongelluzzo, a magistrate in the great city of Philadelphia and a silver card carrying member of Local No. 53, Philadelphia, for over forty years, was paid a tremendous tribute by his many friends and admirers at a Testimonial Dinner held in his honor on June 28, 1967 at famous Frank Palumbo's Supper Club and the widely known C-R Club in South Philadelphia.

Prominent personalities from all walks of life gathered to pay the Judge homage. The list of notables ran from a Justice of the State Supreme Court to the average working man. This, in itself, attests to the scope of the Judge's diversity, sincerity and compassion. No matter how big or small the person or the problem, the Judge gave his all and party lines never were a barrier. The mixture of dignitaries from both political parties was quite evident and was, if you will, a silent tribute to the Judge.

The array of Labor Leaders present, too numerous to mention, will suffice to aver his undying dedication to the Labor movement, its causes and its members.

The fine record of Brother Mongelluzzo was expounded on by both civic and labor leaders alike. A few of the more prominent were: State Supreme Court Justice Michael Mussmano; President of the County Courts, Adrian Bonelli; Common Pleas Court Judge, Francis X. McClanaghan; County Court Judge, Michael O'Donnell; The Mayor of Philadelphia, James H. J. Tate; Chairman of City Council, Paul D'Ortona; Business Manager of the Philadelphia Building Trades Council, James Loughlin; Chief Magistrate John Patrick Walsh; President of the News Reporters Union, Donald McDonough; just to name a few.

Requests for attendance to this affair were so voluminous that our Local Union was allotted only two tables. Be that as it may, we were pleased and honored to be present while a Lather was being eulogized in such a magnificent way, to say nothing of being cognizant that the Lather so lauded was a member of our Local. As Jack Maguire said in his address, "It isn't every Local that can boast it's own magistrate let alone "THE" Lewis Mongelluzzo. Yes, Judge, we have you and we are proud of it."

Yes, it was a night the Judge, his lovely wife Rose and his wonderful family can be truly proud of, because it isn't often a man gets credit for the good he has done in life before he meets his maker and we were pleased that the many friends of Brother Mongelluzzo saw fit to take care of that little matter.

Time for An Economic Stimulus

Donald MacDonald, Secretary-Treasurer of the Canadian Labour Congress, recently expressed concern over the unemployment rate, and urged a moderate economic stimulus to help alleviate the situation. In a statement in early June, following issuance of the budget, he noted that:

"The government has failed to take advantage of the opportunity afforded by the budget to give the country's economy an obviously much-needed stimulus. The fact that we are confronted with a period of relatively slow growth is admitted. The government's unadjusted unemployment figures for April stand at 4.9 per cent, a marked increase from the year previous; and the government is frank in admitting that further increases in unemployment may be expected.

"This is the time for moderate stimulus to move our rate of economic growth back to its potential levels. The budget fails to provide this and the omission adds to the seriousness of the economic outlook which concerns the Minister. Certainly the removal of the six per cent tax on production machinery and apparatus 10 months earlier than was planned falls far short of what is needed.

"Action taken with regard to construction is also inadequate. It is regrettable that the government has once again rejected proposals for a removal of the 11 per cent tax on building materials and supplies. The continued acute housing shortage, with little likelihood that it is going to be relieved in any major degree, points up the urgency for the removal of this tax.

"The decision to remove the 12 per cent tax on drugs will be welcomed by many Canadians, though it is difficult to understand why this is not being made effective until Sept. 1."

Community Colleges Underway in Ontario

The Province of Ontario has begun a construction program involving the creation of 19 so-called "community colleges"—a short term for colleges of arts and technology.

Two of the colleges are already in operation, and all 19 are expected to be in operation by the end of the year. The colleges will be offering courses beyond those which the universities now offer in the fields which are directly related to job training.

One feature of the colleges is that each will have flexibility in adapting its courses to the needs of the area or of special interests and demands which arise from time to time.

Another feature is that, on the boards of governors of each of the colleges, a trade unionist has been appointed.

This is certainly a departure from the custom at universities in this country where a trade unionist is a rare creature. Even though universities are well endowed with public funds, the men appointed to their boards are usually wealthy businessmen.

The labor movement has not missed this new ray of hope as a possible sign that the larger role it has played and can play in Canadian society is being recognized.

Canadian Housing Foundation Planned

The Canadian Housing Foundation is in process of being established jointly by the Canadian Labor Congress, the Co-operative Union of Canada and the Canadian Union of Students (university).

The decision was made at a conference in Winnipeg with the view to co-ordinating and promoting co-operative housing developments.

Canada has lagged behind other countries in the co-op housing field just as it has lagged behind in public housing. This new organization is to try to fill the gap.

Not long ago a leading spokesman from the United Housing Foundation in New York spoke to co-op and union leaders in Canada. He made a substantial impact. CHF will take time to build up to the point which UHF has reached with its new project of a $295 million co-op city financed largely with union funds. But it is good that a start is being made.

"THE INJURY TO ONE IS THE CONCERN OF ALL"

Our Message to You

BOTH OF US want to thank all of the membership of the LIU for your confidence and continued support, expressed through the delegates at the 26th Convention. It is gratifying to us to know that past striving has not gone unrecognized, and that you people are willing to pull with us on the road ahead.

WE WOULD LIKE to tell you that your delegates to the convention were completely dedicated to your interests. In all of the business discussions, they never hesitated to speak out in defense of the wishes of their membership. The idea foremost in the minds of all was what is best for those who have put us in office. The convention was an exemplary showcase of Union Democracy in action.

BOTH OF US pledge our continued dedication in this coming three years of stewardship. The LIU is in mid-stream on many important issues. The industry is likewise at a turning point. We feel sure that you will find our summary of the convention, which illuminates some of these turning points, both interesting and vital to the future of each and every one of you. The full transcript will be forwarded to each and every local union when printed.

JUST AS YOU have given us renewed vigor for the job ahead, we would like to encourage your active participation in all facets of the LIU's existence. In furtherance of this, we pledge to you the fairest and most honest administration yet.

Sal Maso
SAL MASO,
General President.

MINUTES OF EXECUTIVE COUNCIL MEETING

To the officers and delegates of the twenty-sixth Convention of the Lathers International Union:

The members of the Executive Council present were:

C. J. Haggerty.....First Vice President
E. R. Baldwin.....Second Vice President
C. H. White.....Third Vice President
R. J. Hamilton.....Fourth Vice President
A. H. Burton.....Fifth Vice President
H. J. Sheerin.....Sixth Vice President
John M. Sheehan.....Seventh Vice President

Appearance of Irvin Friedman, Business Manager of the Lathing Foundation of Chicago, Illinois, at his personal request before the Executive Council.

Irvin Friedman appeared personally before the Executive Council. His personal opinions were heard and noted. No action thereon was considered necessary.

CASE NO. 1—Appeal of Carl H. Craig, No. 56286 against decision of the General President on a fine placed against him in the amount of $25.00 by Local No. 406, Ft. Lauderdale, Florida.

Brothers Ray Smith, Bus. Agent, Local 406 and Carl H. Craig, No. 56286; George K. Maillet, No. 43906 and International Representative Walton C. Parker were granted the opportunity by the Executive Council to speak in detail on this case, and on Case No. 2 described below. After hearing these Brothers and after full consideration in the entire matter, the Executive Council decided to sustain the decision of the General President.

CASE NO. 2—Appeal of George K. Maillet, No. 43906, against decision of General President on a fine placed against him, in the amount of $25.00 imposed by Local No. 406—Ft. Lauderdale, Fla.

Brothers Ray Smith, Bus. Agent, Local 406; Carl H. Craig, No. 56286; George K. Maillet, No. 43906 and International Representative Walton C. Parker spoke in detail on Case No. 2, as they had on Case No. 1. After hearing these Brothers and after full consideration of the entire file in this matter, the Executive Council decided to sustain the decision of the General President.

CASE NO. 3—Appeal of Ray Bigras, No. 57096 against decision of General President in upholding Local No. 540, Sarina, Ontario, Canada, voting Brother Bigras out of office by an unanimous vote of the members of the local on a vote of non-confidence.

After examination of the material in the file and after detailed discussion, the Executive Council decided to sustain the decision of the General President. Vice President Burton disqualified himself and did not vote.

CASE NO. 4—Request of Local Union No. 74 for additional fine in the amount of $200.00 on Charles B. Cork, No. 54319.

After examination of the material in the file and after detailed discussion, the Executive Council decided to grant the request of Local Union No. 74 for the additional fine on Charles B. Cork, No. 54319. Vice-President Robert J. Hamilton disqualified himself and did not vote.

CASE NO. 5—Request of Local Union No. 460 for additional fine in the amount of $100.00 on J. Bryant, No. 38818.

After careful examination of the material in the file and after a detailed discussion, the Executive Council decided to grant the request of Local No. 460 for the additional fine on J. Bryant, No. 38818.

CASE NO. 6—Request of Local Union No. 74 for additional fines in amounts of $100.00 each—three in all—totalling $300.00 on Ralph Baldwin, No. 52623.

After examination of the material in the file and after detailed discussion, the Executive Council decided to grant the request of Local No. 74 for additional fines on Ralph Baldwin, No. 52623. Vice President R. J. Hamilton disqualified himself and did not vote.

CASE NO. 7—Request of Philadelphia District Council for additional fine of $100.00 on Emory Mobley, No. 47967.

The procedure used which resulted in the fine conflicts with Sections 164 and 165, and other applicable sections of the L.I.U. Constitution which is controlling. Accordingly, this case is referred to the General President for his consideration and take appropriate action.

CASE NO. 8—Request of Local No. 460 to reconsider decision made by L.I.U. Executive Council at meeting in February 1967 and remove additional fine of $100.00 on Jimmy D. Valentine, apprentice.

After examination of the material in the file and after detailed discussion, the Executive Council decided to grant the request of Local 460 to reconsider the decision made by the Executive Council at their meeting in February 1967 and to remove the additional fine of $100.00 on Jimmy D. Valentine, apprentice.

CASE NO. 9—Request of Local No. 57 for additional fine in the amount of $100.00 on Hartwig C. Pleus, No. 49954.

C. J. HAGGERTY, Chairman

The General President's Message

Democracy in Action

MY MOST sincere welcome to all of you on this our 26th Convention.

I hardly need to tell you that this is a critically important convention, that we are at the crossroads of some events and decisions that are likely to have a far-reaching effect upon each and every member of the LIU.

Throughout our meetings, I want all of you to keep foremost in your minds the fact that we are here as the servants of the membership in the same way that the members of our United States Congress are responsible to the voter. No matter how difficult a path may appear, our decisions must be based upon this responsibility to the membership and not upon a choice which appears easiest for us.

We are already embarked on one difficult journey in our jurisdictional dispute over ceiling systems, and there is a very recent development which I am sure you want to know more about. You will recall that our appeal had been pending before the courts for a number of months.

The heart of the matter is whether the Joint Board had a right to ignore the agreements of record when making a decision about assigning this work.

We have received an adverse decision from the courts on our ceiling systems dispute.

It is my responsibility to report this to you. It is a fact of life. Yet the final chapter has not been written. Right now, our attorneys are appealing to the Supreme Court of the United States, and I want to call to your attention the full report of the dispute and the full text of this recent decision which is included in my printed report.

On the plus side of the ledger, there has been a favorable decision for us, handed down in another case in the United States District Court in Dallas, Texas, where we fought the assignment to the Carpenters of metal stud work to receive drywall. In this decision, the judge specifically referred to the 1903 Green Book Agreement, giving recent legal recognition to its status. But I must be honest—and you know that it has been my policy during these three and a half years to be completely honest in all accounts of the dispute—in telling you that there is still much work to be done, and much anxious time to be spent waiting for a decision which could go against us.

During the waiting, I think we all may be encouraged by some timeless thoughts of our 28th President, Woodrow Wilson, and I quote:

“Defeat in a worthy cause is only a temporary setback. I would a great deal rather lose in a crusade that I know someday will triumph than triumph in a cause that I know will someday lose.”

Despite our immediate and serious concern with the jurisdictional dispute, I think it may be worthwhile to look beyond the details of this concern to ask ourselves what we really want for the members in the long run.

High on the list, certainly, are job security and a better standard of living. There are many ways to reach these ends, but they stand clearly outlined as the ultimate targets, and I think we can report solid progress toward them.

The three years that have passed since the last General Convention have been exceptionally active ones, and we are very proud of this fact. Part of this activity involved the good fight for our jurisdiction. In my personal contacts with professional, State and District Councils and Local Unions throughout the United States and Canada over the past three years, I have met with nothing but encouragement to keep up this good fight, whatever the odds may be.

Another part of the activity, less dramatic perhaps, but of more immediate benefit, has been the improvement in the general pension plan. A perfect plan would retain for every one of our members their benefits, regardless of where they travel to find work, and we are already on our way toward this kind of security.

The general plan is growing rapidly. Over three years ago, there were 30 Locals participating. This July there were over 80, with 860 contractors participating. Impressive progress, I think.

A year and a half ago, the trustees issued a revised general pension program which gives each member much greater flexibility in deciding how much he wants to contribute. It gives him 300 more hours a year upon which to base his retirement contributions. It reduces by 200 hours a year the point at which he can start building benefits. The new plan also makes it possible for a member to provide for payments to his wife if he should die before he actually applies for benefits.

In the past, any retirement funds were lost; now, the wife is guaranteed 60 monthly payments.

We have also made progress in the field of organization. We have created a lathing industry division to organize workers who manufacture, sell, handle or service products, tools and equipment used in the lathing industry. I hardly need to tell you what this means in terms of economic and financial strength for the LIU.

Other International Unions in the building and construction trades have organized such divisions with great success, and the addition of these workers to the LIU will be of great help in preserving our trade jurisdiction.

In June of this year we announced another program that is a very important step in meeting our apprenticeship needs. As you are aware, we must be able to put men on the scaffold in order to get jobs, and under recent laws, such as the Davis-Bacon Act and the Civil Rights Act of 1964, certain aspects of the method in which we recruit and train these men is rigidly fixed.

One of our greatest weaknesses had been the lack of related instruction in small locals. The correspondence course which has just been made available to participating locals will eliminate this weakness, and it is important that all locals be a part of this apprenticeship program.

All of these steps, then—the liberalizing of pension benefits and the opening of the door to a truly portable plan which moves with the lather—the establishment of the industry division for organizational purposes—the creation of a convenient and practical way to extend related apprentice training to everyone who wants it—have been accomplished within the past three years.

But we can't stop here. We are in midstream on negotiations with the CPLIA for a national agreement to protect our wage scales, hours of employment, fringe benefits, and working conditions on as broad a basis as possible.

The draft of the proposed agreement will be submitted to all councils and local unions for their consideration and action in the near future.

Another piece of unfinished business is industry-wide promotion of lath and plaster. This task of extending the horizons for our skill is as closely tied to job security as apprenticeship. If we merely mark time in holding the business we now have, we are actually falling behind. The construction industry, like our national economy, is forever growing larger, and there are more walls and ceilings being constructed each year, regardless of who builds them.

The home-owner, builder, apartment dweller, office worker—all of these people must be made more aware that there is a difference, and that it means something to their pocketbooks, their peace and quiet, and their safety.

It's a good, honest story—but it must be told before they will listen. We must work with architects, contractors, and manufacturers in every conceivable way on this project.

There have been, of course, many other details that have come up during this 3 years which demanded attendance at meetings, hearings and conferences.

We must constantly be aware of political developments and the progress of legislation.

We must constantly work with the Building and Construction Trades Department of the AFL-CIO to improve our relationship with the other trades and with labor organizations everywhere that touch us in any way.

As a man who has spent a lifetime in trade unions, I know the importance of the trade union movement—a force which depends upon small unions as well as large for its stature.

Most of our unfinished business will be placed before you in the form of resolutions within the next few days, and I wish to ask you once more to keep always in mind the needs of the membership when making a decision.

We cannot duck the major issue—the fact that historical developments have confused in others' minds the clear right of the Lather to his traditional work. Our moral and legal right remains—but it has not been possible to erase in a relatively short period of time the effect of a gradual loss over a period of many years.

Make no mistake, however, about our determination to fight, and to fight hard.

I am reminded again of the words of one of our great leaders, President Lincoln. He said, and I quote:

"I do the very best I know how. If the end brings me out alright, what is said against me won't amount to anything. If the end brings me out wrong ten angels swearing I was right won't make any difference."

In conclusion, let me say that I would be remiss in my duties and responsibilities to you if I did not take this occasion to express my thanks and appreciation for the loyalty and splendid support I have enjoyed from all International Officers, International Representatives, Deputies, Officers of the Local Unions—and, above all, the entire membership of the LIU.

Dear Sal:

I am so sorry I cannot get to Miami for the Convention for I count you and the members of your Union as dear friends.

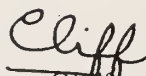

It has been a pleasure to work with you over the years. Much has been accomplished but much remains to be done. I am again pressing for extension of the Davis-Bacon principle which has contributed so much to general economic progress. Common situs picketing is still ensnared in the legislative mill on the House side but once the House acts, I hope we can get prompt consideration by the Senate.

In the light of our many talks about unemployment compensation, you will be glad to know that today I again joined with Senator McCarthy in introducing a bill to establish minimum federal standards and to extend coverage.

I look forward to a get-together with you when you return to Washington. Meanwhile I know that under your leadership, the Convention will prove to be not only most productive but most enjoyable. Please extend my greetings and warm good wishes to all the delegates.

With warm regards.

Sincerely,

Clifford P. Case

THE CHALLENGE OF THE COMING YEARS

At a crossroads, the incumbent officers of the LIU were unanimously re-elected: with sleeves rolled up for continuing work on manpower, jurisdiction, and promotion. Over 300 delegates heard labor, government and industry leaders at the 26th National Convention. Many resolutions on pensions, promotion, and per capita tax were considered.

The dominant theme of the 26th convention of the LIU was established from the very first day. Speakers from among the leadership of the LIU, from other unions, the contracting industry and from government put it on the line. The trade faces some major challenges—not insurmountable, but in need of hard work—and the officers of the LIU stand prepared to do something about them.

One major challenge, which has been developing over a period of many years took tangible shape in Washington at the same time that a capacity gathering of elected membership representatives were conducting LIU business in Bal Harbour. The Contracting Plasterers and Lathers International Association voted

2 to 1 in favor of going after all kinds of wall and ceiling construction, which means that they now will begin to sell substitute materials. Contractors told the delegates at the Americana Hotel convention site that lath and plaster is still the best in everyone's mind—but the contractors think that diversification will put them in a better competitive position.

There's no need to stress the importance of this CPLIA decision. It represents both challenge and opportunity for the trade, as does the second major area of concern discussed during the convention. In a word, this second challenge is manpower. Repeatedly throughout the convention, spokesmen stressed the need to be able to man all work—and to train an adequate number of apprentices. In very few areas is the ratio near enough.

Virtually all of the building trades, many speakers emphasized, share an apprentice drought with the Lathing trade, and the difficulty experienced in reaching the young people of the country extends beyond the limitations of apprentice registrants. There is a general apathy on the part of most young people about entering the skilled trades, and an apathy about the labor movement in general, when they join the trades.

Other major points of discussion during the convention were industry promotion; the national pension plan—with much progress reported; and the jurisdictional dispute, temporarily stalled pending supreme court action on the LIU's appeal.

Above, delegates register under the watchful eye of the credentials committee. The attendance was a record for LIU conventions, as over 350 delegates arrived at the Americana Hotel.

Below, information made available by the U.S. Labor Department was eagerly collected by the Delegates on their way to the large convention hall, site of the general business sessions and speeches.

MONDAY, September 11

After a welcome by Anthony Siino, President of the Florida State Council of Lathers to the "beautiful Land of Sunshine," and the singing of the national anthems of the U.S. and Canada, General President Maso outlined the progress of the LIU during the past three years, and discussed some of the things that are coming in the next few years. The full text of the General President's speech is on page 4.

Following the General President's leadoff speech, delegates were welcomed by G. Hale Printup, the Assistant Mayor of Bal Harbour Village.

R. H. Semon, President of the Florida State Building and Construction Trades Council, talked about the growing activity of contractors in many areas of the country who are pushing the "merit shop"—basically an open shop, and urged cooperation among all union members, saying "jurisdictional disputes on the job are worse than a non-union contractor."

Some specific problems of Dade County, in which the cities of Miami and Miami Beach are located, were examined by Ed Stephenson, President of the Dade Federation of Labor. He reported plans for a low-income housing project in Dade County. The $4 million project is scheduled for groundbreaking this December, and Stephenson extended a personal invitation to General President Maso to attend.

Concluding with a plea for organized labor to back HR-100, the Situs Picketing bill which was scheduled for Committee hearings the following day in Washington, Stephenson said "Those who came before you had a big fat vision. Their vision was simply to protect the American Worker. Today we deal in politics . . . in certain bills that are designed for the working class of people. I am proud to say that Medicare, social security, civil rights, education bills, everyone of them has had the union label."

The next speaker, Henry J. Gunesch, Labor Consultant for the American Red Cross, thanked the LIU for its close relationship with the AFL-CIO Community Service Department of the Red Cross. He pointed out that there are 160 full-time labor representatives on the staffs of Community Chest and United Fund drives across the country, which has made the community services more representative at the same time that it has improved them. "The byproduct has been the development of a better community climate for the AFL-CIO," Mr. Gunesch said.

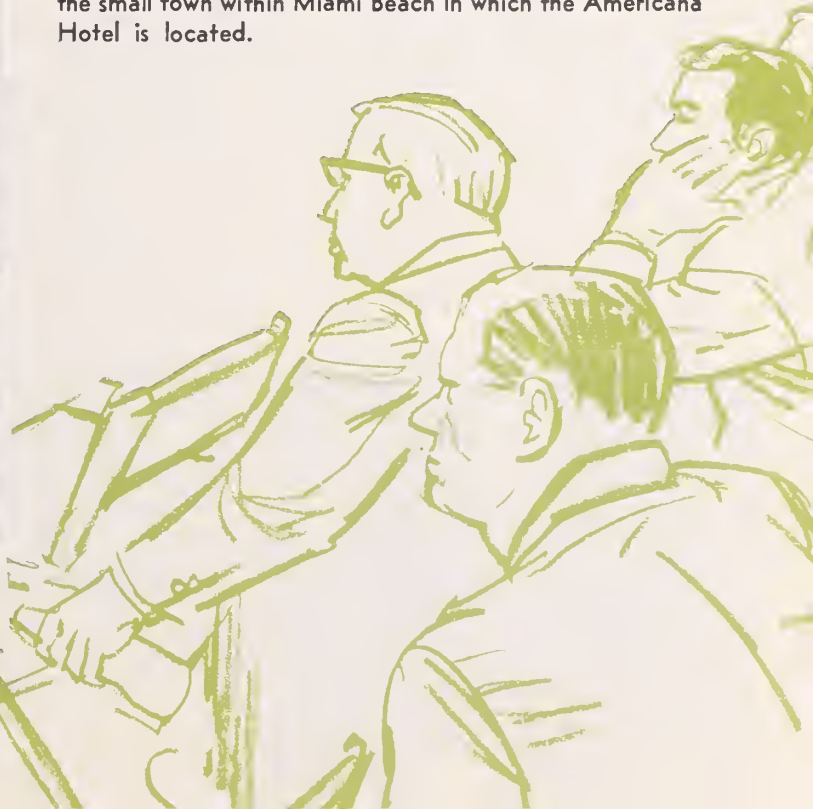

Mr. Henry J. Gunesch, Labor Consultant to the American Red Cross.

Ed Stephenson, President of the Dade Federation of Labor, talks about labor's plans for a low-income housing project. He also discussed special labor problems in the area resulting from the influx of Cuban refugees.

Assistant Mayor G. Hale Printup of Bal Harbour Village, the small town within Miami Beach in which the Americana Hotel is located.

At right, Congressman Claude Pepper hits a light spot in his discussion of the administration's social program. Officers on the dias share his humor. Below, the escort committee ushers the Congressman into the hall before his speech.

"I am particularly pleased to be here because of the close relationship between your President—Sal Maso—and our AFL-CIO Community Services Department . . . I was privileged to address your convention in 1964 at the Astor Hotel in New York City—at that time I stated that your President, Sal Maso, was active in community affairs—that he was dedicated to building a future for members of the trade union movement. As a further testimonial to the compassionate nature of the President of your great Union I said, "men often build statues of snow—and weep when they melt." Sal Maso is no such man. The monuments that exist because of his dedicated efforts are made of stronger, more enduring stuff. Sal Maso's years of public service are years of building—years in which he has molded and shaped the essential materials that have become his towering contribution to the common good. Here, indeed is a man who scoffs at snow statues. Here is a man whose basic philosophy throughout his labor career has been to advocate those measures that result in the greatest good for the greatest number of people. Here is a man of metal with a heart of gold. A man of true compassion."

He also thanked the LIU and the joint apprenticeship program for including first aid training in the apprenticeship manual, and thanked Neil Haggerty for producing the "Safety on the Job with Red Cross First Aid Training" pamphlet under the auspices of the AFL-CIO Building and Construction Trades Department.

The guest of honor and leadoff speaker for Monday afternoon was Congressman Claude Pepper, from the 11th District of Florida, home country for the convention site. In the introductory remarks, for him, General President Maso reminded the delegates that Claude Pepper "is for the working people of this country," and that, "the records will show that he has been counted right on many, many measures that benefit the people of this country."

Almost as soon as he had the podium, Congressman Pepper pledged his support to the situs picketing bill. "I'm going to take a plane at 5:00 o'clock this afternoon and be back in Washington so that I can be sure to be at that Rules Committee meeting tomorrow morning so I can vote on the Situs Picketing bill," he asserted.

Turning to America's broad international goals and their relationship to the needs and wishes of organized labor, Congressman Pepper declared that "we're not ambitious for empire—we just want to give everybody freedom."

We have other problems, as well, Pepper said. In the last election, for example, the Democrats lost the majority, in the House, and "I don't know what is going to happen to your Situs Picketing Bill. I hope," the Congressman said, "that we can get it out of the rules committee."

The Rules Committee, which has the responsibility for the bill, is made up of 15 members—10 Democrats and five Republicans, and "of the Democrats there are some who vote often, unhappily, with the Republicans."

"Incidentally," he continued, "nobody knows this better than Mr. Haggerty. The Republicans are telling it around that they were all for the Situs Picketing bill, and the Democrats were holding it up. We had a vote the other day in the Rules Committee about taking it up tomorrow, and every single Republican voted against taking it up."

If the bill gets out of the Rules Committee, its chances of passage on the floor of the House are even more unpredictable, Pepper said. With the Congress' current lean away from a liberal viewpoint, "about all we can hope for in Congress is inching forward, not striding forward, as we did in the 88th and 89th Congresses."

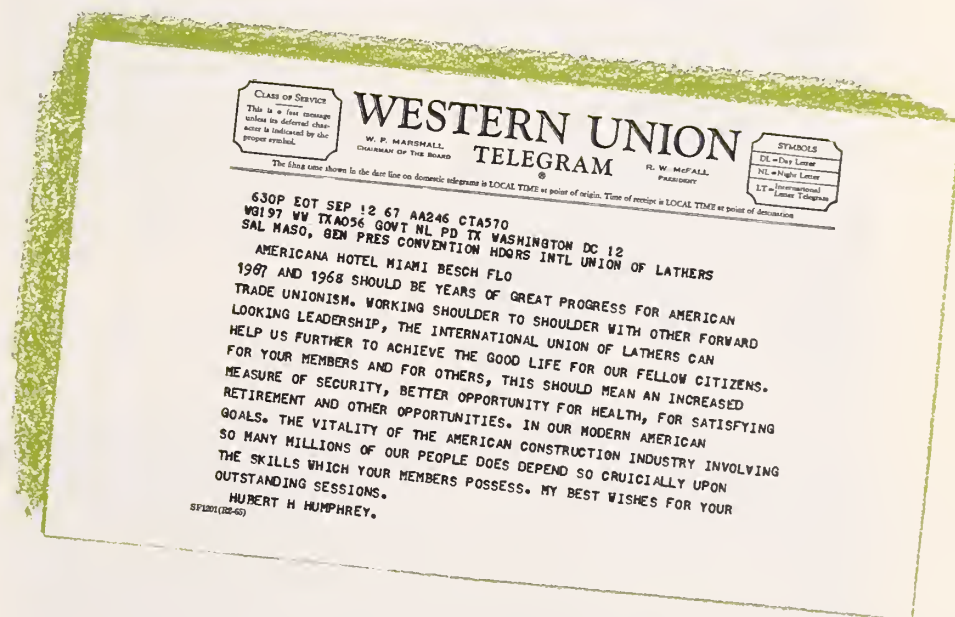

Pepper stressed the responsibility of the labor voters in this coming election campaign. "Every representative in the House . . . and a third of the Senate will be elected next year, and the President of the United States." The individual citizen who will be making his choices faces a fearful responsibility, he said.

Concluding his speech, Congressman Pepper explained his interest in speaking before labor unions. "For so long, he said, "I have retained and maintained a policy of friendship, a very happy and intimate and friendly personal relationship . . . I have fought for a minimum wage law," he said, and has suffered at the polls because of it. The same has been true with free, collective bargaining, Medicare, Social Security, adequate housing, and civil rights—"but I managed to survive."

"The brightest days . . . are not the present or even any part of our glorious past but the wonderful inviting days that lie ahead of us."

Some insight into the new challenges of a different age was provided by Rev. Joseph L. Donahue, the "Lather Priest" who has been a member of the trade since 1925, and carries a card in Local 74. "The Children of Yesterday," Father Donahue said, "are now joining the ranks of the working group," and the entire younger generation is making challenges to every walk of life. Youth needs to be educated on the objectives of organized labor," he said, "and this is where we have failed." He pointed out that the skilled trades have a noble inheritance of toil, suffering and bloodshed, and that the message must somehow be transmitted to the young.

"Talk to them about 14-B" he says, and you'll be amazed how little they care. Talk about Social Security, and they'll tell you that's "ancient history." Talk about improved wages, and they'll want to know how much they'll get today only.

What is needed, he said, is to fill the youth in the labor movement with its philosophy and to give youth leadership responsibility under the guidance and counsel of those with experience.

The lack of interest of younger union members for labor's accomplishments was also discussed by Benjamin B. Naumoff, Director of Region No. 1 of the NLRB, which has jurisdiction over 13 eastern states. "The young," he said, "confronted with so much affluence, don't really have an appreciation for that period of time (in the 30's) through which we went."

Today, as a result of such legislation as the Wagner Act and the Landrum-Griffin Act, Mr. Naumoff said, labor is no longer a private organization. It has become a "quasi-public institution," and with this change in character has come responsibility as well as benefits. Labor is now open to public scrutiny.

"If this Wagner Act . . . gave to these people (the worker) the right to walk into that balloting booth free from interference . . . we ought also to have that same concern for the individual in the labor movement.

"We have a problem. You in organized labor have a problem. A challenge has been thrown on to you by the youngsters of this nation and you and your organization must face that challenge, but first you must try to understand their demands.

When you find a boy with great leadership ability, you should give him courage to follow and give him responsibility to lead him slowly to be a leader, a leader of intelligence, a leader who knows the principles of organized labor, and who will do much for the future generations."

Turning to the subject of pensions, Mr. Naumoff examined portability problems. "The funding problems are not so insurmountable as to prevent labor and management working seriously toward some suitable arrangement for transferring and accumulating accrued pension credits in order to deal effectively with our problem of labor mobility," Naumoff said. "It does seem to me," he noted, "that if this does not work out on some voluntary basis, the urge will be for governmental action."

At top, William Peitler, Jr., speaking for his father, General President and Secretary-Treasurer of the Marble, Slate and Stone Polishers International Union, thanked the delegates for the invitation. Just below him is The Rev. Father Joseph L. Donahue, and Benjamin B. Naumoff, Director of Region 1 of the NLRB. Below, The Rules and Order Committee: front, P. W. Also, Naumoff said, there's no reason why the worker who has been with an employer five years or so should lose his contracted fringes if he is laid off through no fault of his own.

Naumoff suggested, in closing, that we live in a total society in which the preference is for the human being over property, and "it doesn't seem to me to be too much to suggest that we act as if we believed it."

Michael F. Smith

Labor's Role in Civil Defense

Michael F. Smith, AFL-CIO Labor Liaison to the Office of Civil Defense Office of the Secretary of the Army, presented an interesting outline of the hazards posed by possible nuclear attack, and how communities have been preparing, with the help of organized labor, for the event, however unlikely it may be.

In his opening remarks, Mr. Smith paid tribute to General President Sal Maso, outlining Sal's expertise in handling political work in the days when he was lobbying for labor in the New Jersey State House. Sal was "one of the few labor leaders in that time who could move to both sides of the hall and pick up both the Republican and Democratic votes," Smith recalled. "He had a unique way of getting to people."

"We have been very successful in that we have received excellent support", Smith noted. About 6,382 labor leaders, and about 352,000 individuals have been reached with civil defense materials, such as the labor leadership briefing kits, which were distributed to the delegates.

"The building trades have a tremendous stake in this program. . ." Smith said. At the present time, he indicated, U.S. per capita spending on shelters and fallout protection is second lowest among the western nations.

Diversification and our Industry

The Lathers' good friend, John Hauck, Secretary-Treasurer of the OP&CMIA, opened his talk with greetings from the General President of the OP&CMIA, Eddie Leonard, who was attending the meeting of the Building and Construction Trades Executive Council in Washington.

Commenting upon the fact that this was his first opportunity in 26 years as a union officer to address an LIU convention, Mr. Hauck went on to say that he is concerned about the "serious things that are confronting you, as well as us at the present time."

"One of the main issues at the CPLIA convention," Hauck reported, "is the question of whether or not they will diversify their business."

(Note: It was announced later that the CPLIA voted to do so at their Washington Convention.)

Mr. Hauck said, "I have during the years, met with, worked with, and grown to respect many of your leaders, and to become acquainted with many of your problems because many of your problems are the problems of the plasterers."

The ladies—bless 'em—have a go at Bingo, while their husband-delegates are busy on the convention floor. There was also a wig show on the ladies' program, with a fine giveaway for one of the wives.

26th CONVENTION

"My ability to serve the OP&CMIA . . . has been made possible in many respects because I have known and worked with such men as "Bull" McSorley, Terry Ford, Lloyd Peterson, Neil Haggerty, Sal Maso, and many others. Now I personally want to thank you for their having been helpful to me personally and to our International in general."

At the CPLIA convention, where he had spoken earlier, Hauck said that the OP&CMIA would support a diversification decision, as long as the OP&CMIA would be representing the employees that might be used as a result. "However, if by diversification they meant the disbursement of our work jurisdiction so that they would be employing members of other trades, they would find they had a tiger by the tail."

"I noted the talk on the portability of pensions," Hauck said, "and I just don't know how we can have portability or available manpower unless we retain the right to cover by agreement with national or international employer's associations the entire country and the Dominion of Canada.

Portability is a "crying need," he said, but expressed the hope that the Federal Government will not be able to go into international unions in the future to assist area or local unions in arriving at agreements.

Secretary Hauck explained the position of the OP&CMIA with respect to the recent agreement signed with the Gypsum Drywall Contractors Association, noting that the organization has been subject to some criticism because of it.

There is also a problem of definition of what is plaster, and what is paint, Hauck said. "This is holding up the final signing of our revised agreement." The OP&CMIA has invited the participation in this area of the Drywall contractors and the plastering contractors.

"You are going to get into the picture as time goes on because of the base to which some of this material will be applied," Hauck said. "When a painting contractor does this work, certain types of tradesmen put up the base, but the minute a plastering contractor does the same thing on the same base, then a lather gets involved."

"So you know you have got a battle, and one of our first battles is to try and get our legitimate plastering contractors into this field. Time will tell just what will happen there."

The afternoon session on September 12th opened with an address by Arnold Ordman, General Counsel of the NLRB.

"Your organization has been good to us on the whole," Ordman told the delegates in his opening remarks. "You haven't given us too much business."

Neil Haggerty

Robert Hamilton, Chairman of the Credentials Committee.

26th CONVENTION

Ordman noted that labor today has organized only one out of four U.S. workers. The greatest period of growth in the Labor Union movement was in the late 1930s and early 1940s, he said. "Are you perhaps clinging to the idea to the techniques of those years, forgetting that the economic and industrial structure has changed dramatically since those days?"

There are a host of new problems—work protection—subcontracting—plant removal—job and skill eliminations and retraining. Others are pensions and their portability.

"You must find the answers in your own resources," Ordman said. "No one else will do the job for you. I believe you will find the answers."

An Industry-Wide View

The next speaker on the September 12 program was Neil Haggerty, who addressed the LIU delegates in his capacity as President of the Building and Construction Trades Department of the AFL-CIO. First, Mr. Haggerty said "I am extremely proud and grateful to have been asked to address my own International Union's Convention." "The Department speaks directly for about 500 Building and Construction Trades Councils, for about 8,400 local unions of various trades," he said. "Quite a responsibility. That is why we are concerned very much about legislation we propose."

Furthermore, Haggerty took pains to make clear, the legislative work of the Building and Construction Trades Department is handled free and clear of the overall AFL-CIO.

"Today the Rules Committee is holding hearings on the Situs Picketing Bill (H.R. 100)," he said. "That bill will come out of that committee, unless somebody dies or breaks a leg. It's a vote of 8-7," Haggerty said, "but I don't care what the vote is as long as it's a majority."

Predicting tougher sledding on the Floor, Haggerty reminded delegates that the bill is highly controversial, and despite oral and written promises that should get the bill over the hump if it comes up for a vote, even some of those pledged to passage would prefer that the question were never put to them formally. "The bill will come out and then the work has to be done," Haggerty said. "We will be again wiring, we will be again phoning, we will be again writing to all of our people in the respective states to inform and talk or/and told or write to their representative in Congress and get that bill going. That bill is most important to us."

A record turnout of Delegates

Shortly after Mr. Haggerty's remarks, the Chairman of the Credentials Committee, Robert Hamilton, Vice President of the LIU, announced that there were 323 Delegates and 29 alternate Delegates registered at the Convention—a record attendance. Mr. Hamilton also took the opportunity to thank the members of his committee, who had to buckle down to work before the delegates arrived, for the efficient way they handled their job, and to thank the General Secretary-Treasurer, J. Earl Ferguson, for setting up the records in perfect order.

The Credentials Committee: Seated: G. J. Mastrangelo; J. F. Burke; B. J. Hahs; W. L. Benion, and R. F. Hooker. Standing: B. E. Piring; R. R. Ellis; C. A. Setaro; R. Hamilton, chairman; J. Maguire; E. A. Wright; C. J. Chojnacki; J. L. Scroggins.

26th CONVENTION

The Auditing Committee: Seated: B. L. Henry; A. G. Bigelow; C. W. Hill; Henry J. Sheerin, Chairman; A. E. Denault. Standing; J. Davenport; L. E. White; L. C. Kelly; L. Fournier; R. E. Stab; and H. R. Russell. Not shown: M. O'Laughlin, and J. R. Wedig.

The Committee on the Executive Council's Report, chaired by Nat Wasserman, next reported to the delegates, and recommended adoption of Executive Council's Report, and it was so voted on the floor. Mr. Wasserman expressed to the delegates his appreciation for the job done by his committee members.

Immediately thereafter, Arthur Denault, Secretary of the Auditing Committee, reported that the Committee recommended adoption of the report of the General Secretary-Treasurer and it was so voted by the delegates. Mr. Denault thanked the members of the Auditing Committee for a thorough job.

Legal Matters

Following a brief recess LIU General Counsel Louis Wilderman summarized recent legal actions. Characterizing them as "very trying" he first examined the action involving the jurisdictional conflict related to Ceiling systems. He reiterated that the President's report that the case is before the Supreme Court, and said that it is there on a writ of certiorari—a request that the high court hear the case. If the court grants the writ, Wilderman said, "there will then be a full scale argument on all of the legal aspects of the case. If the petition is not granted, then the decision of the United States Court of Appeals will stand as being the last decision in this case."

The General Counsel also discussed the Omega Drywall Case, in Texas, in which a United States District Court Judge gave credibility to the 1903 agreement. He paused during the discussion to characterize the General President's participation. "The General President has been on his toes as to every legal matter in which we have become involved, engaged, or as to which there have been any questions raised. Sal has been advised, he has shown a keen interest and understanding of all of these legal problems, so that we have worked closely together with one objective in mind, and that is the protection of our Provincial, State and District Councils of our Local Unions, of our membership, and the LIU."

Turning to other legal considerations, he examined promotional funds. "You have the right to ask an employer or an association of employers or contractors to agree to a promotional fund . . . but if the contractors say to you 'no, we will not agree to a promotional fund,' you cannot say, 'we will strike to get a promotional fund.'"

The Committee on the Executive Council's Report: Seated: J. Temple; E. G. Opitz; J. L. Farrell; N. Wasserman, Chairman; Nevin Welty. Standing; M. J. Hoffman; J. B. White; J. P. Lorenc; Jerome B. White; R. F. Dunbar; R. H. Long, and Vernon Dayvolt.

There is a law pending in Congress which would permit joint administration of promotional funds, Wilderman said, but at the present time this is not legal. However, Wilderman said, "I would recommend that you try at least to get some advisory capacity status on promotional funds so that if and when the time comes for joint administration, you will at least be in a position to move in and jointly administer it . . . Of course, we can jointly administer pension funds, and we can jointly administer health and welfare funds, and we have, as you know a general pension fund. . . ."

"There will be legislation relating to pension funds—I am pretty convinced of that. . . . One of the things they are going to aim for in a pension fund is what they call funding, vesting, and portability." Funding, he explained, is the setting aside of enough money to cover those who have just entered the plan, yet are about to retire. They have not contributed a substantial portion of their retirement, yet must be provided for. . . . "At the present time there are very few plans which provide for vesting because it's a very expensive item, but there will come a day when vesting may become a legal requirement."

Concluding the business for Tuesday, Chairman Russell Baldwin, of the Committee on the General President's Report, reported Committee recommendation that each section of the report be adopted. Delegates concurred as each individual section was brought up. He thanked the members of his Committee for their contribution.

WEDNESDAY, September 13

William R. Connors, Secretary of the Bricklayers, Masons and Plasterers' International Union of America, spoke next.

Mr. Connors first expressed his thanks to Sal Maso. "I am delighted, Sal," he said, "to have received your kind invitation to come down here because I have many friends among the Lathers group."

"I suppose many of you are wondering this morning why a bricklayer would be chosen to address this great convention, and I want to tell you that we have many, many things in common. . . . I am sure you are aware that in our particular International Union we have many thousands of plasterer members that work closely with tile setters, Connors said.

Turning to the problems of getting young people into the union leadership, Connors recalled the experience of some of his locals. "We wonder why at times it is almost impossible to induce a young man to take an office in a local union, and I think I know why.

"With the advent of television and all these things, our people don't attend meetings like they used to, so it is like pulling teeth to get a young man to take an office. After we get them to take the office, the Local Union membership proceeds to take the hide off him, inch by inch. They harass him every step of the way. . . . Do you wonder why it is practically impossible to have people take offices in our Local Unions?"

Connors also pointed out that organized labor is now in politics "up to our necks," and that all members should become more civic minded, especially at the local level.

Apprenticeship

Hugh Murphy, Administrator of the Bureau of Apprenticeship and Training of the U.S. Department of Labor was the next speaker on the program. A former bricklayer, he holds a card in Local 34, New York City.

After thanking Neil Haggerty for his contributions to the Bureau's programs, Mr. Murphy revealed that "only by accident of birth" was he not a lather. His father was a bricklayer, but most of his mother's brothers—"Lord have mercy on them," were lathers in Local 46, New York. "I see some of these fine young representatives," Murphy said, "but I refer specifically to that young man, Brian Dillon." Murphy then publicly commended Dillon for his contributions, to a standing ovation of the delegates, and announced that Brian is retiring this year.

The LIU has a "very, very small number of 1,647 registered apprentices," Murphy then noted. "If you think you can compete in this market today with a group of people coming along in your industry at this present rate, you are as nutty as a fruit cake—and, as I said, I am going to be extremely blunt with you and lay it right on the line."

The contractors, who Murphy addressed at the CPLIA Washington conference, blame the shortage on the unions, he said. The unions, in turn, come back with criticism of the contractors. "Come on," said Murphy, "let's stop kidding each other. Please believe me when I say this, in an industry as important as ours is to the well-being of the nation, we can't continue in this fashion. . . . Those architects will go right around you like a freight train passing a bum."

Murphy said that you can't just wave a wand over a boy and turn him into an accomplished journeyman lather. It takes time, training, learning on the job and then some. The recent LIU related training correspondence course, Mr. Murphy said, is "exceptionally outstanding" and deserves a real push in those rural areas where apprentices don't have ready access to a formal school.

White Ballot Election

After a brief discussion of proposed resolutions, of the Committee on education, Chairman Kenneth Edwards, General President Maso announced that "The time has now come for the nomination of officers," and turned the gavel over to Vice President Haggerty. At this time, delegate Wasserman, Local 6, Nassau-Suffolk County, New York, made his motion for the white ballot, which carried unanimously to re-elect all incumbent officers. Swearing in was delayed until later in the day.

Educational Committee Chairman Edwards then continued to present resolutions and the decisions of the committee. The committee report was approved by the Delegates.

Leo Schultz, Executive Director of the National Lathing Industry's Joint Apprenticeship Program was the next speaker.

Fresh from the CPLIA Convention in Washington, Mr. Schultz announced that the new president of the CPLIA is Jeremiah Burns, a co-chairman of the Lathing Industry Joint Apprenticeship Committee and a "real friend of the Lathers." Mr. Burns was to address the convention delegates later.

Mr. Schultz then revised the figures for lathing industry apprentices earlier mentioned by Mr. Murphy, "We have 768 in the United States; we have 296 in Canada, for a total of 1,063. This is not very encouraging."

At the present time, he noted, 71 locals are participating in the National Apprenticeship Program, or 23 percent. One of the past problems, he said, has been the lack of a published course for apprentices, outside of the course from the State of California, which is basically an outline course, and the National Apprenticeship Program outline course. Now, with the recent introduction of the related correspondence instruction course, the potential for greatly broadening the program has been provided.

"The mean size of our locals is 20," Schultz noted, "and we know that any local of 20 men will not have a sufficient number of apprentices for a classroom situation. . . . There are only approximately 30 areas of locals in the United States that can have a school situation. The rest of them must depend on some other means."

Describing the course, Mr. Schultz pointed out that it is entirely self-contained. Within the five volumes, every subject is covered in great enough detail that no other sources are needed. The course was broken up into five volumes, he said, because the sheer size of the course under a single cover would discourage even the bravest.

Committee on Grievances: Seated: A. Galluccio; R. W. Routt; C. B. Morgan; W. C. Parker; Creighton White, Chairman; K. Hamilton; M. Buonsora; V. J. Arriola. Standing: J. C. Price; Bedell; R. P. DeCiucies; G. S. Monkman; A. J. Donovan, and Alexander Jackson.

George Moore

The courses will be administered nationally. The local joint apprenticeship committee need only register their boys for the course, and the rest is handled by mail. The apprentice receives the course guide and the first study volume, complete with lesson forms and self-addressed envelopes. On the completion of a lesson, he mails it in and proceeds with the next lesson. The lessons are graded, any problem areas are discussed by mail with him.

The text can also be used in a classroom situation, Schultz said. It would take some of the load off of instructors to present everything orally, so that class time can be used more productively.

The course, Schultz said, "is of no value unless it is used . . . so I would like to encourage everyone of the locals to consider putting their boys in this program."

The next project of the Apprenticeship program is a refresher course for journeymen—shorter, but including blueprint reading, take-off, layout systems. "We have received so many new ones, and we have revived some of the old ones," Schultz said, "because . . . a great percentage of our members did not have an opportunity for formal apprenticeship training. The instruction would provide a sound basis for preparing to be a foreman, if the lather has that ambition.

While Apprenticeship is vital to job manning, Schultz said, it works together with another vital area of concern and any discussion of one without the other is shortsighted. This second vital area is promotion, he noted. "Don't put your money in apprenticeship if you don't put some money in promotion; and don't put money in promotion if you don't have good apprenticeship, because one is no good without the other."

Following presentation of the few remaining resolutions of the Educational Committee, Chairman Edwards thanked the members for their outstanding help.

Installation of Officers

At this time, the convention business was suspended long enough for George Moore to officiate at the installation of the new officers. Speaking immediately afterward for the assembled new officers, First Vice President Haggerty said the officers recognize that these are "troublesome times," and their responsibilities heavy, but that they are "Happy, and pleased, and proud" to have been unanimously re-elected.

Next business was the report of the Committee on Laws, chaired by Law Committee Chairman John M. Sheehan.

Delegate John Sheehan. One of the important resolutions recommended by the Committee at this time, and approved by the Delegates, requires Local Unions to "See that a joint Labor-Management Apprenticeship Committee is established, affiliated with the National Lathing Industry's Joint Apprenticeship Plan," which shall have the duty and responsibility to train apprentices in a sufficient number to supply the adequate needs of the lathing trade in accordance with the following provisions. . . ."

The solemn oath of office is administered to LIU officers by George Moore.

Thomas R. Donahue, Assistant Secretary of Labor.

The Administration's Program

The leadoff speaker for the Wednesday afternoon session was Thomas R. Donahue, Assistant Secretary of Labor for Labor-Management Relations. He is responsible for the activities of the Wage and Hour and Public Contracts Division.

In his early comments, Mr. Donahue pointed out that he is a former member of Local 46, New York City. In 1947, he said, he spent a summer working as a permit member, "so I owe a debt to the Lathers Union because they paid for the following year of college out of that summer's work. I owe them a debt, too, because I learned what a good day's work was."

"Your union," Donahue said, "under Sal Maso's leadership has made great strides; and you are to be congratulated for that, too. Your membership has increased; apprenticeship programs and plans to spread job opportunities have been improved and you have improved and maintained your craft in the face of constant problems with changing technology and other difficulties that craftsmen face in days of change." Mentioning the fact that the lathers he knows have a great deal of pride in their work, Donahue continued with some observations on "where America stands today; where we are at this point in time and where we are going."

Wages are better than ever, he said, there are more comforts, and we are a prosperous nation. Yet we have a number of problems to solve.

"Looking elsewhere, we are committed, too, to the defense of freedom outside of our own shores."

Concluding, Donahue said, "I am sure that you, as Americans, and as trade unionists, are going to meet those responsibilities."

Following Mr. Donahue's talk a number of resolutions were brought before the floor by Chairman John Sheehan of the Committee on Laws. One of the important resolutions accepted by the delegates, submitted by Local No. 108, Wilmington, Delaware, adds to Section D of the trade jurisdiction the following wording:

"All sheet rock (dry wall) whether nailed, screwed, clipped, glued, fastened in any way to studs, ceilings or walls of any type."

Another important resolution passed by the delegates authorized the establishment of an organizing division for workers who produce or distribute or service products related to or used in the lathing industry.

A resolution to "provide for true per capita vote at all international Conventions," in order to strengthen the democracy of the LIU, and to base this per capita vote on "the average per capita tax paid to the Wood, Wire and Metal Lathers' International Union during the preceding year, January through December, inclusive," was voted for by the delegates.

Delegates from Canada check their Committee assignment books against the roster read during the opening hours of the convention.

Joseph Rourke, Deputy Director of COPE.

A change in the month of International Conventions was also approved by the delegates. According to the adopted Resolution No. 41, which changes section 207 of the LIU Constitution, regular conventions of the LIU "shall convene every three (3) years at 10 o'clock AM on the second Monday in August." The "Executive Council shall," however, "for cause considered by it to be urgent and justifiable, have the right to change the date, time and place of the convention."

THURSDAY September 14, 1967

Leadoff speaker for the Thursday session was Mr. Joseph Rourke, Deputy Director of COPE.

"I am pinch-hitting this morning," Rourke said, "for the Director of COPE, Al Barkan, a native of New Jersey and a long-time friend of your president, Sal Maso, so I want to bring to you the best wishes of Al Barkan and the entire COPE organization."

Describing the job of COPE, Mr. Rourke called it a Committee of the AFL-CIO, just like the Legislative Department.

"We endorse no candidates in Washington," Rourke said. "Any candidates that are endorsed for Congress, for the United States Senate, are endorsed back in the States. . . . If a candidate is not supported by the state organization, we cannot in national COPE give them any money.

The money to help local and national candidates is raised through the voluntary COPE contributions. When a local candidate is endorsed, he receives about $2,000 from COPE. A Senatorial candidate gets a maximum of $10,000. The total COPE expenditure of these voluntary funds is about $1 million a year—which "isn't very much when you consider that it costs $30,000 to run for Congress—about a quarter of a million to run for the United States Senate—this in an average state." The total national money spent on political campaigns is about $200 million a year.

Around the country, Rourke said, labor is having problems in politics.

People seem to be more interested in local affairs than in the major problems, Rourke said. Despite the outstanding record of the 89th Congress in social progress, labor lost 47 solid friends in the Congress in 1966, Rourke noted. "We couldn't understand it," Rourke said, so a study was made. Among the facts turned up by a sample survey of unions, was the fact that 50 percent of union members were under 40; 50 percent live in the suburbs, and 20 percent are women. A total of 25 percent have belonged to a union for less than 25 years.

Resolution of Thanks

WHEREAS, the Delegates and Officers of the Wood, Wire and Metal Lathers' International Union here convened for this 26th Convention have been most generously and courteously received by the people of this state, and

WHEREAS, the time which all of us have spent here has been made significantly more productive and enjoyable through the efforts of the members of the Wood, Wire and Metal Lathers' International Union from this state:

THEREFORE, BE IT RESOLVED that all Delegates and Officers here assembled express their deepest and sincerest appreciation to all members of the Florida State Council of Lathers for a Convention and for a kind of hospitality that will not be soon forgotten.

Signed, by the Officers and Delegates of this Convention.

Pat Mullane, chairman of the Resolutions Committee.

A. H. Burton, Chairman of the Committee on Organization.

Gordon Matthews, Sales Manager, Inland Steel.

"These young members of our trade unions today are a different breed. They don't want to know anything about the Depression . . . about the hardships that you have been through. . . . These people are not in all cases proud of their union, I am sorry to say, and that is our fault—mine and yours."

Among the jobs to be done is education of these younger members to the labor movement. Also, the young people want to know about taxes—pure air—pure water—better roads.

Immediately following Mr. Rourke's talk, Chairman Pat Mullane of the Resolutions Committee brought up for action the per capita tax increase, and it was referred back to the committee for study.

The Chairman of the Committee on Organization, A. H. Burton, presented the recommendations of his committee on a number of resolutions drafted to adapt the LIU constitution to new labor laws, and the resolutions were voted on by the delegates. Concluding his presentation, Brother Burton noted that his Committee members really delved into the resolutions, and he thanked them for their work.

First speaker on the Thursday afternoon program was Gordon Matthews, Sales Manager for Inland Steel Products Company. Talking about the decline in the percentage of the construction dollar going to lathing, while the volume of construction increases, Mr. Matthews noted that "all of us together are engaged in a fierce battle."

Very simply, cost—first cost—"seems to be an overriding consideration" on the part of most building owners. One example, Matthews said, is the loss of plaster membrane fire-proofing of steel floor decks to direct spray-on systems: inferior, but cheaper, and acceptable under the codes. An attempt to win back this business, he said, would be an uphill battle, and therefore, the industry should turn to the promotion of lath and plaster building systems which are both better and cheaper—or at least equal in cost. Curtain wall is one such system, he said.

Because it's lighter, it makes possible savings in the cost of foundations, which may actually pay the entire cost of the curtain walls.

"Surely . . . an exciting breakthrough opportunity for our industry."

Introducing two of his sales representatives, Bill Ruell and Bob Fleisch, Mr. Matthews proceeded to show slides of recent curtain wall jobs which demonstrated what he was talking about.

One was an apartment at Moorestown, New Jersey, which was switched from precast wall panels to a load-bearing stud design in which prefabricated Milcor 16 gauge structural stud trusses were used as spandrel panels between the masonry walls. These panels were prefabricated on the job site with a jig, and studs were welded into place.

The Committee on Education: Seated: N. R. Alms; C. W. Baker; C. E. Alderman; J. Kidulich. Standing: A. N. Donnelly; K. Edwards, Chairman; R. F. Coullahan; A. M. Crawford, Jr.; H. J. LeBlanc; C. H. Collins; J. U. DeBrosse.

Richard N. Parker, Managing Director, Metal Lath Association.

Another job shown was a 31-story Chicago building, which had been designed with 4-inch precast concrete panels. Lath and plaster curtain wall panels were prefabricated in the shop out of channel iron and lath with expanded metal lath stitched on the panels. The Granoluxed panels were transported to the job site and lifted into place by a hydraulic lift.

A secondary benefit of selling these curtain wall jobs, Matthews said, is the fact that often much of the entire interior can be converted to lath and plaster, once the lathers get on the job. In the Chicago high rise, there was a small amount of lath and plaster work, in the restrooms, and the rest of the building was a substitute. After the exterior was sold, a great deal of lath and plaster work was opened up in the interior.

The last job illustrated was a small office building in McLean, Virginia, which used load-bearing jobsite prefabricated panels that were hoisted into position along the periphery of the floor, tied together with the steel roof trusses, and finished.

The next speaker was Richard N. Parker, Managing Director of the Metal Lath Association, who also talked about curtain wall construction. In his introductory remarks, he pointed out that manufacturers, salesmen and lathers often speak of the metal lath industry as being just the manufacturers. "It isn't. The metal lath industry is all of us," Parker said. Then, quickly reviewing the well-known benefits of lath and plaster, he said, "it often seems that nobody else knows about it," considering the beating we are taking from competing materials."

"All right, then, let's lay it on the line. . . . We are up against two mighty bucks. One buck is the speculative buck that goes to our competitors, and the other buck is the one that is passed from man to man and is never stopped. This means that we have got two battles to fight. One to be competitive, the other to stop passing the buck."

There is a need for making sure we are using our materials most efficiently in order to compete, Parker said. "Things are not well. You know that as well as I. Right now, the only ray of sunshine in our future is the curtain wall, and even this bright spot has some potential trouble clouds hanging over it. The construction of proper curtain walls is not a common lathing proposition. . . . These walls must be engineered . . . must be erected following the engineer's design. Work practices don't count; substitutions are out; mistakes and omissions are unforgivable.

"Many of you . . . will have to use new skills," and in some cases, he said, will wind up erecting the entire basic building structure.

"You may need to become insulators."

The fifty states, and the Canadian Provinces, were well represented by the almost 250 delegates to the 26th Convention of the LIU. It took a sizeable room in the Americana Hotel to hold all of the delegates. At the left, officers and guest speakers, and escorts are on the podium.

A small caucus on the floor during the convention business.

"If this work becomes fragmented . . . then we will probably lose out to the panel erector who comes in with another trade and puts one single piece in place."

Parker talked about standards being developed by the Metal Lath Association, and the recent completion of a fire and hose stream test for a two-hour curtain wall. He pointed out some of the innovations in the structure needed to obtain the rating—resilient clips for wind load—and 16-inch-wide insulating materials with an added vinyl vapor barrier.

"Through a small stroke of genius and a large stroke of luck, we found that a vinyl film could be attached to the studs by means of the resilient clips. We tried it and it worked—but you should have seen us trying to put this mess together at the bench."

Most of the new wall designs, Parker said, will be covered by the codes. Further, they must be buildable. The Association wants to eliminate any projects or systems that are not readily available, and wants to limit the number of trades involved. Anything new has to be reasonably economical. "About versatility and esthetics," Parker said, "There isn't much to say other than 'boy, we have got it, and we will sell it.'"

"But gentlemen, whether we have got anything or not, the key to success will remain competition."

Per Capita Tax Increase

Next order of business was the final report of the Chairman of the Resolutions Committee, Pat Mullane. After consultation with the LIU accountant, Mark Cunningham, of Eric J. Jansson & Company, the committee recommended an increase in the per capita tax of 40 cents per month per member. It also recommended transfer of $100,000 out of the Legal Defense Fund into the General Fund. Changes made by the Committee, after the resolution had earlier been referred back to it for further work by the delegates, included a reduction of the proposed 60 cents per member increase to 40 cents, and the addition of the transfer of the $100,000 out of the Legal Defense Fund to the General Fund.

The resolution, as amended, was approved by the Delegates. Chairman Mullane then extended his thanks to his hard-working committee, which did a splendid job, he said, under very trying conditions."

The Chairman of the Grievance Committee, Creighton White, next announced that there was a unanimous decision on every item by the Committee, and recommended concurrence by the Delegates with the Executive Board recommendations. The delegates then voted on each item in the report.

Jeremiah Burns, new President of the CPLIA.

The Contractor's Rights

Jeremiah Burns, New York City lathing contractor, newly-elected President of the Contracting Plasterers and Lathers International Association, and co-chairman of the National Apprenticeship Committee with Sal Maso, was the next speaker. In his early comments, Mr. Burns expressed his respect for the General President.

"I consider myself most fortunate over the years to have known and worked with your General President, Sal Maso. In my years in construction, I have met many dedicated men, but no one who is more dedicated to the lathing industry than he.

"This man has traveled from north to south, and east to west, working day and night in the promotion of our industry.

"I have worked very closely with him, as co-chairman of the National Apprenticeship program, and I can tell you, gentlemen, that he has done a terrific job.

"The manner in which this program has grown, both in status and scope, can be attributed to the mutual trust we have in one another."

Mr. Burns also paid tribute to Leo Schultz, and the Joint Apprenticeship Committee, and gave a special accolade to Bob Hamilton of Chicago "who has given unstintingly of his time and efforts in reviewing the two courses prepared for our apprentices."

Burns urged support of the Na-your last convention ratified a resolution making it mandatory to contribute to the promotional fund. Gentlemen—promotion without manpower is wasted. . . . We must have both. That is why I respectfully repeat my request for the adoption of the resolution at this convention making it compulsory to contribute to the apprenticeship fund."

Relating the fate of New York City marble men, who "would stand around salamanders and fires, drinking coffee and chewing the fat," Burns said that they found that "until just recently (they) have had plenty of

"Your general president has been an indefatigable worker on this promotion thing," Burns added, "and time to drink coffee, if they had the price."

"I believe you know what I am driving at. . . ." Quoting from recent writing in this company's house organ, he said he had noted that the employer is "not receiving a day's work for a day's pay," in all of the building trades, not just his alone.

The daily proceedings—printed and handed out while the convention was in process—get close scrutiny.

Floor action. During discussion on many of the resolutions, participation by delegates was frequent, as they asked questions, voiced opposing views, and prepared for voting.

The General President took opportunity during the convention to address the Canadian Delegation.

"Why shouldn't the contractor insist on his rights," Burns asked. "We should. Every project manager, job superintendent and all other contractor supervisory personnel on the job should be advised by you. These people should make it implicitly plain to the job foreman, and they to the men under them, that we will insist on better performances."

Burns related talks by Government representatives at the CPLIA convention, where they said that they want to convert Government projects to lath and plaster, but that enough lathers and plasterers are not available. They said they had a building going up—18 stories—in which there were two plasterers at work, and the man in charge was about to switch to drywall.

The Diversification Decision

Burns announced the vote the previous day at the CPLIA convention, to adopt the resolution "that henceforth and from now on we will be ceiling and wall contractors." Burns said he did not need to elaborate on this. "The contractor cannot stand by and see his annual volume of business diminished to the point of no return."

Burns said he hopes that this decision will make it possible for the contractor to make a better presentation to owners and general contractors in which lath and plaster is recommended.

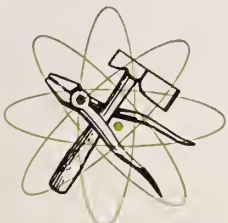

"I urge each and every delegate here today," Burns said, "to encourage the membership to deliver a fair day's work for a fair day's pay. Your own General President, I know, is of a similar feeling, for he has appeared personally before many local Unions and state groups, urging this. But General President Maso, with all of his abilities, cannot single-handedly bring this about."

Concluding, Burns promised that, "during the next 13 months that I serve as President of the CPLIA, I shall work even harder than before with your General President to promote the best interests of the lathing industry."

Immediately following Mr. Burns' address, the General President said: "I have some good news for you, Jerry," and read the text of Resolution No. 5, on Joint Labor-Management Apprenticeship, which had earlier been adopted by the delegates. This is the resolution requiring Local Unions to establish a joint committee, affiliated with the National Plan where there is none, and train apprentices in sufficient number to supply the adequate needs of the lathing trade.

"Thank you very much, Sal," Mr. Burns said, "I hope it has the desired effect."

Thomas McGlone

The Wage/Profit Line

Thomas McGlone, President of the National Bureau for Lathing and Plastering, was the next speaker. He led off, like Mr. Burns, with some words of tribute for the General President.

"I would like to say a few words about my friend Sal Maso," McGlone said—"and I consider him my friend, because when I took the responsibility of rebuilding the National Bureau, I looked to Sal and he came forward on every occasion with his help to form the Northeast Bureau, and the Mid-Atlantic and the Southeast, and across the country.

"He has been tireless in his efforts to improve this industry, and such devotion I have never seen.

"All I can say is God bless Sal Maso."

"Labor went out and got living wages," McGlone recalled, "and are now able to buy the products that they make. The manufacturers gained as did the workers themselves. I think now, however, that you have reached a state of maturity—that you have run a full circle, and you are equally charged with the responsibility of maintaining that prosperity as we know it, and I think we are now at a very delicate point in this economy."

Urging that lathers help to start holding the line on wages, McGlone said "it takes a lot of courage—it takes a heck of a lot of courage—but I have never known the lathers to be lacking in courage. What good does it do us to get more wages if the products we buy also increase?"

Turning then to industry promotion, McGlone reflected on the revitalization of the National Bureau that was all but defunct two and half years ago when he accepted the presidency. Joint promotion has been declared illegal. "So we tried to revitalize it . . . on a unilateral basis to make it legal."

Promotion, said McGlone, has probably "been never more critical than it is now, and I suggest all of you in your next labor negotiations, if you don't already have the promotional clause in there, by all means bargain for it."

Plans for future promotion, McGlone pointed out, involve activity on a regional basis, instead of city by city as in the past. This will make it possible to collect enough money in one spot to hire the "best professional people we can find—not a lather, not a plasterer, not a contractor—but a professional to sell our trade and our business for us."

Pension plans, too, were examined by McGlone. "I think that the pension plan that your international has developed here is one of the finest in the construction industry, and I would urge all of you who don't have the pension plan to bargain for it."

Concluding, McGlone said, "Let's work together to build up a bigger, stronger, more healthy, vigorous industry. It will be an advantage to both of us."

Tom Miller poses a question from the floor.

"What Do We Do About the New Stuff?"

The next speaker was Joe Baker, Jr., Managing Director of the CPLIA, who admitted that he hadn't been getting much sleep during the past two weeks, while he had been running the CPLIA convention. He announced that previous speaker Tom McGlone was no longer just a member of the Board of Directors of the CPLIA in addition to his National Bureau post, but had been elected Treasurer in Washington. He then continued with some words about cooperation with the LIU:

"Now, gentlemen, I represent management; and politically, as Sal knows, I am a conservative. I work for an organization which opposes some of the goals of organized labor—and yet the relationship that we have and that I have personally with your General President is one of the best relationships between Labor and Management in Washington, D.C.

"I have an open mind to him, and he to me, at all times. We understand each other; we respect each other, and we work together, and I am proud to say that Sal Maso is not just an acquaintance or someone I work with on the Labor-Management basis; I say that Sal Maso is one of my best personal friends, and I am proud to say that."

Talking about the challenges of tomorrow, Mr. Baker related some of the exchanges of the 1926 CPIA (In those days the "L" hadn't been added) Convention, which boiled down to "What are we going to do about this new stuff, this new wallboard." And the answer had been—"Let's Fight It." No one, Baker said, suggested that they take it over." Now our backs are to the wall. Your membership is down, and our contractors' membership is down.

"I believe we have got to stop what I think is a silly, ridiculous promotional effort in which we burn dry-wall in little ovens. . . . We are going to do what we can to try to take it over, and in taking it over we are going to promote lath and plaster."

Baker continued:

"I want you to remember that the CPLIA is one management group which has supported you in your legal fights against encroachment by the Carpenters. We backed you up in the Hearings Panel of the National Joint Board while another national association which hires your men opposed you in support of the Carpenters.

Joe Baker, Jr., Managing Director, CPLIA.

"We have backed you in the courts; we are continuing to back you in the courts, and when the Supreme Court session opens in October, you will have our support there, too."

The New York Delegation

Baker said the CPLIA is not affiliated with the National Joint Board because of "the manner in which its decisions have been made in the past," but added that there had been two resolutions before the CPLIA convention on the subject. One called for investigating affiliation, and one called for affiliation. The latter started out with a proviso that "we respectfully request the Lathers International Union to start abiding by all of the decisions." Baker said "that little supplementary part was deleted, and deleted by us by unanimous vote."

The motion to affiliate immediately was tabled: the motion to investigate affiliation was passed. "We know," Baker said, "that if we don't do it (find some manner of setting jurisdictional disputes of a voluntary basis) Uncle Sam is going to do it for us. And none of us wants that."

The California Delegation

Baker also announced that the CPLIA had voted to recognize, endorse and participate in the Wood, Wire and Metal Lathers International Union Pension Plan. "We did these things and Sal Maso wasn't even there. I hate to think what would happen if he had been," Baker concluded.

After a discussion on the site of the next convention, which was referred to the Executive Council with bids for Las Vegas, Nevada, Miami, and Canada recorded, delegates, officers and members of the LIU were thanked by Tony Sino in behalf of the Florida State Council for bringing the convention to Miami.

General President Sal Maso, in behalf of General Secretary-Treasurer J. Earl Ferguson, the Vice Presidents and all officers, thanked the delegates for their cooperation. "The convention was done and done well," Sal said.

"You have heard the speakers and they have brought you a message and told you that this is a responsibility that does not rest with your officers internationally or on your local levels, but rests with the membership. These messages must be brought home. You must not stand in the way of bringing apprentices in your local union. You must expand. You must grow. I assure you that I will take advantage of everything to promote our industry and to move forward."

The General President adjourned the convention sine die.

In the evening, the Delegates and and their families attended a banquet dinner and show in the Americana Hotel—a fitting conclusion to a productive and significant convention.

LATHER'S TOOLS

REPLACEABLE JAWS

Lather's favorite tool for cutting steel lath, tiles, all wire products. Simple, rugged construction with hardened, high carbon steel jaws that are replaced quickly, easily to make the tool good as new time after time. Easy on the hand thru the longest day, too. A tool you'll swear by after the first time you use it! 8" long with 1 3/4" jaws. 04 680 H7.....Only $6.40
Extra Jaws—04 580 H7.....$2.00

FORGED TOOL STEEL
END CUT
NIPPERS

A high quality lather's nippers worth more than the price. Built to take it of perfectly forged and tempered tool steel that's perfect for cutting wire. Easy to handle too—use 'em all day without tiring your hand. 04 507 H7.....Only $4.20

Goldblatt Tool Company
525-J Osage, Kansas City, Kans. 66110

NEW! STAINLESS
STEEL MAGNETIC NAIL DRIVER

Because it's longer—a full 7"—and slimmer—only 7/16" diameter—you'll find it a lot easier to reach into those hard-to-nail channels and corners with this new nail driver. Has a strong, everlasting Alnico V magnet set in the nose to grip nails tightly. And thanks to 3/8" hexagonal shank it's easier to get a good hold on this time and effort saving tool. 04 156 M7.....Only $5.20

DUAL PURPOSE SELF-CHALKING LINE BOX

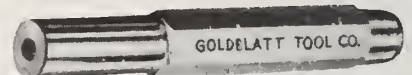

It's a Chalk Line and a Plumb Line, too! Plumb Boh Tip is refill cap. A twist of the fingers opens it for easy refill, another twist locks it. Complete with extra strong 100' line. 09 301 H7.....Only $2.00
CHALK for box above. Won't cake. 8-oz. cans. Dark Blue—09 304 H7.50c Red—09 306 H7.50c

LATHER'S PAL
LEATHER
NAIL BAG

Soft, heavy chrome tanned split cowhide, stitched with linen cord drawn thru wax for extra strength. Reinforced on both sides with smooth rivets that can't scratch your hands. 14 1/2 x 10" with 9" deep pocket. 04 451 H7.....Only $3.25

G.I. BELT—Sturdily woven, with rugged non-rusting clasp. Will last years. 04 452 H8.....Only $2.45

CHROME STEEL
MAGNETIC NAIL HOLDER

Here's a rugged, well-balanced, shaped-to-fit-your-hand nail holder that's long been a favorite of journeymen who refuse to settle for less than the best. Has a heat treated steel insert with Alnico V permanent magnet that makes nails stick to it like glue so you can spot 'em right where you want 'em! 5 1/2" long. 3/4" diameter nose. 04 152 H7.....Only $5.00

ESTWING SUPREME LATH HATCHET

An UNBREAKABLE lath hatchet with easy-to-replace razor sharp blade. Forged in one piece of finest steel. Exclusive molded-on Nylon-Vinyl cushion grip will never loosen, age or wear out. Scored face prevents glancing blows, flying nails. Weighs 1 1/4 lbs. 04 300 H7.....Only $6.75
Pack of 4 Extra Blades—04 303 H7.....$1.00

April 9, 1912, President William Howard Taft signed a bill creating in the Federal Government a Children's Bureau charged with investigating and reporting "upon all matters pertaining to the welfare of children and child life among all classes of our people." Congress also appropriated the modest sum of $25,640 for the bureau's first year.

Signing this bill represented a triumph of some years in which many had backed the effort to found a Children's Bureau and among the most ardent supporters were the trade unions and the National Child Labor Committee.

Two energetic and far-sighted women, however, were the chief promoters of the bureau—Lillian Wald, a nurse and founder of the New York City Henry Street Settlement, and Mrs. Florence Kelley of the National Consumers' League. Lillian Wald suggested the bureau in 1903. Mrs. Kelley wrote "Some Ethical Gains through Legislation," a book drawn on by Congress in hearings on the bill.

Efforts beginning in 1906 when the first bill was introduced came to a climax six years later when the bill introduced by Idaho's Senator William E. Borah passed. Julia C. Lathrop, close associate of Jane Addams at Hull House, Chicago, was the first bureau chief. Guidelines were developed in the early days which marked out areas for investigation, study and action which have been milestones in child welfare. Organized labor had a part in the enactment of the first measure and has always been one of the bureau's strongest supporters.

NUMBER 10

"THE INJURY TO ONE IS THE CONCERN OF ALL"

REPORT

from the General President

SAL MASO

After a convention which set new records for the numbers of Delegates in attendance, we must buckle down once more to the task of keeping the LIU in sound health from day to day.

One of the most important decisions made at the convention was the adoption of Resolution Number 5, which changes Section 194a of the LIU Constitution, to make it mandatory for all local unions to establish a joint Labor-Management Apprenticeship Committee affiliated with the National Lathing Industry's Joint Apprenticeship Plan, if they have not already done so. I cannot overemphasize the importance of this decision, nor overemphasize the fact that it is now mandatory to set effective apprenticeship machinery in motion in every local. The text of the resolution, as approved by the Delegates, follows:

JOINT LABOR MANAGEMENT APPRENTICESHIP

WHEREAS, Apprentices and apprenticeship is of vital interest and concern to the LIU, Provincial, State and District Councils, Local Unions and the membership; and

WHEREAS, The National Lathing Industry's Joint Apprenticeship Plan has clearly proven that it is necessary and beneficial in achieving a sound, constructive and successful apprenticeship program:

NOW, THEREFORE, BE IT RESOLVED: that Section 194a of the LIU Constitution be changed to read as follows:

Section 194a. Local Unions shall have the duty and responsibility to see that a joint Labor-Management Apprenticeship Committee is established which shall be affiliated with the National Lathing Industry's Joint Apprenticeship Plan and which shall have the duty and responsibility to train apprentices in a sufficient number to supply the adequate needs of the lathing trade. . . .

As I have said many times in the past, apprenticeship is the backbone of any labor organization, and it is now the responsibility of every member of the international union to do everything possible, in every way, to build up the number of apprentices in every local union.

My views on this subject were recently reinforced by the remarks of Hugh Murphy, Administrator of the Bureau of Apprenticeship and Training of the U.S. Labor Department. Addressing delegates to our convention, Murphy laid it on the line. If we don't man the work, he said, the architects and builders will bypass the lather "like a freight train passing a bum." He's deadly serious, and so are we.

We must be more concerned with apprenticeship today for another reason. The entire trade union apprenticeship scene is being watched with careful eye by the U.S. Government, and it is moving, under pressure from outside as well as within, toward greater and greater influence over the apprenticeship system, with respect to civil rights. Like it or not, this surveillance is here to stay. We live with it every day at headquarters, and know that unless we observe the new law most scrupulously ourselves, others will do it for us.

There is new public "concern" with what is called "job bias" in the construction trades. It seems ironical that this public interest comes after the building trades have begun to face up to the issue themselves, and actually brought great improvement, but it is as difficult to convince the layman that the problems are far less severe now than they used to be as it is to convince some foreign countries of this for the nation as a whole. While our struggle for "good press" in this respect goes on, there is only one way to handle our own apprenticeship, and that is the right way.

A strong apprenticeship committee in each local—not merely a token force—is an absolutely essential first step.

It should be hardly necessary to add that Apprenticeship without Promotion is wasted time and money. Just as surely as we cannot survive without apprentices we cannot survive without promotion. Cooperation with industry on promotional matters—at least as far as advice is concerned—was already mandatory. Now we must mesh promotion and apprentice as if our own jobs five years hence depended on it. In fact, they may.

I'd like to pass on to you a very encouraging report from our Director of the Joint Apprenticeship Program, Leo Schultz. Mr. Schultz, who manages the newly-available related training materials for apprentices, tells me that there has been a tremendous response for the manuals and the study guide wherever they have been put to work. Already, Local 46, New York, has taken advantage of this quality material by incorporating it into the already-established apprenticeship school.

Mr. Schultz is to be commended for his foresight in pushing this project along, and for the professional caliber of the work that he brought together to prepare it. To put this course material to work as soon as possible, I urge all locals to contact Mr. Schultz, directly. His address is: Mr. Leo Schultz, Director, National Lathing Industry Joint Apprenticeship Program, 6401 New Hampshire Avenue Hyattsville, Maryland. I assure you that your inquiries will receive prompt attention.

Another key role in the development of this material was played by our good friend Jeremiah Burns, co-chairman of the Joint Apprenticeship Committee, and a close associate of long standing. It's a special privilege for us to have had Jerry's hand in this, because of his background as a working lather, and because of his responsibilities in the lathing industry.

Most of you know, by this time, that Jerry has just been elected the new President of the CPLIA. He spoke to us at the Miami convention almost immediately following this important event at the CPLIA convention in Washington. We congratulate the contractors for their wisdom in the choice of Jerry as their President, and welcome the prospect of even closer association with him in the coming months.

I have notified all Locals, State, District and Provincial Councils, as well as Officers and the International and Deputy Representatives of the LIU that I am appointing a number of new deputy representatives. International Representatives will continue to service assigned areas as they have in the past. The Deputy International Representatives who I have assigned or will assign to their new responsibilities, will handle special assignments as the need arises. I ask all of you for your fullest cooperation with these Deputies, and with the International Representatives.

Selection of the new Deputy International Representatives is based on geographical considerations, in order to assure the membership that competent and qualified representation will be available to handle assignments in virtually every section of the country. This ensures more immediate attention to all matters of concern, at the least possible cost to the LIU.

Another matter of importance to every member is the new procedures to be followed in the hearing of charges brought against any member or officer of the LIU. I have notified all International and Deputy Representatives that when they may be designated as hearing officers they must:

1. Contact the Local officers to set up a time and place for the hearing.

2. Notify all interested parties at least 10 days before the hearing, spelling out date, time and location of the hearing; a description of the nature of the offense charged, giving actual or approximate date time and place of the charged offense; and the names of the charging parties and witnesses.

3. Forward to me at LIU headquarters, immediately following the hearing, a complete and detailed report of the hearing to include the minutes of the hearing, all registered mail receipts, and copies of communications sent or received during the hearing. The report will also include the findings, conclusions, and penalty imposed, if the parties are found guilty.

4. Send the accused a copy of the report describing findings, conclusions, and penalty.

Reports on any fines over $100 will be referred to the Executive Council of the LIU as provided for in the LIU constitution.

It will be obvious that these procedural requirements will greatly strengthen the internal democracy of the LIU. Once the materials have been received in headquarters they will be reviewed by myself, and may be accepted, rejected or revised as provided for in the Constitution. Any decision which I make can then be appealed to the Executive Council of the LIU, and even to the national convention. I want to make certain that all members of our union receive a fair and partial hearing.

Sincerely and fraternally,
SAL MASO,
General President.

REPORT

from the General Secretary-Treasurer

J. EARL FERGUSON

I would like to call your attention to the new mandatory reporting requirements of the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission which are reproduced elsewhere in this issue in full. These reports fall under Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964, and are required of all unions which have had 100 members or more at any time during the period from November 30, 1966 until the first reporting deadline of December 31st, 1967.

For unions which refer employees to employers, the information required in the initial report is more detailed, and these unions must file the information at two month intervals thereafter. At the present time, all non-referral unions will report yearly.

The deadline for these reports has been set ahead once already by the Commission, and there may be other changes before the deadline arrives. If so, we will keep you informed. It is important for all local union officers to thoroughly study the reporting requirements, and meet them to the letter of the law.

A major emphasis in our society today is education. We read daily about the dropout problem—the deprived minority group problem—the general youth problem, but almost all of this concern is directed toward those who are either now in school, or just about to attend, or recently dropped out. The nation has an immense educational backlog to make up among its adult citizens, too. Senator Vance Hartke (D-Ind.) pointed out that there are 60 million Americans 18 or over who have not completed High School.

“Federal educational efforts to date,” the Senator reported, “have been geared almost entirely to the vocational training of the unemployed and the teaching of functional illiterates. Of the many bills passed by Congress relating to education, none to this date enables a high school dropout to complete his high school education.”

To help motivate these adult high school and elementary school dropouts, Senator Hartke has introduced S. 995, which would amend his own Adult Education Act of 1966 to make adult education available through the 12th grade, instead of the 5th, and provide federal assistance to the states to make it possible. Hartke would use existing public school facilities wherever possible, but would provide for the leasing of private facilities if necessary. In addition to the academic subjects, he would provide education to citizenship, parent, and consumer education.

An educated citizen is a part of our national wealth just as surely as buried minerals and the productivity of our working men and machines. Organized labor has long felt that every advance in the general educational level of our citizens is important. It seems neither fair nor wise to neglect 60 million citizens just because they have been away from school for a few years.

Recently mentioned in Congress was some kind of national regulation of the automobile insurance business, instead of leaving this area to the discretion of the states, because of reported widespread injustices against the insurance buyer. In this connection, we might consider a bill now before the Ohio legislature, sponsored by the state AFL-CIO. The Ohio proposal would regulate the auto insurance industry to protect the citizen from future absurd rate increases demanded by the profit-hungry insurance companies. Among the specific provisions of the proposed constitutional amendments are those which would:

Make cancellation or non-renewal of an auto policy unlawful, except for non-payment or poor driving record.

- Give a Government official authority to disapprove rate changes before they go into effect.

Ohio has seen auto insurance rates boosted substantially in the last year, and the AFL-CIO in the state has been crusading against these unwarranted increases ever since. Against opposition from the State Insurance Superintendent they forced the issue into the open and showed that the insurance companies manipulate their books to show losses on paper while they are actually making huge profits.

You may have read stories lately about the sad financial health of the Social Security System. The Reader's Digest recently ran a stinging criticism of the system, in conflict with figures presented by the Government and by the AFL-CIO, pointing out the relative merits of social security vs. private insurance (the individual generally gets a better deal through the Government), the Reader's Digest charged, in effect, that the social security didn't have enough money to pay off its obligations, and can do so only by boosting the tax income astronomically in the years ahead, and that there was no guarantee that we will be able to get our money out in retirement funds when age 65 arrives.

In response to the Digest article, AFL-CIO social security expert Bert Seidman recently said that the charges were "completely unfounded" and that "there isn't the slightest danger that the people who pay into the fund will not be able to get benefits out of it."

Also taking issue with the article was House Ways and Means Committee Chairman Wilbur D. Mills, who had been quoted out of context in the Digest article in a way that appeared to make Mills wary of Social Security.

So if you've begun to wonder about all this, you can relax, knowing that your contributions are going to bring a little extra comfort in the golden years. Social Security, alone, is not necessarily enough for any individual. A strong union pension plan, such as that proposed by our International Union, is needed as well, and private life insurance and regular savings or investments must be considered by all of us if we are to make adequate preparation for the years ahead. Nevertheless, the F.I.C.A. deductions that hurt so much right now coming out of our pay up to the $6,600 mark, will come back multiplied. Say you're 35 now, planning to live another 30, at least. You'll put in something like $19,000 as the deduction schedule stands now, and will get back $252 a month, if married, for life. Count on it.

During our recent convention, speaker after speaker referred to the problem of our youth—both the general problems of a generation that seems to have lost grip on part of itself, and on the problems of organized labor in dealing with it.

Several of them specifically mentioned the recent Kraft Poll of union members, which provided some hard facts about who we are. One of the findings was that almost 50 percent of union members today are under 40 years old. A total of 25 percent are under 30. Three-quarters of the under-40 crowd live in the suburbs. Twenty-five percent of union members have belonged to their union for five years or less.

Clearly, the picture of the "average" union members is different from that which a lot of people expected, and this poses new challenges. The suburban location of our homes explains in part the problems with attendance at union meetings, usually held in downtown locations. The relative youth of union members gives them a different outlook than some of the old-timers. They care less about social security, for example, than air pollution. They do care about the high cost of living, and job security. But they are far removed from the great Depression, and the times of Franklin D. Roosevelt. The move away from the cities also makes the union member more concerned with local political issues than national. It's on the homefront that his pocketbook, his kids' education, his recreation and security are found.

Somehow, we've got to build a bridge out of the 30's, based on the same overriding concern for the rights and security of the individual that sparked the early labor struggles and the post-depression social legislation. It must be built in a style, however, that the "new era" America finds appealing—and perhaps even fun.

Sincerely and Fraternally,
J. EARL FERGUSON,
General Secretary-Treasurer,

It Pays to Know What's In Your Union Contract

WASHINGTON (PAI)—Do you know what's in your union contract with management? If not, you're not going to get all the benefits from trade unionism which are, by right, yours.

The enormous importance of the union agreement and the equally enormous importance of knowing what's in it was the subject of an editorial in Retail Clerks' Advocate. The editorial follows:

A union agreement is one of the most precious accomplishments of our evolving democracy. It brings an orderly government of laws into the workplace, replacing the unbridled authority of a boss. Union members who become familiar with the arduous and heroic struggles of wage earners to establish the liberating institution of collective bargaining thereby deepen their understanding of this heritage.

The freedom to organize and negotiate collective bargaining agreements are not always recognized by law. In colonial times and for several decades after the American Revolution, respected judges looked upon working people who combined to demand higher wages as criminal conspirators. It took both vision and courage for union pioneers to brave the wrath of authority in the struggle to establish their right to unite for mutual economic benefits. It was not until 1842 that the Massachusetts Supreme Court ruled that combinations of working people were lawful.

Further, to appreciate the value a union contract has for a worker, one must understand the changes in living and working conditions that have occurred in this century. Within the span of a few lifetimes, the populations of America and Canada have been transformed from nations of farmers and rural dwellers into urbanized economies in which the overwhelming majority of citizens work for someone else—and most usually a corporation. Almost everyone is dependent for his livelihood, and even for his very existence, on the conditions of employment which he may obtain from his employer.

The growth of the trade union movement is a logical response to the needs of wage earners and salaried employees. It is their best way of bringing into their lives some degree of order and security. Collective action brings freedom from the anarchy and uncertainty which results when workers compete against one another to sell their services at the lowest price to an employer.

With this background, it can be understood that the collective bargaining agreement between the employer and the union is a valuable property to the union member. Like other agreements establishing property rights, it is a legal document enforceable in the courts. It sets forth the employee's wage rate, describes the fringe benefits to which he is entitled, establishes his daily and weekly hours of work. In short, it codifies the many beneficial conditions of employment which have been gained through organization and which have been improved with the growth of the union, the increasing bargaining experience of the union negotiating committee, and the maturing leadership of the union officers supported a unified membership.

The gains which a union member makes as a result of collective bargaining are concrete and measurable. His negotiated wage increases are exchanged for consumable items of many kinds: Food, clothing, and shelter. Other provisions of the union agreement may be less tangible, but they are no less valuable: The peace of mind which comes with job security, the self respect which comes with the knowledge that the union agreement contains a just grievance procedure, the dignity which a worker enjoys with the knowledge that he does not have to compete for favoritism.

Today, employees of the major industries, trades, crafts, and channels of distribution are protected by union agreements which bring order and security into the lives of many millions of families.

It would be a boon to the economic and social health of the entire nation if the importance of collective bargaining were taught in our schools. Failing this, every union member should take all necessary steps to familiarize himself with the provisions of his contract. A dramatic example of this need is furnished from the experience of four young RCIA members. Employed as part-timers, they did not know that they had qualified for the full-time rate until they had attended their first union meeting. In a discussion of their contract, they learned about the underpayment and subsequently recovered more than $2,000 in lost wages. This was done through the orderly grievance procedure provided for in their union agreement.

Like many other rights, the protections and benefits contained in a union agreement must be understood by each member if they are to be fully realized and safeguarded. Without this knowledge a worker cannot be certain that he is not giving away his services without fair compensation. A thoroughgoing familiarity with the provisions of the union agreement is a worker's assurance that he is not working for less than his services are worth. The hours, the days and the years of service which an employee gives in exchange for the compensation and working conditions contained in his union agreement are hours that cannot be lived over again. If he misses out on overtime pay due him, fails to take his rest periods, or is not classified according to the rate to which he is entitled, he is losing valuable property which can never be replaced.

The union agreement is the best way employees have found of securing a fair return for the productive hours of their life. But it is not an automatic guarantee. Only by full knowledge of its provisions and their careful observance can a worker be sure of securing a full measure in return for the productive hours of his life.

Ed Note: It's extremely important in local collective bargaining to spell out completely the lathers' jurisdictional claims and practices. General President Maso has continually emphasized the necessity for the inclusion of jurisdictional claims in order to fully protect our work.

We Need A National Consumer Service Foundation

by Senator Philip A. Hart

Ed Note: This article has been written expressly for the Lather by Senator Hart, who has a keen interest in the plight of the consumer, and discusses some of the reasons for his interesting proposal to establish a kind of national consumer service bureau.

"Don't buy a pig in a poke," is a saw which has not faded away, simply because it still is sound advice. Experience has proven that the man who does not heed that saw fits the description of another: A fool and his money are soon parted.

No one has ever wanted to be "taken." What is new today is the increasing number of consumers who are willing to expend a great deal of effort not only to avoid being a fool but to get full value for their money.

This is good. It is also exceedingly important in a free enterprise economy where each purchase is a vote of approval. These votes should decide which manufacturers are to succeed and which should be put on notice to change or get out of the marketplace. At its optimum, free enterprise should produce an idyllic economic world where all consumer demands are satisfied and all resources allocated most efficiently.

Wonderful, when it works that way. But it does not in the United States today. There are a variety of reasons—many of which the Senate Antitrust and Monopoly Subcommittee has delved into.

One is that consumers today who want to make wise use of their money are frustrated. Sometimes this is because decisions which affect them are made without consulting them. Sometimes it is because—try as they might to find out what's in the poke—they never seem to be able to.

Whatever the reasons, one thing is clear: We—and I mean Congress—have got to do everything possible to make value comparisons easier for the consumer. The Fair Packaging and Labeling Act which was enacted last year was a step in this direction.

But there's more to do, much more.

Recently, I introduced a bill that would establish a National Consumer Service Foundation.

It bears a resemblance to other bills which have been before Congress—some dating back to 1959. But this bill, I think, is tailored better to serve consumers than some earlier proposals may have been. But, after all, we have had eight years to concern ourselves with the problem and during those eight years many studies have been made on the advantages of such a proposal.

You might be wondering what a National Consumer Service Foundation would do.

As I see it, it should be an independent agency with three principal functions: to be the consumers' voice in government; a clearinghouse for consumer complaints, and an information funnel for facts helpful in making buying decisions and in making value comparisons.

Like its proposed predecessors, the Foundation would receive consumer complaints and negotiate nonlegal violations with the industry and refer violations to the proper agency.

That much is in the tradition of earlier proposals. The new important feature goes to getting facts to the public; it is in the information area that I hope the wonders of the space age can be put to work for consumers. It would have the best minds of our Nation zero in to strip the poke away so consumers may have and know the facts needed to make value comparisons.

This information would be strictly factual—with no recommendations of one product over another. And that's a point I think ought to be emphasized.

But if the Government has a stake in the functioning of the free enterprise system, then it has a stake in aiding consumers in making the decisions that make the system function.

Obviously, a consumer shopping for a washing machine needs to know more than it has a wash-and-wear cycle and comes in four different colors. She needs to know details on construction, durability, capacity, and care requirements. Knowing this type of thing, she can then decide which of several mixes of qualities will best serve her needs.

She needs equally in-depth information about paints, furniture, carpeting, wall coverings, clothing, lawn mowers, air conditioners, soaps, polishes, waxes, and the myriad of other products she must constantly select.

It is my belief that this information can be supplied in a useful way. And it should be available at the time and place of purchase. It is also my conviction that the informed consumer is a goal of responsible manufacturers, and I hope they will aid Government in spreading this information.

How electronics will be put to use for consumers is yet to be decided. In the past, I have suggested the feasibility of a nationwide information vending machine system with details on products available at the point of purchase. Fed into that machine would be factual data on the competing products. This is one possibility.

A good deposit in the bank of information could be made by the Federal Government. It does a great deal of product testing to help it make wise choices when it goes out to buy things ranging from shoes to paint. Why shouldn't this information be made public? It was collected with taxpayers' money.

But whatever method or plan we finally adopt—and I am sure there are some other possibilities—it is clear to me that there is a great deal of potential yet to be examined in the world of electronics and a great deal of need for factual and complete information at the marketplace.

ABOUT THE AUTHOR: Senator Philip A. Hart, Democrat from Mackinac Island, Michigan, has made his Congressional reputation largely in the fields of consumer protection, conservation, civil rights, and antitrust matters. He is a co-sponsor of the Truth-in-Lending Bill, and has conducted revealing investigations into the prices of drugs, funerals and school books.

SHOP FOR CREDIT: YOU'LL SAVE MONEY

CONSUMERS may borrow from banks, credit unions, finance companies, and retail stores. Some charge more than others. Shop around to find where the credit rate is the lowest and most convenient.

To shop intelligently you need to be able to answer the following questions:

Do you know how much you are paying for the use of credit?

Is having something now worth the added credit cost?

Are you sure you can meet this payment, plus all other payments?

Will you have any money left for emergencies?

The following tables explain the actual cost of credit for some typical interest rates or service charges:

Charges are based on the beginning amount owed and interest is included in 12 monthly installments:

Quoted Rate	Simple Annual Rate
$ 4 per $100 or 4 per cent per year	7.4%
$ 6 per $100 or 6 per cent per year	11.1%
$ 8 per $100 or 8 per cent per year	14.8%
$ 10 per $100 or 10 per cent per year	18.5%
1.0 per cent per month	22.2%

Charges on the unpaid balance of amount borrowed:

Charges	Simple Annual Rate
$\frac{3}{4}$ of 1.0 per cent per month on unpaid balance	9%

5/6 of 1.0 per cent per month on unpaid balance	10%
1.0 per cent per month on unpaid balance	12%
1.25 per cent per month on unpaid balance	15%
1.50 per cent per month on unpaid balance	18%
2.50 per cent per month on unpaid balance	30%

If you are buying on installments, always observe the following check list:

Read and understand the contract. Don't rush.

Be sure the contract tells:

1. Exactly what you are buying.
2. The purchase price, or amount borrowed.
3. The interest and service charge in dollars or as a simple annual rate of interest.

4. The total amount due and the down payment.

5. Trade-in allowances, if any. Also find out what happens if you can't pay or if you pay ahead.

Make sure you know to whom you make all payments. Many stores assign credit contracts to a third party.

Have a firm understanding about the seller's commitments for maintenance, service, or replacement.

Always be sure you get a copy of the contract and everything you sign.

When you borrow money, ask before you sign:

How much cash you will actually get.

What is the simple annual rate?

What happens if you have to miss a payment?

How does the lender figure the balance due if you refinance?

If you pay ahead of time is there a penalty? Will you get a refund?

Whom do you make all your payments to?

Here's how you can figure the dollar cost of credit.

Multiply the amount of monthly payment by number of monthly payments to be made. Subtract from that total the amount financed. (Cash price minus down payment.) The difference will be dollar cost of credit.

Here is an example: A refrigerator costs $300 and can be paid for by making a $12 down payment and 12 monthly payments of $25.92. Multiply payments x months to be made ($25.92 x 12)=$311.04. Subtract the amount financed (cash price minus down payment $288.00

Dollar Cost of Credit . . . $ 23.04*
Total cost of credit

$300 cash price plus
$23.04 credit cost) $323.04

*Cost of credit equals $8 per $100 per year on unpaid balance of $288. This is equivalent to a simple annual rate of 14.8 per cent.

Mandatory Equal Opportunity Reporting Requirements

This is to inform you that on or before December 31, 1967, and annually thereafter, all local unions covered by Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 that have 100 or more members will be required to file Local Union Equal Employment Opportunity Report EEO-3. All such local unions will be required to answer some questions about union practices. These are simple questions requiring "Yes" or "No" answers or the checking of applicable boxes. In addition, each union required to file must also compete one of two schedules, depending upon whether it is a "Referral Union" or a "Non-Referral Union."

Labor organizations required to report are those which perform, in a specific jurisdiction, the functions ordinarily performed by a local union, whether or not they are so designated. Failure to submit this report may result in a court action to compel its filing.

Referral Unions, as described below, will be required to make certain records for a period of two months, between August 1 and October 31. If your union is a Referral Union, you should pay particular attention to the recordkeeping rules set forth in this letter. Detailed instructions will be included in the report form, which will be mailed to you on or about October 25, 1967. This letter is to give you advance notice about the report and to make clear the immediate and urgent need for you to set up a procedure which will make it possible for you to file a report based on complete records.

Definition of Referral Union

A Referral Union is a local union which itself, or through an agent,

- (a) operates a hiring hall or hiring office, or
- (b) has an arrangement under which one or more employers are required to hire or consider for employment persons referred by the union or any agent of the union, or
- (c) has 10 percent or more of its members employed by employers which customarily and regularly look to the union, or any agent of the union, for employees to be hired on a casual or temporary basis, for a specified period of time, or for the duration of a specified job.

Schedule I to be Completed by Referral Unions

Each Referral Union will be required to complete Schedule I of Report EEO-3. It will be required to record the following information:

(1) The total number of members in bargaining units with hiring halls or referral arrangements, or employed by employers which (as defined above), customarily and regularly look to the union for temporary and casual help. Membership must also be listed by sex and for four minority groups—Negroes, Spanish Americans,

Orientals, and American Indians. However, for all purposes of this report, three of these minority groups, Spanish Americans, Orientals and American Indians, should be reported only in those areas where they are a significant group in the labor market. Spanish Americans include Mexican Americans, Puerto Ricans, and other Latin Americans. The union will also be asked to give, to the best of its knowledge, the number of persons of each of the four minority groups who applied for such membership within the past year.

(2) The number of persons referred for employment during any two month period between August 1 and November 31, 1967, by sex and for each of the same four minority groups, and the union's best estimate of the number of applicants for referral from each of the four minority groups; and

(3) If, and only if, the local union operates a unilateral apprenticeship program, the total number of apprentices, by sex and for each of the four minority groups. This section should not be filled out if the apprenticeship program is a joint labor-management program or if it is unilaterally controlled by one or more employers.

State Laws Respecting Identification of Race or National Origin

The General Counsel of the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission has ruled that State fair employment laws dealing with the identification of the race or national origin of individuals do not apply where they are in conflict with Federal regulations requiring or authorizing the making of records or of inquiries about this subject.

Recordkeeping by Referral Unions

In any two-month period between August 1 and October 31, for which the Referral Union will be reporting the number of persons referred for employment, it will be required to make a record or tally of each such referral and note whether the person referred is "Male" or "Female," and whether he is a "Negro," "Spanish American," "Oriental," "American Indian" or "Other" than any of these minority groups. Please note that it is necessary to count each referral, even if the same person is referred more than once in the two-month period.

How to Determine Sex, Race or National Origin

Any of the following methods may be used to determine whether a member, a person referred to a job, or an apprentice is male or female, or a Negro, Spanish American, Oriental or American Indian:

- a. Existing Record—for example, if the information is in the records of a hiring hall, etc.
- b. Visual Survey—The union official, employee, or agent may note from his own observation the group to which the person appears to belong. This is often the easiest way of recording the information. It is the most common method used by tens of thousands of employers reporting on the Employer Information Report EEO-1.

c. Personal Knowledge—If the person is known to a union official, employee or agent who is making the tally.

d. Self-Identification—The person may be asked to identify himself either orally or in writing. This method is not encouraged and should be used only if no other methods would permit identification. When a person is asked for such identification, he should be informed that it is required in order for you to comply with Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964, and that his answer will be kept confidential and used for no other purpose than making this legally-required report.

Of course, the race or national origin of a person is not always clearly evident, and exact identification is not always possible. A good faith effort is acceptable. It is sufficient for these purposes that the person be noted as belonging to the group to which he appears to belong.

It is recognized that under a variety of referral arrangements in existence throughout the United States, as in the case where referral for employment is requested or made by telephone, it may be difficult for the referral union to compile data as to the race, etc., or sex of individuals. However, even in such circumstances, this is not considered to be impossible and, within the particular framework of its own operations, the referral union will be expected to establish and maintain a recordkeeping system that will enable it to report, for the two-month period, the information called for on the form. In many instances, a daily tally of the race, etc., and sex of persons referred will be sufficient. In other cases, individual records may have to be made through self-identification procedures as suggested above, and regularly kept.

Where referral of persons is handled by an agent of the local union, or under a joint arrangement with other local unions (representing the same or different crafts or trades), it is the responsibility of the reporting union to see to it that the agent compiles the information necessary for the report. The definition of a "labor organization" in Title VII of the Civil Rights Act makes it clear that "agents" of a local union are covered by the law and, therefore, are equally subject to the reporting and recordkeeping regulations adopted under it.

Schedule II to be Completed by Non-Referral Unions

A Non-Referral Union is one that is required to file Report EEO-3 but does not come under the definition of a Referral Union. Each such Non-Referral Union will be required to complete Schedule II of Report EEO-3. Schedule II consists of some questions that require "Yes" or "No" answers or the checking of applicable boxes. It also has a table for apprenticeship statistics, identical with the table in Schedule I, which must be completed only if the local union operates an apprenticeship program unilaterally. This table should not be filled out in the case of a joint labor-management program or an apprenticeship program operated unilaterally by one or more employers.

A Local 327 Loss

Marine' Cpl. Milton Parker-son Jr., 18, son of Local 327 member Milton J. Parkerson, and formerly an apprentice lather, died this past summer when the Marine helicopter in which he was riding on maneuvers collided with another. The tragedy immediately took the lives of 22 marines, and was the worst disaster in the history of the helicopter troop training program of this branch of the service.

Corporal Parkerson was well liked. Local 327 Secretary and Business Agent Earl McClintock writes that he was a very nice boy, and that he interrupted his apprenticeship to join the Marines and serve the country. Not only was Corporal Parkerson's father a lather; an uncle, W. W. Parkerson, a brother-in-law, D.

Corporal Parkerson

E. Reininger, and a cousin, T. S. Cornum, are all members of Local 327.

Young Parkerson had joined the Marines in January, 1966, and had just been promoted to the rank of Corporal when he was killed.

The accident, which took place near Jacksonville, North Carolina, involved a small helicopter, practicing landings and takeoffs, and the larger troop-carrying aircraft, which was one of the Marine's newer types. It carried four crewmen and 29 troops. Miraculously, some of the marines survived the crash, and were able to walk away from it. Most of the casualties were trapped in the helicopter after the crash. The troop-carrying helicopter was preparing to swoop in for a simulated combat landing near a training pillbox target that was to be assaulted by the airborne troops. It was about 500 feet in the air at the time of the collision.

The Relative Merits

This editorial is excerpted from number four in a series of articles taken from the paper, "Plaster vs. Wallboard in New York City," presented by the Plastering Institute of Greater New York, Inc. The purpose of this paper is to focus attention on the performance of materials used in construction and building of interiors, as well as on the effect of such materials on housing standards and values.

In 1965 a gyp. board panel lasted two minutes LESS in a fire rating test than a similar panel tested in 1952, 12 years earlier. Where were the results of the highly touted research and development supposedly carried on for those 12 long years?

Various experts in construction agree that quality lath and plaster construction cannot economically be beaten as far as fire safety, sound transmission control, durability, ease of maintenance, or ease of repair are concerned.

The Plastering Institute does not list the comparative merits of plaster versus gyp. board simply as an exercise in self-defense. We are secure in the conviction (1) that plaster is, in fact, the superior building material and (2) that buildings constructed with plaster partitions are sounder both structurally and economically than similar buildings made of gyp. board.

The claim that gyp. board is "cheaper" is, of course, based almost wholly on first-cost considerations. But, there are also the long-term considerations. Running costs of maintenance and repairs and the uncountable cost of tenant/owner dissatisfaction must be taken into consideration in the selection of a building material.

The price of suburban homes has continued to rise. We contend that the rise would have been no greater had the same number of homes been built of plaster. In fact there is growing evidence that the suburbs are reacting. More and more newcomers are scouting the suburbs for "old houses," built when builders were still craft conscious. A more significant sign is the recent effort by the Town Council in Haworth, New Jersey, to outlaw the use of wallboard in local development.

The alleged economy of the substitute in urban high-rise construction has not been mentioned to the consumer.

The rental or purchase price of space in wallboard buildings is as great or greater than that of comparable space in plaster buildings. What, we ask, is this talk of economy? How does the public benefit?

We contend that when and if there is a cost advantage to gyp. board, it is realized almost exclusively by the builder.

It is a classic example of Gresham's Law at work—to the profit of a few and the detriment of the many.

One other point must be noted in any discussion of plaster versus gyp. board. In addition to the claim that gyp. board is "cheaper," its proponents have been known to embroider the occasional charges that plaster workmanship is not what it used to be.

We must point out that to err is human and that the plastering trades have never claimed nor sought a monopoly of error. If the plasterers, among whom a stubborn pride in craft still exists, are unable from time to time to achieve perfect workmanship, does anyone imagine that gyp. board work will never be slipshod?

If anything, the problem may be worse. For if one plaster wall shows a trowel mark here and there or turns a corner at 89 rather than 90 degrees, the result is still a dense solidly bonded, monolithic, totally incombustible surface. If a gyp. board wall shows the signs of comparably inexact workmanship, however, the result remains a paper-faced, prefabricated surface, badly secured, poorly joined, improperly aligned or whatever the faults in erection may appear.

OUR APOLOGIES for the lateness of the September and October Journals. Rapid Plaster Passes Fire Test

Additional ammunition for the promotion of lath and plaster construction has been provided by the Gypsum Association and the Contracting Plasterers and Lathers International Association, which demonstrated to qualified observers recently that 2 x 4 wooden studs faced with a standard rocklath and rapid plaster system could easily withstand one hour of fire and heavy fire hose stream forces. The partition passed the tests while carrying a load of 2,000 pounds on each stud.

In his official report of the test, University of California observer George Troxwell said, "it may be concluded from the results of these tests that walls of the type tested will resist the passage of flame and heat for considerably more than 60 minutes while supporting a live load of 2,000 pounds per stud. Also, after a 30-minute load-bearing fire test it will resist a standard hose stream and then sustain a double live load of 4,000 pounds per stud without distress, based on ASTM Standard Methods of Fire Tests of Building Construction and Materials."

The structure used in the fire tests used kiln-dried Douglas Fir 2 x 4 studs, Type X Gypsum lath, 1/2 by 16 x 48 inches, with a special fire-resistant gypsum core equal to that used in any of the gypsum wall boards. The lath was nailed to the studs with staples having 1 1/4 inch legs, a 1/2 inch crown.

The panel used for the hose stream tests used nails 1 1/4 inches long, with heads 1/4 inch in diameter, although in his official report Mr. Troxwell noted that he felt either the nails or the staples are adequate for either test, and could be used interchangeably.

The studs were on 16-inch centers, with fireblocks at mid-height of the 10 by 10-foot panels. Average moisture content of the studs was 14.3 percent. Horizontal joints on the Gypsum lath were not staggered, but the vertical joints were staggered 16 inches. The rapid plaster was applied 1/8 inch thick, and the finish plaster went over it, 1 1/16 inch thick on the fire panel. The hose test panel was plastered 1/8 inch thick.

A New Hanger Bender

Murray Schmidt, Local 406, Fort Lauderdale, Florida, is shown demonstrating his recently-developed hanger bender, which he is now marketing. During a recent interview with Mr. Schmidt, he and Raymond Smith, Jr., Business Agent of Local 406, who is helping Schmidt on his project, pointed out that they have sold the benders in the Local 406 areas as fast as they can manufacture them.

The basic idea, Schmidt says, came to him in 1958, but it wasn't until about a year ago that he made a prototype for his own use on a job that involved a lot of hangers. Other lathers became interested and finally convinced Murray to make a few. He sold 40 of that batch. "Practically all the men in our local have bought them now," says B. A. Smith, and one reason is the great amount of suspended ceiling work in the Miami area.

Murray's bender is made to last. He points out that it's all tool steel, and nothing short of being ground under the tracks of a dozer should faze it. In operation, the hanger wire is inserted into the open steel jaws, and the bending lever is moved, in one motion through 180 degrees, to produce a neat 1 1/2 inch channel crotch. For carrying 1 1/2 inch channel irons back to back, the jaws of the bender are first moved through 90 degrees, to produce a wider flat, and the secondary bending arm then moved through 90 degrees.

A lifetime guarantee is provided with the tool, that protects the user against defects in materials or workmanship. Each tool comes with two spare springs and an allen wrench for installing them.

At the recent LIU Convention, Murray demonstrated his bender to members of the LIU Executive Committee. Helping him, left foreground, is B. A. Smith.

Human Rights Policy Statement—Canadian Labour Congress

1968 is International Human Rights Year—the 20th anniversary of the signing of the United Nations Universal Declaration on Human Rights. Every member of the United Nations has been called upon to evaluate how far it has travelled on the road to human rights. In Canada, we have come a considerable distance.

We can afford to look with some pride on the human rights achievements of the labour movement in this country. Almost every major achievement, every campaign for legislation, has involved participation by organized labour. We are proud of the work of our Human Rights Committees throughout the country in persuading governments and mobilizing public opinion to pursue the goal of equality of treatment without regard to race, creed, sex, colour or national origin.

But despite progress made, we cannot afford to be satisfied. Canada is a long way from realizing the ideals of the U.N. Declaration. The stage must still be set for further efforts to improve human rights in Canada.

Toward More Effective Laws

A considerable amount of human rights legislation is to be found on the statute books of the Federal Government and most of the Provinces. The Federal Government and most Provinces boast Fair Employment Practices Acts. Many provinces have Fair Accommodations Practices Acts. Some have Fair Housing legislation.

The legislative picture is far from complete and a major problem exists in the lack of effective administration.

Part-time enforcement suggests half-hearted interests. An effective government programme must be put on a full-time basis. It is not enough for government officers to wait for complaints to be filed.

Many federal manpower centres have been found accepting discriminatory job orders in violation of the law. Private placement agencies in Nova Scotia and Quebec showed the same response in a similarly high proportion of cases. Obviously the requirements of human rights legislation are not being translated into the day-to-day life of the community.

Federal and provincial governments should publicize their human rights legislation in the press, on radio and television, and through widespread distribution of literature. Full-time human rights officers should engage in face-to-face meetings with proprietors of tourist accommodations, employers, personnel managers, landlords, placement agencies, and others, in order to impress upon them their obligations under the law. Such officers should also meet with leaders of minority groups in order to encourage their members to take advantage of their rights under the law. It should be the objective of the federal and provincial governments to develop a high degree of sensitivity to human rights throughout the country.

Equality Beyond the Law

In many cases, generations of discrimination and neglect have produced a level of poverty and inequality which human rights legislation is not adequate to overcome. Large numbers of Nova Scotia Negroes, Prairie Metis, Northern Eskimos and most of Canada's Indians fall into this category. Even if all formal racial discrimination were to disappear overnight, very few of the tremendous number of unemployed Indians, for example, would be able to secure employment. The reason for this is that very few of them have had the background, training, and education which would equip them to succeed in the labour market. Thus what is required is not merely the absence of discrimination, but also the presence of positive programmes which would help the Indians and other disadvantaged minorities.

Organized labour has a role to play in assisting Indians, Eskimos and others in achieving their just place in Canadian life. It must place its experience in legislative representations, in organizational methods and in collective bargaining at their disposal as part of its own contribution toward the development of human rights in Canada.

But the crucial challenge is to involve those directly concerned in the process of redressing their grievances. Without their own active involvement, no solutions are likely to have permanent effect. We must assist them to develop their own organizations to achieve their own goals.

The Canadian Labour Congress urges the provincial federations of labour, local labour councils and local unions to become engaged in human rights activities in their respective localities. Assistance should be offered to minority groups in order to develop effective community action for the resolution of their problems. The approach of International Human Rights Year provides a strong incentive for action to be taken in Canada to remove those inequalities which trouble the national conscience. Organized labour must play its part.

What Gives With the 90th?

What's wrong with the 90th Congress? Its wheels spin. Its gears shift. Its motor roars. But it barely budges. When it does, it is often to go backward. What's gumming up the works under the Capitol dome?

COPE asked this question of several Members of Congress. Their responses in some cases coincide with AFL-CIO positions. In some, they do not. All are thoughtful, however, and all shed light on some aspect of the failure of the 90th Congress.

Mixed-up Priorities

Sen. Gaylord Nelson (D.-Wis.)

In my opinion, the problem is in our priorities. The Congress will pump $70 billion into the defense Budget, but we can barely wring out a third of a billion to train the uneducated for jobs. We can commit billions to shooting a man to the moon and to building a supersonic transport plane, but we can raise only a fraction of that to rebuild the major cities of our land. When Congress considers a bill to root out the causes of crime in our cities, it can easily twist it into a bill which merely forbids riots.

The 'Coalition'

Rep. Richard Bolling (D.-Mo.)

Why is the 90th Congress in such wretched shape? The 1966 elections? Yes, in part. Undemocratic procedures and structure? Yes, in part. Compassion fatigue? Perhaps.

The 1968 elections are one year away. A net shift of 32 seats will give the Republicans House control. As in the last Truman Congress, 1951-52, we again find rising political distemper, a badgered Democratic Administration, frustration over a war in Asia, and House Democrats from east to west, deserting their party on legislative matters.

If this continues, the political casualties will unfortunately not be the Yahoos, entrenched in safe districts, but the relatively new and promising civil rights and medicare liberal Democrats, creators of that brief, shining hour for the United States Congress during the full Kennedy and early Johnson years.

'Vicious Circle'

Rep. Wm. D. Ford (D.-Mich.)

The problem, it seems to me, is that too many members of Congress are over-reacting to the election results of 1966 and to their own interpretation of public opinion today.

It is true that the 1966 election cost of Democratic Party many seats in Congress, and therefore many liberal votes on important legislation.

Too many people, however, interpreted these election results as a reaction against Congress, and specifically against the actions of the 89th Congress.

Many of the members of the 90th Congress have joined in this misinterpretation, and now seem to be allowing that to color their appraisal of current public opinion.

Unfortunately, this has created a situation which is now feeding upon itself in a vicious circle. Public frustration over inaction by Congress emerges as a criticism of Congress. Members of Congress go to their home districts on weekends, and return to Washington with even more reluctance to take action. As a result, public frustration and resentment grows stronger, and negative forces in Congress grow stronger.

GOP Discipline

Rep. Wm. D. Hathaway (D.-Me.)

Although I believe the House is essentially liberal, the combination of strong Republican leadership, the usual conservative bevy of Democrats and the fearful liberals add up to a hybrid, regressive coalition.

It would appear at this juncture that whatever progressive measures are enacted by the Congress will be through conference coercion on the part of a fairly progressive Senate.

What Can We Save?

Rep. Brock Adams (D.-Wash.)

The first hard fact is that in the 90th Congress the Democratic majority is a fiction. Congress is once again dominated by the Southern Democratic-Republican alliance which stymied meaningful social legislation for more than a decade preceding the 1964 elections. With only a handful of exceptions, the 186 Republicans and 91 Dixiecrats in control have demonstrated little or no interest in America's deteriorating cities.

The first hard facts suggests a second. It is that in the House, traditional programs such as agriculture and public works are supported by majorities built into the committees controlling them, whereas, the new urban programs are not. In other words, each committee of Congress tends to protect and perpetuate its own programs. In the older and more powerful committees, continued support is assured by appointing sympathetic members to fill vacancies. The same does not hold true for committees which deal with new urban problems and are less a part of the establishment.

But the practical question this year is: What can we save from the 90th Congress? It seems inevitable that at least 5 billion dollars will be cut from this year's budget. What remains to be seen is exactly what programs will be caught in a monetary squeeze. If, as the President proposes, congressional committees do the budget-chopping, the new domestic programs will be virtually destroyed. If on the other hand, we as liberals are pragmatic, we can probably save something by working out an accommodation with some Southern Democrats and liberal Republicans.

Lather's favorite tool for cutting steel lath, tiles, all wire products. Simple, rugged construction with hardened, high carbon steel jaws that are replaced quickly, easily to make the tool good as new time after time. Easy on the hand thru the longest day, too. A tool you'll swear by after the first time you use it! 8" long with 1 3/4" jaws.
04 680 H7 Only $6.40
Extra Jaws—04 580 H7 $2.00

FORGED TOOL STEEL
NIPPERS

A high quality lather's nippers worth more than the price. Built to take it of perfectly forged and tempered tool steel that's perfect for cutting wire. Easy to handle too—use 'em all day without tiring your hand.
04 507 H7 Only $4.20

NEW! STAINLESS
STEEL MAGNETIC NAIL DRIVER

Because it's longer—a full 7"—and slimmer—only 1/16" diameter—you'll find it a lot easier to reach into those hard-to-nail channels and corners with this new nail driver. Has a strong, everlasting Alnico V magnet set in the nose to grip nails tightly. And thanks to 3/8" hexagonal shank it's easier to get a good hold on this time and effort saving tool.
04 156 M7 Only $5.20

DUAL PURPOSE SELF-CHALKING LINE BOX

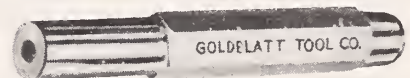

It's a Chalk Line and a Plumb Line, too! Plumb Bob Tip is refill cap. A twist of the fingers opens it for easy refill, another twist locks it. Complete with extra strong 100' line.
09 301 H7 Only $2.00
CHALK for box above. Want cake, 8-oz. cans. Dark Blue—09 304 H7. 50c Red—09 306 H7. 50c

LEATHER
NAIL BAG

Soft, heavy chrome tanned split cowhide, stitched with linen cord drawn thru wax for extra strength. Reinforced on both sides with smooth rivets that can't scratch your hands. 14 1/2 x 10" with 9" deep pocket.
04 451 H7 Only $3.25

G.I. BELT—Sturdily woven, with rugged non-rusting clasp. Will last years.
04 452 H8 Only $2.45

CHROME STEEL
MAGNETIC NAIL HOLDER

Here's a rugged, well-balanced, shaped-to-fit-your-hand nail holder that's long been a favorite of journeymen who refuse to settle for less than the best. Has a heat treated steel insert with Alnico V permanent magnet that makes nails stick to it like glue so you can spot 'em right where you want 'em! 5 1/2" long, 3/4" diameter nose.
04 152 H7 Only $5.00

ESTWING SUPREME LATH HATCHET

An UNBREAKABLE lath hatchet with easy-to-replace razor sharp blade. Forged in one piece of finest steel. Exclusive molded-on Nylon-Vinyl cushion grip will never loosen, age or wear out. Scored face prevents glancing blows, flying nails. Weighs 1 1/4 lbs.

04 300 H7 Only $6.75
Pack of 4 Extra Blades—04 303 H7 $1.00

Professional LATHING HATCHET

- Super thin blade for cutting ease and speed — specially tempered for durability and dependability.
- Proper "pitch angle" of head provides knuckle room clearance and insures direct blows for overhead work.
- Handle securely wedged to blade for "stay-tight" assurance.
- 12 row sharp milled oval face provides an accurate blow from any angle without slipping.
- Beautiful high polish finish. Temper line can actually be seen!
- Best grade hickory handle with large grip area for perfect balance—less tiring.

NEW FREEDOM SHARES

What are they? Who may buy them?

Americans have put their savings to work for freedom through U. S. Savings Bonds for many years. New Freedom Shares do the same job . . . plus. Read how.

Freedom Shares are U. S. Savings Notes. They pay a higher return than Savings Bonds, 4.74% when held to maturity. And they mature in just four-and-a-half years.

For regular Bond buyers only

These new Freedom Shares — which are not redeemable for the first year — are offered on a one-for-one basis with E Bonds, but only to people who belong to the Payroll Savings Plan where they work or the Bond-a-Month Plan where they bank.

There are four denominations of Freedom Shares, each of which may be paired with a Series E Bond of the same or larger denomination, as a "package."

For instance, for $39 total, you can purchase a Savings Bond that matures at $25 and a Freedom Share that matures at $25.

America needs your help

When you buy Savings Bonds and Freedom Shares, you do an important job for freedom, backing our men in Vietnam and helping to keep our country economically strong. The need is urgent. What you do counts.

Sign up

Tell your supervisor or the Payroll Department where you work (or any officer where you bank) that you'd like to join a Bond purchase plan. Decide how much you'll save . . . whether you want Freedom Shares as well as Bonds . . . and just sign the authorization card.

You'll be helping your country as you help yourself. And the country needs your help.

The U.S. Government does not pay for this advertisement. It is presented as a public service in cooperation with the Treasury Department and The Advertising Council.

April 9, 1912, President William Howard Taft signed a bill creating in the Federal Government a Children's Bureau charged with investigating and reporting "upon all matters pertaining to the welfare of children and child life among all classes of our people." Congress also appropriated the modest sum of $25,640 for the bureau's first year.

Signing this bill represented a triumph of some years in which many had backed the effort to found a Children's Bureau and among the most ardent supporters were the trade unions and the National Child Labor Committee.

Two energetic and far-sighted women, however, were the chief promoters of the bureau—Lillian Wald, a nurse and founder of the New York City Henry Street Settlement, and Mrs. Florence Kelley of the National Consumers' League. Lillian Wald suggested the bureau in 1903. Mrs. Kelley wrote "Some Ethical Gains through Legislation," a book drawn on by Congress in hearings on the bill.

Efforts beginning in 1906 when the first bill was introduced came to a climax six years later when the bill introduced by Idaho's Senator William E. Borah passed. Julia C. Lathrop, close associate of Jane Addams at Hull House, Chicago, was the first bureau chief. Guidelines were developed in the early days which marked out areas for investigation, study and action which have been milestones in child welfare. Organized labor had a part in the enactment of the first measure and has always been one of the bureau's strongest supporters.

"THE INJURY TO ONE IS THE CONCERN OF ALL"

REPORT

from the General President

SAL MASO

Our apprenticeship program is so important to the future of the trade and the LIU that I want to follow up on what I said in last month's column about it. It is essential for every local union to indenture apprentices in the ratio of one for every five members. This ratio is a bare minimum. When attained, it will ensure only that we will be able to hold the work that we now have, and not lose it through attrition of membership. It will not be sufficient to capture the new work that will be coming if our industry, as it shows signs of doing, grasps the present opportunities for greatly broadening the application of lath and plaster by professional promotion efforts.

Fortunately, we see a renewed vigor behind promotional efforts. We see heightened public interest in lath and plaster—and not all of this interest arises out of the well-known shortcomings of substitute materials. The tendency seems to be toward renewed appreciation of the decorative potential of the traditional materials.

The apprentice ratio of one to five will not be sufficient, in most instances, to man the jobs that are almost certain to be created by materials and techniques now unknown. If we want a growth trade, a future that promises a broad base of prosperity to help provide for our needs after retirement and to help those who follow us to realize an even more comfortable life, we will have to put our manpower on the line when it's asked for.

This problem of apprenticeship has been with us for many years. In the conduct of research in the files of the LIU, I have found many complaints—from the 20's, the 30's the 40's and the 50's—that there were not enough men to man the jobs. The letters calling upon the General President to exercise the full powers of his office in filling the jobs with competent and qualified mechanics would fill a scrapbook.

The shortage of manpower, furthermore, has worked against us during the recent Hearings Panel proceedings on ceiling systems. Contractors have stated many times that they have used other trades in many instances not because the jurisdiction rightfully belonged to them, but because of a shortage of lathers.

In addition to the renewed appeal of lath and plaster, we must also expect the continuous introduction of new products which fall in our jurisdiction. To secure this work, we must build through the avenues of apprentice training and organization of the unorganized.

With the 1968 presidential and Congressional election campaign building up steam, with the opposition to labor's viewpoint well-financed and loud, and able to speak persuasively to those who are not as knowledgeable as we are about labor-oriented legislation, it's essential for you to lend your support to COPE. This arm of the AFL-CIO performs several essential services in political education which help each of us directly. I have been asked by COPE Deputy Director Joseph Rourke, who spoke at our recent convention, to solicit your support. He points out that our quota is only a penny a member a month. The amount seems insignificant, yet it is contributions of this size from members of labor unions all over the country which provide much of the needed revenues. I would personally appreciate your contributing to COPE. Send your money to COPE, AFL-CIO, 815 16th Street, N. W., Washington, D.C. Thank you.

One of the most important resolutions approved at the 26th Convention relates to the increase in the Per Capita Tax. As with all of the resolutions passed, this necessitates a reprinting of the LIU Constitution, which will take some time. In the interim, I have advised all locals of the specific new wording of the Constitution:

"The revenue of the Lathers International Union shall be derived from a per capita tax of $3.20 per month per member. In addition, each member shall pay 30 cents per month as extra per capita tax for the purpose of the Convention Fund."

And further:

"Each apprentice shall pay a per capita tax of $2.50 per month."

This is an increase in Per Capita Tax for Journeymen of 40c, and 25c for Apprentice Lathers.

Effective date for the increase was November 1. Printed copies of the new constitution will be made available as soon as the Executive Council acts on the Resolutions which were referred to them for decision by the Delegates at the convention

Resolution No. 4, adopted at the Convention related to the granting of withdrawal cards, and the text of this important resolution states:

"WHEREAS, the granting of a withdrawal card is a privilege bestowed upon a member primarily for the benefit of the member who should, therefore, not object to paying the small amount for the renewal thereof in order to meet administrative expenses;

"NOW THEREFORE, BE IT RESOLVED: that Section 184 be changed to read as follows:

"SECTION 184. Regular withdrawal cards shall be good for one year. All holders of withdrawal cards, whether such withdrawal cards be regular withdrawal cards or honorary withdrawal cards, may renew their withdrawal cards by the payment of Fifteen Dollars ($15.00) before the expiration of each twelve (12) months. 50% of this amount is to be retained by the Local Union and the balance is to be sent to the LIU. Members of the LIU who have been in continuous good standing for fifteen (15) years or longer, may take out an Honorary Withdrawal Card without losing their good standing or Funeral Benefits, provided, they pay the same monies to the LIU that other members pay through their Local Union in whose jurisdiction they may reside, further provided that the holder of an Honorary Withdrawal Card may deposit same at any time. He shall then commence to pay full dues as of the month of deposit of the Honorary Withdrawal Card.

"NOW, THEREFORE, BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED: Section 185. If the holder of a regular withdrawal card deposits his withdrawal card before the expiration of twelve (12) months from the date of being issued or renewed, the holder of the regular withdrawal card shall pay to the Local Union issuing or renewing the regular withdrawal card, all back dues and assessments (exclusive of working dues) in effect in the Local Union from the date of issuance or renewal of the regular withdrawal card, plus a Ten Dollar ($10.00) deposit fee. 50% of this amount to be retained by the Local Union and the balance to be sent to the LIU, along with back per capita tax and any International assessment in effect during the period set forth above. The current month's dues shall be paid to the Local that accepts the deposit of the Withdrawal Card.

The effective date on this resolution is also November 1.

Sincerely and fraternally,

Sal Maso

REPORT

from the General Secretary-Treasurer

J. EARL FERGUSON

The Medicare program marked its first birthday this past July. We wonder, sometimes, just what lengths the opponents of the program are prepared to go to in order to make sure the program doesn't work. To be sure, there are problems enough in any new program which is being implemented on such a massive scale, and while there is ample room for improvement, we think Medicare is basically sound and necessary. It would be a social disaster to lose the system over relatively minor administrative details, or the obstructionist tactics of those who are reaping profit from it.

There have been some flagrant and abusive local attempts to "kill" Medicare. One took place in Ohio, where a physician at a home for the elderly ordered 17 out of 20 of its Medicare patients dismissed. Fortunately, the incident was noted by the Ohio Union Journal, and the Government called a stop to the action. In another case, a group of Kentucky doctors hung a sign outside their offices saying they would no longer make appointments with Medicare patients, and that they would have to wait in turn for the first doctor who was free. This seems to be a clear violation of the Medicare program's intent to leave choice of doctor up to the individual.

Further hindrance to the Medicare program has been the refusal of most doctors to wait for the Medicare payments from the "intermediaries"—the agencies such as Blue Cross and Blue Shield that are serving as Government "subcontractors"—and to accept the Medicare payments as full payment. Most doctors want cash on the line from the patient. He then has to collect from the "intermediaries," if he can figure out the paperwork.

For some of our older people, the red tape associated with filing claims is, in practical effect, an outright bar to receiving what is due them. A Washington retiree notes that he has had to set up a personal file system with 16 separate folders in order to keep his claims paperwork straight, and he gets confusing and delaying information from the intermediary.

Medicare also suffers from a rise in doctors' fees, apparently growing out of the initiation of the program itself. While pediatricians' fees for office visits after the first have remained about fixed since Medicare passage, those for internists have gone up about 40% and those for general practitioners about 25%. The Pediatricians, of course don't normally handle patients who are covered by Medicare. The national average for all doctor's fees has gone up around 8 percent since Medicare—far more than the increase in the general cost of living during the same period.

A number of Medicare reforms are needed. Some were obvious when the bill was originally passed, but were accepted by organized labor's spokesmen because they were a necessary compromise to get a law on the books. These include the $50 deductible in doctors' bill coverage, the exclusions such as dental fees and eyeglasses, and the fact that the last 20% of any fees must be paid by the patient. The Medicare patient actually pays about 40% of his medical and hospital costs. It helps a lot, but it's not enough.

The reforms which are now recommended by the AFL-CIO include:

- Mandatory acceptance by doctors of direct payment from Medicare (or at the very least, mandatory publication by "intermediaries" of fee figures).
- A mandatory "Advisory Board" for the "intermediaries," with consumer and labor representation.
- A fixed schedule of physicians' fees, with any changes subject to review by the Advisory Board, subject to the final say of the Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare.

Doctors work hard. They work long hours. Their education requires many years of arduous application and frugal living. Yet their incomes are running in the $35,000 to $40,000 bracket, on the average, and they swear a sacred oath when they enter the profession. They picked their honored calling. Let them guard this honor jealously, or surely others will feel compelled to do it for them.

A proposed new Federal Labor Court is the subject of legislation introduced into this Congress by Senator George Smathers (D-Fla.), and if the bill were passed, major labor disputes would go to the Court almost automatically if they involved "public interest." One of the major changes from the present procedure would be that union representatives would no longer be able to handle cases in behalf of the membership. Only attorneys admitted to practice before the Federal Court could handle the cases, and union representatives would be relegated to the role of witness. The proposed Labor Court would have the powers of a U.S. District Court, and would follow the same procedures, except that no jury would be involved. Another feature of the bill is provision of an 80-day injunction against work stoppages, renewable for an indefinite period.

This bill would turn labor relations in the U.S. almost entirely over to the lawyers. While we cannot lightly dismiss the need for the services and counsel of attorneys, we think that any change which would remove the language and the procedures of arbitration machinery one step from the people involved is bad for the people, and therefore bad for the country.

Sincerely and fraternally,

J. EARL FERGUSON,
General-Secretary-Treasurer.

ONE DOZEN WAYS TO CANCEL YOUR APPRENTICESHIP AGREEMENT

By R. M. "Bob" Earley, Oklahoma State Supervisor, Bureau of Apprenticeship

1. Regard JATC members as old "Fuddie-duddies" who know very little about their industry and nothing at all about apprentices. Pay no attention to them.
2. Look upon a journeyman as an ignoramus because he did not have your opportunities. Do not respect any of them because you do more and better work anyway.
3. Always think of your employer as a man of leisure who has more money than he can possibly throw away.
4. Make every effort to prove that your instructor never knows what he is talking about and be sure and tell everybody how dumb he is.
5. Never be polite or express appreciation to a business agent, employer, foreman, shop steward or a customer. Some "knot-head" may think you are an "apple-polisher."
6. Don't attend classes and never study anything unless you are forced to. Everybody will admire your independence.
7. When you think you have a genuine belly-ache, don't take it to the JATC. Instead, present a one-sided view to the biggest "loud-mouth" in the union or the contractors association and let them fight it out in their respective meetings.
8. Don't submit reports to your JATC. This is just "red tape" and, besides, your own rules are much better.
9. Don't contribute anything to your own education and training. The journeymen teach you the trade, the employer pays your wages, and you owe them nothing.
10. Think of the term of apprenticeship as a joy ride. Don't let anyone convince you that it is a rough, tough period, during which you must make a few sacrifices.
11. If you become dissatisfied, you can always quit the trade. But, never do this, make 'em throw you out.
12. Be smarter than everybody, tell 'em how to run their business, demand all possible changes, and when you know you are wrong, stick by your guns. Don't let anyone else make an ass of you. Do it yourself.

Also shown are some pictures of the work underway on this building. Lathers of Local No. 33 provided the journeymen and apprentices who, according to Mr. Rauenswinder, "did a wonderful job of erecting the plaster bases." Lathing and plastering contractor was Wasley and Rivers Plastering Company of Pittsburgh.

At left, firemen inspect damage. Note the triangular hole where a plastic light fixture was, hole chopped by firemen behind it. Below, Local 33 Lather ties rocklath for suspended ceiling during construction.

Not much more than two years ago, the Gateway Towers Apartments in Pittsburgh was completed—a fine luxury building which was constructed with lath and plaster throughout. The lathing work involved walls, suspended ceilings, and exterior walls, and when it was completed, Gateway Towers became home to some of the city's most prominent families.

In this relatively short period of time, Gateway Towers has proved twice that such construction can successfully contain what would otherwise be tragic fires. In 1966, a fire started in one of the apartments, and destroyed $75,000 in furnishings, but it was checked from reaching any of the other units. In the Spring of this year, it happened again. A kitchen fire in an apartment on the 22nd floor came close to suffocating the maid, but she was rescued by the fire fighters, and the rest of the occupants of the building were protected by the walls and ceilings. There was some smoke and water damage to nearby apartments, and that was all.

The fire photograph accompanying this article was taken when the walls of the burned-out apartment were still too hot to touch, by Ralph Rauenswinder, Director of the Pittsburgh Bureau for Lathing and Plastering. It was Mr. Rauenswinder who was originally responsible for promoting the use of quality lath and plaster in the building.

What he found in the smoke and the ashes was burned-up furnishings, blackened, and lightly fractured partitions and ceilings, but a "continuous membrane" that remained intact and successfully contained the heat and the fire.

THE URBAN CRISIS: * an analysis * an answer

The plight of the decaying American city is labor's concern. First, because the future for millions of poor center-city inhabitants is so bleak, and American labor has always stood up and spoken for the common good. Secondly, because the job which confronts our society in piecing together a first-aid plan for these cities involves construction—massive doses of it—and the building tradesmen is best qualified to deliver it.

In a recent executive board meeting in New York, the AFL-CIO executive Council shaped up a 10-point plan to solve the urban crisis. Facing the problem squarely, the AFL-CIO called upon Congress for help. The problems of our cities are too complex and too interrelated to leave them solely up to local jurisdictions, the organization believes.

The Council's major policy statement urged that one million public service jobs be created; that a massive housing program be launched, and that Congress attack with new vigor help for the poverty-stricken.

As the country dragged itself out of the great depression, the economy was too overloaded with the barest of essentials to permit much home-building. Between 1926 and 1945, when the post-war housing boom began in earnest, there was precious little of it. At the same time, the exodus of the rural worker and the minority groups—primarily the Negro—began, and by the war's end the Negro slice of people living in major cities was climbing from under 10 percent toward the 1965 figure of 20 percent. These little-skilled and destitute people came at a time when the bow-wave of automated production was just about to commence, further complicating the problem. Many were left with no livelihood, substandard living conditions, and the kind of hope and education that goes with such squalor.

Today, in virtually every American city, there are conditions which are in jarring conflict with the general prosperity of the American economy. In Washington, D. C., for example, a landlord was recently brought to trial for keeping tenants in his multi-unit apartment building without heat in 42-degree weather. A walk down some of the back alleys in the shadow of the Capitol building, the Supreme Court and other national shrines, presents a glimpse of poverty and squalor that is almost incomprehensible in 1967.

lowest income brackets, and it has also reduced the tax income of the cities.

In order to attack all of these problems, and more, the AFL-CIO has called for:

One million public service jobs for persons now unemployed or seriously under-employed.

Two and a half million new housing units each year including elements with public housing, hous-

The hard-core slums continue to deteriorate. People who can make it move out, to be replaced with new "immigrants" that can't. Middle and upper-income families—which today include most of the members of organized labor, thanks to a generation or more of militant concern by labor's leaders—have been moving to the suburbs. While this has provided some housing relief in the cities, much of it has been out of reach of the ing for lower middle-income families, moderate income housing, urban renewal, and a model cities program.

Improved and expanded mass transit systems in metropolitan areas.

Accelerated construction of public facilities, such as water supplies, sewage systems, schools, hospitals, day-care centers, playgrounds, libraries, museums, and clean air and water.

USG Urban Rehabilitation Program

- An expanded Neighborhood Youth Corps program to help youngsters remain in school and to provide work and training for those who have dropped out of school.

- Special incentives to teachers in slum areas as a means of closing the educational gap between the privileged and underprivileged school children of our nation.

- Linking of manpower training with job placement and increase training allowances so that trainees can afford to remain in the program.

- Public welfare assistance restructured, with the program based on need alone.

- Reduction of rural poverty, concentrated in the southern and south-western states primarily, by federal legislation designed to provide farm workers with unemployment compensation and the right to organize and also programs in education, housing and training and related activities for the rural poor.

- Economic planning, under federal leadership, developed so that state and local areas can have inventories of local needs.

No city or state government can handle the urban problems without regard to the related problems elsewhere. And private enterprise alone cannot provide enough money or mass enough resources. The failure of the private sector of the economy to provide adequate low-income housing proves this. Nationwide social legislation and federal funds and standards are needed.

If the people of the country express themselves at the polls, and in their letters to their elected representatives, to mount this much-needed program, building tradesmen will be supporting the rehabilitation of the cities and the people who dwell in them with their labor as well as their tax dollars.

The first attack on urban blight sponsored jointly by a major American Corporation and Federal and city governments is being started by United States Gypsum Company. The project is a face-lifting for Lawndale, on Chicago's West Side, which will be an attempt to prove that existing dilapidated housing can be made healthy and attractive without relocating the families to other neighborhoods. If successful, the project could provide one key to this problem which has plagued most city renewal efforts.

USG, at the invitation of the Chicago Housing Authority, the Chicago Dwellings Association and the FHA, will rehabilitate basically sound but violation-ridden buildings at 3721-25 West Elstornoy Street, 809-11

South Independence Blvd., and 3701-27 West Arthington Street. Approximately 150 multi-bedroom apartments will be built, and USG has committed $1,800,000 to the project.

Five buildings are involved, and they should be ready for occupancy by May next year. This test project, USG hopes, will help the firm to develop economical procedures for rehabilitating sub-standard housing in Chicago. The firm alone has already renovated 120 apartments in six buildings in Harlem, New York, and is currently working on 200 more. Study projects are underway in Cleveland and Detroit.

For maximum safety and health considerations, we strongly urge USG to use a "monolithic surface"—lath and solid plaster—in these new projects, in order to offer the maximum possible protection consistent with expense against fire, and the encroachment of vermin and deterioration.

CPLIA Convention

the historic vote to diversify marks the beginning of a second century

Delegates to the 26th LIU convention in Miami this September had a chance to see Jeremiah Burns with a new hat on. The New York City clothing contractor who started out as a lather and has been a tireless worker for the industry's apprenticeship and promotion, had just been elected the new President of the CPLIA when he spoke straightforwardly, as is his manner, to LIU delegates. (See the September Journal, page 26).

The contractors had chosen Jerry to lead the CPLIA into its second half century just a few days earlier. It will be a half century in which the first few years are likely to pose the hardest tests of executive ability, for the contractors made their formal decision to go into the drywall and other materials business—even if slowly—at the Washington convention held this past September.

Among the officers elected at the convention, in addition to Mr. Burns, was William A. Duiguid, who took a Vice President's chair. Mr. Duiguid, a well-known Chicago contractor, has been active in industry affairs for years. Thomas J. McGlone, President of the National Bureau for the Promotion of Lathing and Plastering, was elected treasurer of the CPLIA.

Past President William J. Goodson had laid the groundwork for the diversification decision during the year by conducting eight regional conferences at which the subject was thoroughly aired. Mr. Goodson leaves the top post of the contractors' association to step into another elected post, that of Vice President of the National Bureau.

During the CPLIA convention the National Bureau held a meeting and elected Goodson, and re-elected Mr. McGlone as President for another term.

The diversification decision will not go into effect immediately. The specific resolution called upon the CPLIA to have information on bidding on substitute materials for walls and ceilings available for the members. These materials include "drywall, acoustical tile, moveable partitions, curtain walls, specialized finishes, etc." The official magazine of the CPLIA, Plastering Industries, will be opened to news and features on all of these materials and related construction techniques.

While the text of the resolution called for the CPLIA to "begin immediately whatever procedures may be and are necessary to diversify itself into a National organization of wall and ceiling contractors," an implementing resolution also approved called for the establishment of a study committee, named by President Burns, which will report to the Executive Committee and the Board of Directors for possible final approval at the 1968 convention. Actual implementation, therefore, must wait until the committee has submitted its report and it has been accepted.

In addition to the diversification decision, the CPLIA passed some important resolutions, including an endorsement of the General Pension Plan and Fund. The CPLIA formally recognized the plan and agreed to appoint representatives to the Board of Trustees, provided that the name of the plan be "The National Lathing Industry Pension Plan," and that all publications of the Fund and Plan bear the seals of both the CPLIA and the LIU, and that the Pension Plan be served by joint legal counsel.

The CPLIA also passed a resolution on promotion, which puts the organization on record in favor of its membership cooperating wholeheartedly with the efforts of the National Bureau, and requests members to support the local bureaus and to fulfill their contract obligations to the National Bureau. If there is a contractual obligation but no local bureau, the employers will be required to submit their payments directly to the national bureau. If there is no contract liability, employers will be required to contribute 1/2 cent per hour worked by lathers and plasterers directly to the National Bureau.

Other high spots of the CPLIA convention:

- A resolution calling upon the organization to re-enter the National Joint Board for the Settlement of Jurisdictional Disputes.

- A resolution calling for compiling a file on labor agreements on such subjects as arbitration, jurisdiction, hours, wages, foremen, stewards, fringe benefits, manpower, etc.

An interesting sidelight of the convention was an address by Mrs. Jean Dixon, the events forecaster. Mrs. Dixon sees increasing demand for lathing and plastering, and said the industry's role in fireproofing would be of increasing interest as the world population expands.

A special "open house" was conducted for more than 150 Washington area architects and government construction officials, who were treated to a tour of the commercial exhibits at the convention, and a seminar on the use of curtain walls and plaster veneers.

About Jerry Burns

The CPLIA's new President became an apprentice lather in 1922 in New York, and became successively, journeyman, foreman and superintendent until he founded his lathing firm in 1945. He has served as a member of the Building Trades Employers Association's Board of Governors from 1947 to 1949, and has also been active in the New York Building Congress. He has been a Director and a Vice President of the organization since 1957. One of his most familiar posts to Lathers is his co-chairmanship, with LIU General President Sal Maso, of the National Joint Apprenticeship Committee of the Lathing Industry. Jerry has held this post since 1958. He has also been a prominent Catholic layman, and has been invested as a Knight of the Holy Sepulchre, and a Knight of Malta.

The Relative Merits

This is the last in a series of editorial comments developed from the paper on "Plaster vs. Wallboard in New York City." The paper was presented originally by the Plastering Institute of Greater New York, Inc., and has been widely reproduced in the trade publications. This final commentary sums up the arguments for the need for regulation of construction, and should provide fertile food for thought for all lathers.

The problem of regulating the introduction and use of substitutes is multi-faceted and has been complicated by the frequent absence of criteria with which to judge the avalanche of 'new' materials, methods and components which competing manufacturers have put on the market.

Inevitably, officials responsible for developing these criteria have been pre-occupied with those fundamental factors which (as in the case of reinforced concrete vs. steel) assure that once a structure is up it won't fall down.

In some instances, however, the result of this pre-occupation has been to curtail official attention to other structural considerations. It is this situation, we believe, which has prompted actions such as that in Haworth, New Jersey. This small (pop: 3900) suburban community has for several months been considering the passage of an ordinance that would outlaw the use of gyp. board in the township. The objective is to prevent the ravages of cheap, speculative building.

This attempt to pass a law which denies a citizen the right to choose a particular building material appears arbitrary and may be difficult to defend. The very fact that Haworth is considering it, however, suggests that the superiority of plaster is becoming increasingly obvious to public officials and that the disadvantages of gyp. board are great enough to arouse widespread public reaction.

The implications of this relatively minor resistance have not been overlooked by the proponents of gyp. board. In fact, a representative of the Gypsum Drywall Association in Chicago was on hand at the Haworth hearings, along with a phalanx of builders, contractors and one architect. Typically, none of them was a resident of Haworth. The theme of their argument was that passage of the law would be discriminatory.

Their concern about Haworth is easier to understand in the light of a far more significant blow recently struck against wallboard in Philadelphia.

In July of 1965 the Philadelphia Housing Authority published a definitive document specifying 'Criteria for Rehabilitation of Used Houses.' These binding specifications included a one-line paragraph at the conclusion of the Section on Plastering. This reads: "No dry wall construction will be accepted."

Five months later an addendum was attached to the document which confirmed the Authority's uncompromising stand against gyp. board. Under the Section on Demolition, the addendum specifies: "Remove all existing dry wall construction."

The present New York City Building Code (and the bylaws which have supplemented and amended it) include an aggregate of eight to ten pages of rules, regulations and specifications covering the preparation and erection of the kind of quality control that gives a structure and economic life expectancy of forty or fifty years? If after seven years it looks good enough to sell off at a handsome profit, who will go grey worrying about the built-in obsolescence that may start to bedevil tenants fifteen years later. By that time the purchasing syndicate may well have turned the building over to some one else, to pick up the pieces.

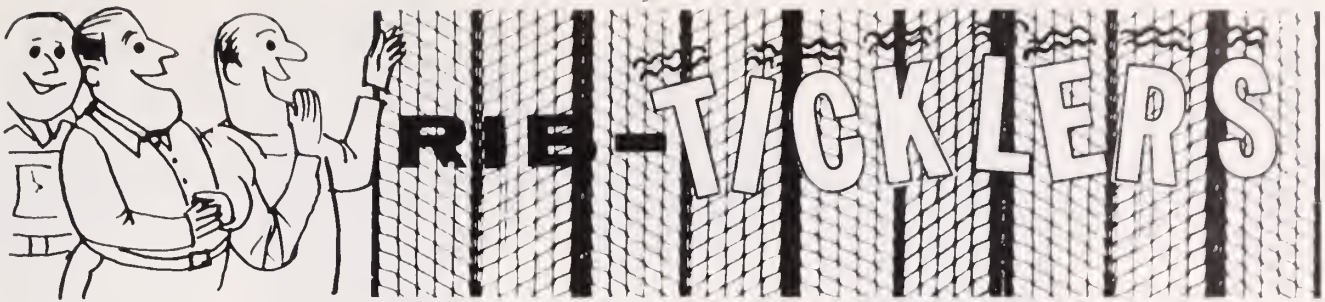

Such statements and the figures they cite are bad enough in themselves. Their full implications in the plaster vs. wallboard controversy become clear when they are interpreted against other figures. According to the previously cited poll of New York's architects, it is the majority judgment of this professional group that plaster's greater strength and durability becomes increasingly obvious after ten years. Almost one-quarter of the respondents thought that wallboard would not stand up as well as plaster after five years in place. At ten years, 51% of the architects thought that plaster would be in better condition than the substitute. Thereafter, the percentage rises radically in favor of plaster, till there is near unanimity at fifty years.

Place such figures in conjunction with the Mitchell-Lama law's provisions. The Mitchell-Lama law uses public monies to underwrite building loans on a number of major new gypboard projects—for fifty years. How can these figures be responsibly reconciled?

In some of its promotional material, the Plastering Institute has described the probable results of gyp. board use in public housing as the first step to "short order slums." The phrase may be too pat. But it is pertinent.

The foregoing remarks may be read and judged as a partisan defense of a mature, as opposed to modern, method of building. We do not argue otherwise. If it is unreasonable to want to perpetuate a skilled craft which does superior work and produces better dollar-for-dollar value, we are guilty. Let us repeat, however; we believe that the self-interest of the City's plastering industry is wholly in consonance with the best interests of the public. We see the incursion of wallboard into New York City not simply as a threat to us but as a threat to present and future building standards and values throughout the metropolitan area.

We believe, therefore, that a clear understanding of the relative merits of plaster vs. wallboard is of the utmost importance to the welfare of our City and the safety, comfort and convenience of its people.

A LITTLE EULOGISM FOR THE SECRETARIES AND BUSINESS REPRESENTATIVES OF THE LATHERS INTERNATIONAL UNION

If the Sec. or B.A. writes a letter, it is TOO LONG.

If he sends a post card, it is TOO SHORT.

If he issues a pamphlet, he's a SPENDTHRIFT.

If he attends a committee meeting, he is BUTTING IN.

If he stays away, he is a SHIRKER.

If the attendance at a luncheon is slim, HE SHOULD HAVE CALLED the members up.

If he does call them, he is a PEST.

If he duns a member for his dues, he is INSULTING.

If he does not collect, he is LAZY.

If a meeting is howling success, the PROGRAM COMMITTEE IS PRAISED.

If it's a failure, the Sec. or B.A. is TO BLAME.

If he asks for advice, he is INCOMPETENT, and if he does not, he is BULLHEADED.

Ashes to Ashes—Dust to Dust,

If the Members won't do it—the Sec. or B.A. MUST.

Fraternally,

CLC UNIMPRESSED BY "VOLUNTARY RESTRAINT"

In a statement issued in Mid-October, Donald MacDonald, Acting President of the Canadian Labour Congress, said that he was singularly unimpressed with the fact that the best solution the Minister of Finance could apparently suggest for coping with the country's present economic ills was a policy of voluntary wage and price restraint. Such action is all the more difficult to understand, observed Mr. MacDonald, when one realizes that wage and price guideline policies have met with failure in other countries where they have been tried such as the United Kingdom and the United States. Added to this is the fact that the Economic Council recommend specifically against such a policy of guidelines for Canada. They found it inappropriate for a variety of reasons.

We are fearful that the wage and price restraint proposition which we don't believe can be effective might be used to lay the blame for any unpopular tax increase next year at organized labour's door.

Only five short months ago the Minister of Finance himself apparently agreed with the Economic Council findings or so one would gather from reading his June 1st Budget Speech when he echoed the conclusions of the Council on this matter.

The Canadian Labour Congress subscribes to the analysis of the Economic Council of Canada that wage and price guidelines are inappropriate for this country. We agree with the Economic Council that there is a very real danger that such policies only tend to detract attention from the need for more important policy initiatives. At the same time it is quite true that the Economic Council envisaged the possible application of wage and price restraints under conditions of "a great national emergency." In our opinion a careful appraisal of the current economic situation in no way leads to the conclusion that any such great national emergency exists. Furthermore, we believe that the technical difficulties involved in developing a policy of guidelines that would prove satisfactory to all sectors of the population are enormous. Right now we do not have adequate statistics on which to base intelligent decisions with regards to wages and prices. For example, up-to-date productivity information on an industry by industry basis does not exist in Canada although our organization, amongst others, has asked repeatedly for much more thorough and continuous research on the matter. Thus the development of adequate quantitative and qualitative yardsticks in the near future is a virtually prohibitive task.

Mr. MacDonald went on to say that any consideration of price and cost stability must subject all cost factors to careful scrutiny. It is not sufficient to just take a look at wages and prices without at the same time considering in equal detail such factors as profits, dividends, retained earnings, etc.—all of which have a profound effect on costs. It was surprising therefore that while the need to restrain wages and prices receives the Minister's elaborate attention the need to restrain profits and dividends, and other forms of corporate income, apparently slipped his mind.

Any partial examination of income allocation or distribution such as might be envisaged in the establishment of wage guidelines is open to very serious criticism. As far as we are concerned the only meaningful investigation would be one that takes into account all forms of income accruing to all groups in our society from whatever source.

Labour Songs Record

The publication of an entirely new album of labour songs—most of them of Canadian origin—has been one of the centennial projects of the Canadian Labour Congress. The Centennial Year has been recognized by the Congress as an appropriate time to make available trade union songs which recall the past and record the present.

This record, "A Century of Song", ranges from the topical "Tilco Song" to an entirely new rendition of some of our traditional songs. The musical group is The Travellers. This group has not only won an enviable reputation in Canadian musical circles but has on many occasions sung before labour groups and on picket lines.

Copies may be ordered from the Education Department, Canadian Labour Congress, 100 Argyle Avenue, Ottawa 4, at $2.50 each.

The Big 'One' Strikes Again

James Tate, mayor of Philadelphia knows it. Carl Stokes, mayor-elect of Cleveland knows it. Richard Hatcher, mayor-elect of Gary, Ind., knows it.

One vote counts!

In elections last week that left few clues to a national mood, that settled few, if any, basic arguments about backlash—despite the fact Negroes cracked the color line in city halls—one fact was reaffirmed: Every vote is important.

In Philadelphia, Democratic Mayor Tate was re-elected over the strong challenge of GOP candidate Arlen Specter with 50.9 percent of the nearly 700,000 votes cast. Hurt by a fragmented Democratic party in his city, Tate won on the strength of a united, effective COPE campaign.

In Cleveland, COPE-endorsed Carl B. Stokes became the first Negro elected mayor of a major American city. He defeated GOP candidate Seth Taft with just 50.3 percent of the vote, a margin of some 1400 out of 256,000 votes cast. Stokes already knew how much one vote counts. He lost running as an independent for mayor two years ago by only 2,500 votes.

In Gary, Ind., COPE-endorsed Richard Hatcher, also a Negro, without the support of his own party apparatus, won a squeaker over Republican Joseph Radigan. Hatcher captured 50.1 percent of the vote with a margin of just 300 out of some 74,000 votes cast.

In another major mayoral contest, Kevin H. White became mayor of Boston capturing 52.9 percent of the vote over Mrs. Louise Day Hicks whose campaign was thinly-veiled racism.

That the so-called "white backlash" is still a prominent factor was evident in Cleveland, Gary and Boston.

Stokes and Hatcher both won narrowly in cities that have massive Democratic bulges in registration and that normally elect a Democratic mayor with landslide majorities. But they won (though both may still face recounts).

In Boston, White topped Mrs. Hicks in a non-partisan race. Both are Democrats. Mrs. Hicks got her votes almost exclusively by exploiting racial feelings. Again, though backlash was there and created a close race, it didn't triumph.

In other significant elections:

Louie B. Nunn became the first GOP governor of Kentucky in 20 years, defeating COPE-backed Democrat Henry Ward with 51.3 percent of the vote.

Republicans in New Jersey seized control of both houses of the state legislature, ending the brief legislative reign of Democrats who won control of both houses for the first time in 50 years in 1965.

New York voters rejected a proposed new state constitution.

Progressive Mayor Richard Lee won election to his eighth term in New Haven, Conn., and in neighboring Hartford, Ann Uccello was elected mayor, first woman to fill the role in the city's history. Hers was a close one. She got just over 50 percent of the vote. ► In Mississippi, arch-segregationist Rep. John Bell Williams was elected governor.

AFL-CIO President George Meany hailed results in Boston, Gary and Cleveland, saying, "American voters rejected racism as a political issue. This defeat of prejudice at the polls is a most important and encouraging national development, and it far outweighs other results on a day when local issues decided many elections."

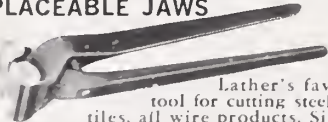

Virginia State Council Gets Charter

At a regular meeting of the Virginia State Council of Lathers held at the William Byrd Motor Inn on July 8, 1967, President Sal Maso presented the Charter to the newly elected President of the State Council, C. L. Bartlett, and extended to the Council the best wishes of the International Union. The following officers were elected at the meeting: President, C. L. Bartlett; Vice-President, M. M. Mustgrave; Secretary-Treasurer, P. M. Lyons; Sergeant-at-Arms, H. Gibson; Trustees, 1 year J. Burke 2 years M. M. Mustgrave, and 2 years G. Arnold. Immediately after the election the officers were obligated by General President Maso, who congratulated each officer and gave a very constructive and fruitful talk in regard to the conditions that exist within our organization. President-elect C. L. Bartlett, of the Virginia State Council gave a splendid talk along lines of cooperation between local unions and pledged that he would do all within his ability to cooperate at all times. The Locals of the Council are: Local No. 11, Local No. 63 and Local No. 501. Shown at right with General President Maso are: J. Burke, Local 63; Phil Lyons, Local 11; H. Gibson, Local 63; C. Bartlett, Local 63, and M. Mustgrave, Local 11. At the right is International Rep. Charles Brodeur.

ESTABLISHMENT OF THE U. S. DEPARTMENT OF LABOR March 4, 1913

Labor, as an important segment of our society, came into its own with a recognized cabinet department on March 4, 1913, when President William Howard Taft, as one of his last official acts, affixed his signature to a bill creating the agency.

Samuel Gompers had an important hand in helping push legislation through Congress. One of the members of the House of Representatives, William B. Wilson of Pennsylvania, became the first Secretary. Wilson was a former member of the Knights of Labor and of the United Mine Workers.

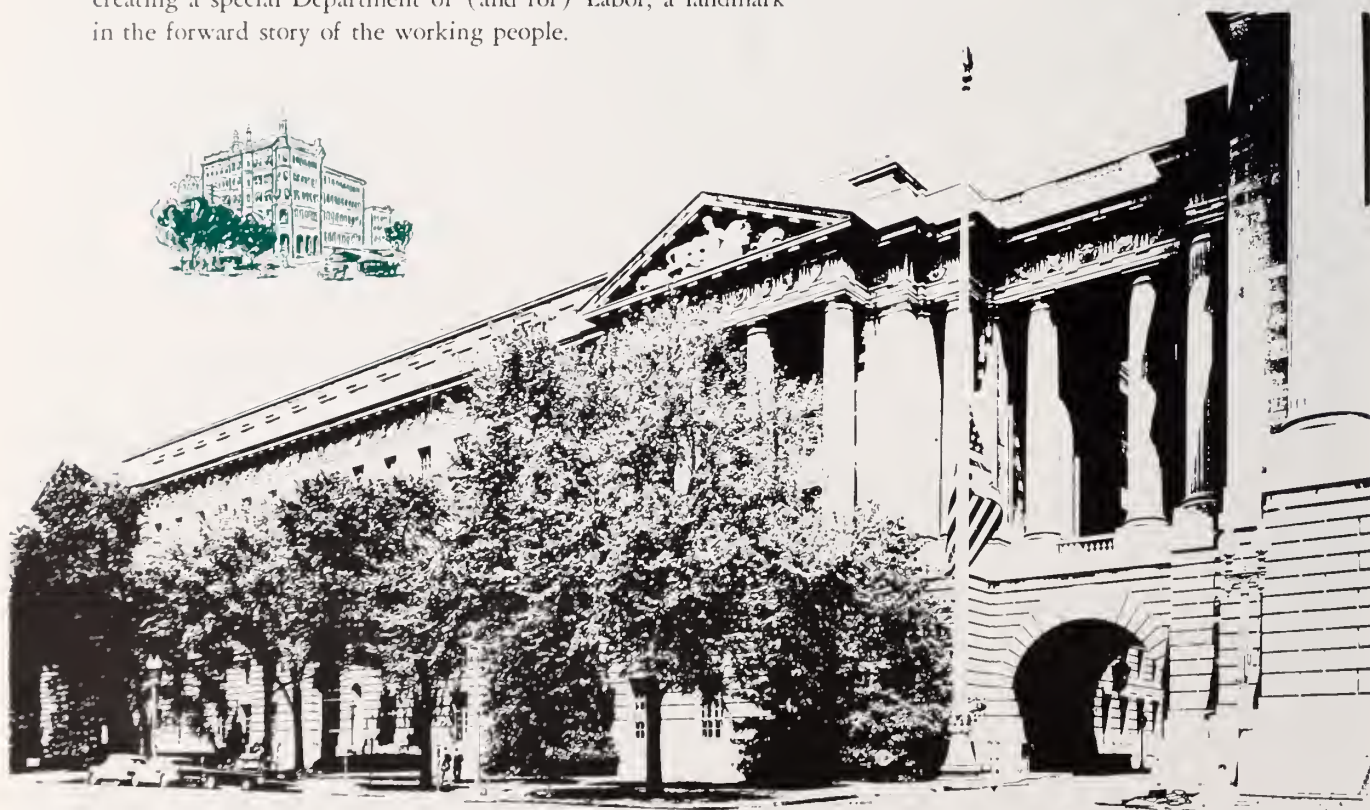

The Department of Labor marked emergence into cabinet stature of the agency dealing with the many problems of working people. The new agency had three main divisions—Labor Statistics, Children's Bureau and Naturalization and Immigration Service.

In 1884 Congress had created a Bureau of Labor in the Department of the Interior and in 1903 created the Department of Labor and Commerce. In 1913 at the beginning of Woodrow Wilson's administration, the Department of Labor with its three divisions had 2,000 employees. By mid-year 1959, the agency had 5,775.

The growing recognition of labor's importance and the increasing complexity of our society have verified the wisdom of creating a special Department of (and for) Labor, a landmark in the forward story of the working people.

REPORT

from the General President

SAL MASO

Over the Million Mark

The Quarterly Report of the General Pension Fund, published in the November Lather, deserves comment. For the first time in the History of the LIU, our accountants were able to report a balance in the Fund, as of September 30, 1967, of over one million dollars. We can all be justifiably proud of this accomplishment, and it is my hope that this tangible symbol of our progress in the Pension Fund will encourage even more of our Locals to participate. The Fund is sound, it is growing, and deserves the support of every single member of the LIU.

On January 1, 1963, The Lathers International Union General Pension Plan and Fund was established for the benefit of all lathers everywhere. The Governing Board, the Board of Trustees, is comprised of four members. I, as Chairman of the Board, and David Richardson, as Trustee, represent Labor. Thomas McGlone, Secretary-Treasurer and John Thomson, Trustee, represent Management. We are aided in our operation of the fund by our legal counsel, Louis H. Wilderman, Esquire, of Philadelphia, Pa.; the auditing firm of Eric G. Jansson & Company of Washington, D.C.; actuarial consultants, Peat, Marwick, Mitchell & Company, also of Philadelphia, Pa.; fiduciary trustees, Manufacturers Hanover Bank and Trust Company, of New York, N.Y., and the fund Administratrix, (Mrs.) L. G. Marsh. Much thought and investigation was given to the final selection of the companies who would set up and assist in the operation of The Lathers International Union General Pension Plan. The progress since January 1, 1963 will bear this out.

Time changes everything, and the original pension Plan set up in January, 1963 no longer met the requirements needed in 1965. Therefore, a revised plan was issued January 1, 1966, adjusting the plan to better benefit the members, both young and old. The old plan provided for contributions of 10 cents an hour. However, the revised plan gives the membership the chance to determine the amount they wish to have contributed, so long as it is in multiples of 05¢, giving the member a higher rate at retirement. There is a 90¢ increase for each 05¢ contribution per 1000 hours worked. The old plan provided for $2.00 per month of pension benefits, but under the revised plan the pension benefit is determined by the number of hours worked and the amount of contribution paid. For instance, at a 15¢ contribution, the retirement rate would be $2.00 per thousand hours worked; at 20¢ the contribution would be $2.90; at 35¢, $5.60 per thousand hours worked, and up.

The number of hours per year in the old plan was 1,200, with as few as 400 for credit. The revised plan allows credit for as many as 1,500 paid hours in any one year and as few as 200 paid hours in any one plan year, so that the participant, to a large extent, can determine his ultimate pension benefit by the number of contributory hours he works under the plan, and is not limited to a flat dollar amount per year of service, as under the old plan.

Under the old plan, no provision had been made for members over 65 who continued to work and passed away without applying for pension benefits. The Trustees felt that provisions should be made for the beneficiaries of these members and have made an amendment allowing a member, at age 55, with 3,000 participating hours and at least 15 years good standing with the LIU, to complete an application for retirement benefits form, leaving out the actual retirement date, but filing it with the pension office for future reference. In this way, if the member continues to work and should die before actually retiring, his beneficiary would be guaranteed 60 monthly payments. The trustees are always looking for ways in which to improve the fund for the benefit of all concerned, and as situations arise, amendments will be made, always with the membership in mind.

When the original actuarial study was made in 1963, there were 30 locals and approximately 2,112 members. Now, at the end of 1967, there are 84 locals and 3,100 members reporting from 960 contractors.

In the beginning, in 1963 and 1964, the records were kept by hand, but the Trustees decided a more accurate and permanent record should be kept and authorized the leasing of an accounting machine, which not only posts the number of hours reported, but computes the amount to be credited toward retirement. Complete files have been set up for all contractors so that a member's hours may be reviewed at any time. All checks submitted are posted on the machine to the individual contractor statements and at the end of each year a copy is sent to each individual contractor for his records. In 1963, these contractor records were hand kept in a ledger with no copy for the contractor.

There have been many changes in the fund since the early years of 1963 and 1964, the fund growing at a very nice pace. With $1,022,000.00 to our credit as of September 30, Manufacturers Hanover Trust Company has invested $1,000,000.00 for us, with a return which our auditors and investors assure us is quite sufficient.

On February 27, 1967, Local No. 102 of Newark, New Jersey, transferred its local union pension fund of $31,964.78 to The LIU General Pension Plan and Fund, and has also increased its contributions from 10¢ to 35¢ per hour. Hours for Local No. 102 members have been transferred to The LIU General Pension Fund, giving them full equity at retirement from both funds.

Our number of retirees has climbed to 25, and a special checking account for the retirement benefits has been in operation since October 1, 1966. The plan also has a new name. Hereafter, it will be known as The Wood, Wire and Metal Lathing Industry—LIU General Pension Plan and General Pension Fund. The General Pension Plan booklet contains all the information concerning the plan, and includes a question and answer section in the front to assist in special questions which might arise. It also contains examples of pension calculations used when figuring retirement benefits. These booklets may be obtained by writing directly to Mrs. Lillian Marsh, Administratrix of the General Pension Plan, 6530 New Hampshire Avenue, Takoma, Park, Maryland.

I am sure that many of you know that over the years at each convention of the Lathers International Union, the issue of a pension plan was brought to the floor of the convention, and many suggestions and recommendations were offered. I am happy to say that at our 26th convention held in September, Mr. Joe Baker, Managing Director of the CPLIA, announced that the CPLIA has voted to recognize, endorse and participate in the LIU General Pension Plan.

Your International Union has tried to comply with the wishes and desires of the members in establishing the present plan now in operation and it is of great value to every member of our International Union. Any Local Union, in negotiating its agreement with its employer, should include the International Pension Plan, and in doing so, can establish any amount acceptable and agreeable to both the local union and employer at a minimum of 10¢ per hour worked. We would like to see every Local Union a participant of the plan, so that its members will have the freedom of travel from Local to Local and can, at the same time, maintain their equity in the plan.

Sincerely and fraternally,

SAL MASO, General President

REPORT

from the General Secretary-Treasurer

J. EARL FERGUSON

COPE has a surprising number of enterprises going at one time. In addition to its essential work of grass-roots stumping for local and national candidates for office, through money subscribed by individual members of organized labor, COPE is constantly at work keeping tabs on the opposition at the national level, and educating labor leaders for effective local action. A listing of the recently-scheduled COPE conferences for 1968 is published below.

I urge all Local Unions, State and District Councils to make every possible effort to send as many delegates as possible to these conferences, to bring back to their organizations the information disseminated about the regulatory and political picture in their areas. Without this vital link in the communications chain, COPE cannot properly function. I am sending to each Local Union the credentials for attending these regional COPE conferences.

Among some of the Programs of COPE is the development of material that appears in your Journal each month. Previously called the "COPE Report", the one-page feature recently was changed to "Memo from COPE", to reflect a change in name made at COPE headquarters. Several times each month, COPE publishes a newsletter on political developments of importance to organized labor, bearing this title.

COPE's slant, of course, is all legislative. In recent issues of its newsletter, for example, the organization examined such items as Romney's announcement that he will run for President, the war on poverty and its budget problems in Congress, the recent GOP sweep in New Jersey elections which could eliminate newly-won unemployment compensation for strikers, the constitutionality of the popular vote, an "open-shop" drive brewing in Oklahoma, and the recent divvying up of one million dollars by conservatives for the next election campaigns.

The nominal amount which COPE asks from each of you seems so small as to be not worth sending along, yet it was made quite clear to us at our Miami convention, that every little bit counts. COPE Deputy Director Joe Rourke told us that it takes money to fight money. With something over $200 million being spent in an election year on political campaigns, and with COPE spending only about $1 million of this—about 1/2 of one percent—you can easily see that organized labor is not able to provide money for its favored candidates in proportion to its percentage of the national vote at the polls.

Do your part. Resolve, with the new year, to get that minimal contribution rolling in to COPE headquarters.

Sincerely and fraternally,

J. EARL FERGUSON
General-Secretary-Treasurer

Be Proud You're a Union Man!

(The thoughts expressed in the above article were originally used in an organizing campaign carried out in London, Ontario, by the IBEW. It was signed by a writer named Jack Williams. We'd like to extend our thanks to Mr. Williams for his views.)

You belong to a union. "So what," you say? "Some people belong to the Elks, and others to the Sons of Erin, and me, I belong to a union." And that ends it?

Not quite.

Membership in the Wood, Wire and Metal Lathers International Union is far more than membership in a fraternal or social organization. That's part of it, of course, with less or more depending on just what local you are active in right now. But the other side of the picture is that you—along with all of the other yous—ARE the union. There were many before you were born, and will be many after you're gone, but today it's the "yous" that are getting the breaks that a lot of people fought for, went to jail for, and—yes—even died for. But that's past history, and few of us are interested in history.

Like everyone else, your kids go to school, don't they? Chances are good that they'll finish 12 years of formal education, and if they and you are interested, they may even want to take the opportunity that is available for going on to college-level education.

Another "So What"? "Don't all kids go to school?"

You're right. Today. Not so many years ago you wouldn't have been right, because there was a time, believe it or not, when kids worked 10 or 12 hours a day, maybe six or seven days a week. That's more working hours than horses put in now—the few that are left over from those "good old days." Just why is it that your kids are going to school?

One big reason is that the kind of people who make unions argued, nagged and hollered until they were hoarse, then went to the polls and voted for what they believed in—compulsory education.

Now, you probably have had a job-related accident, or know someone who has. When the hospital bed or home confinement made it impossible to work, there was some money coming in, regularly, wasn't there? From an employers benevolent fund? Not back in the days when the whole thing started, it wasn't. The unions had a heck of a fight to overcome objections to workman's compensation, and this is one job that's still far from complete.

The same goes for unemployment insurance and all those social laws that affect you and your job. One of the latest is Medicare.

American labor unions have helped to make men and women something more than numbers on a time clock card. They have given the workers a measure of dignity. The grievance procedure, for example. If you have a legitimate complaint, there is a formal way, spelled out in your contract, for getting it settled with the least embarrassment to everybody. It's a system that makes it possible for you to face top management without any concern that you are going to get pushed around just because you want to straighten out an injustice.

All of these accomplishments are something to be proud of. And there's one more thing. It isn't just union people who have reaped the benefits of organized labor's fight. Unions have been in the front line slugging for everybody, on every piece of progressive legislation that's ever passed the Congress. Such things as pensions for older people, more assistance for widows, better allowances for children and a better break for the handicapped. Unions are making headway, sometimes slowly, but they are always in there plugging.

Be PROUD you're a union man!

REVOLVING MOTELS

"Revolving towers motel provides a 360 degree view for each room. Parking, shops and restaurants are located in the structure at the base of the building."

It's fashionable to talk about what's around the corner. This Richmond Architect can't stop thinking about what's coming in fifty years, and he can't wait. He thinks it will be lath and plaster.

Haigh Jamgochian, a Richmond, Virginia architect, brings more than a touch of creativity to his job. He's got a knack for solving the tough ones in a way that makes it look like the problem was picked intentionally. Jamgochian is responsible for these current design efforts: A Richmond Apartment that hangs 30 wedge-like apartments from a smallish "truck"; a crescent-shaped residence, and motels that revolve on a central shaft. For the Metal Lath Association, Jamgochian jotted down some thoughts about what's coming fifty years hence, to help the Association celebrate the first 50 years of the CPLIA. Here's what he had to say.

The profession of architecture has existed for less than a century and a half in this country. It has been concerned with "firmness"—the ability of a building to persist on its site. Today, large corporations continue building copies of Colonial, Greek Revival, etc., as a symbol of permanence. The architect has been the accessory, if not the criminal, in hampering the growth and development of architecture.

With the aero-space industry opening new areas in everything from shipbuilding to sky-rocketing, there is a "great-awakening" in this country. With the greatest genius and creative minds the nation has to offer, this industry has developed new facets for all professions, including architecture.

It is interesting to predict whether the architect will take advantage of this "awakening" or whether he will hide this light under a bushel and continue to emphasize the monumental and the static in his buildings and—consequently—in our society. I predict that 50 years from now, buildings will take forms more closely related to their functional and structural elements. Some buildings will be static and earth bound, some rotatable, some mobile and others will fly.

The static and earth bound are familiar. We see good and bad examples all around us. The trouble with these is the time element involved. The critics need at least a quarter century to decide if the architecture is good, and if it is, then the question is whether man should hold back progress by clinging to something that is good, but out of date.

The rotatable building is easier to judge because it must function properly to be successful. However, this could prevent a question if the architect decides to use Greek Revival details instead of functional elements of construction.

Mobile buildings will require even less difficulty in judging good from bad. The building will have basically a line of direction—the direction of travel. The rest will be secondary, and if it's kept functional, it will be successful.

The flying building will have many applications—temporary offices, military camps, vacation cabins, and many others. This building will be the least difficult to judge. No one would dare apply a useless detail. This is where we finally abandon the Colonial—once and for all!

Metal lath construction will continue to be a basic element because of its adaptability to many forms and strengths. With all the unpredictable shapes and sizes of buildings to develop by the year 2017 A.D., whether they stand earth bound or fly, the structure itself or the environment of its landing base will contain shapes, curves and surfaces which metal lath and similar systems will solve. Examples of this use are expressed in several of my buildings—the "Mushroom" office building, the "Tree House" apartment and the rotating motel.—

Haigh Jamgochian

OFFICE COMPLEX

"Thin shell concrete in the form of mushrooms is the basic element of this office building. Six of these related in a circle provide the necessary space required for mechanical equipment, stairs, etc. The exterior of each mushroom is enclosed in glass and provides office space. All work spaces are in view of an open court in the center of the building."

MOON-SHAPED HOUSE

Shaped like a fat crescent moon, the house of "Mad Man Dapper Dan the Used Car Man" in Richmond, Va., is another Jamgochian design that makes sense. A window wall forms the inner arc and every room has a floor-to-ceiling view of the James River. The other wall provides a protective arc around the house to insure privacy.

CONSTRUCTION OUTLOOK: 1968

Better Times A' Comin, according to the industry prophet.

The impact of the British financial crisis on this side of the Atlantic could slow the fast-reacting home-building market in 1968. But even if the rise in the prime discount rate by the Federal Reserve Board, and the accompanying increase in interest rates by commercial banks has an effect, the total construction industry picture—including the areas of most interest to the lathing trade—looks pretty good.

The F. W. Dodge Corporation's annual forecast indicates a rebound for the total market from two years of so-so activity. Total contract values are forecast for a record of $56,950,000,000, a 10 percent increase over the estimated total for 1967. The Dodge Company's forecast was presented in the F. W. Dodge Construction Outlook 1968, presented by Chief Economist George A. Christie at a recent industry conference.

According to its 1968 forecast, Dodge sees improvement in all sectors of the industry next year:

- Expansion of commercial building activity will spark a four percent gain in the business-related segment even though manufacturing plant construction will be lagging for a time.

- Institutional building will benefit from renewed activity in hospital construction as school building levels off.

- Highway construction and public works will support a five percent increase in community building.

- An upsurge in contracts for one- and two-family houses and apartment buildings will spark a 20 percent increase in residential contract values.

Just How Good?

"There's general agreement that the economy is entering a period of renewed expansion during the closing months of 1967," explained Christie. The big question, he points out, is how strong the advance will be. "There's an unusually wide range of opinion on the subject," the economist noted.

Some analysts fear an economic expansion that runs the risk of faltering at the first withdrawal of monetary and fiscal supports. Others anticipate so heavy a surge of demand that it will require deliberate restraint to prevent rampant inflation.

"Somewhere between these extremes," Christie believes, "lies the most likely course of economic events."

Government demands for construction will grow more slowly than last year but will nevertheless be $15 billion higher than in 1967. With military spending budgeted to level off in 1968, there is growing pressure for expansion of domestic programs—particularly those bearing on the urgent needs of our cities.

Demands of the business sector, according to Christie, will be more expansive during the coming year, mostly through additions to inventory. After 1967's stock pruning, moderate inventory expansion will parallel rising consumer demand; but the role of business spending for plant and equipment will be small by past standards.

Personal incomes will be substantially larger in 1968 and—in contrast to this year—consumers will be spending a higher percentage of their incomes. Even though taxes take a bigger bite, total consumer spending can rise as much as $30 billion next year.

"Compared with 1967's government-dominated economy, next year offers a somewhat more balanced expansion," Christie said. "All sectors—business, government and consumers—will be adding to total demand so that whatever slack exists now should be taken up during the year. Even if we have the added restraint of higher taxation, Gross National Product will advance more than $50 billion in 1968 to about $840 billion.

An analysis of how next year's economic environment will affect each of the four—business, family, institutional and community—construction markets follows:

Stores Big Gainer

The great capital boom of the Sixties which ground to a halt during the first quarter of 1967 took no one by surprise, according to the Dodge economist. The indicators—slackening orders for new machinery and contracts for new industrial and commercial buildings—began signaling the end of 15 consecutive quarters of expansion late in 1966.

Last fall's suspension of investment tax credits and accelerated depreciation incentives coupled with the high inventory position industry found itself in last year and the concomitant reduction in output to restore balance all contributed to the marked slowdown.

Restoration of the tax and depreciation incentives and the correction of the high inventory situation—virtually completed by mid-1967—stimulated a revival in plant and equipment spending late this year that will extend into 1968. "But the size of next year's gain," Christie cautions, "will be small. The recent downturn in corporate profits already has reduced funds available for investment, and next year's surtax will lower net profitability on future revenue," he explained. The increase in fixed investment outlays probably will be approximately five percent.

The impact these trends will have on 1968 contract values for future new business-related construction indicates:

- a two percent gain in individual plant contracts.

- store contracting values will be up 10 percent.

- office building contracts will decline moderately after a flurry of activity in mid-1967.

- contract values for new utilities construction will be up five percent to $2.0 billion.

The combined value of all business-related construction contracts will advance about four percent to approximately $12.3 billion.

Residential?

Before the U.S. increase in interest rates, F. W. Dodge said, the big gain in 1968 construction contract values will come from the market that is most overdue—housing, including one- and two-family houses and apartment buildings.

Residential building activity responded quickly to 1967's easier credit conditions and improved steadily from its badly depressed levels of the beginning of the year to almost normal—an estimated $19.2 billion—by year-end.

Apartment building recovery, once it responded to improved market conditions, was even more dramatic than housing's. From a low rate of only one-third its 1966 peak, apartment building began to pick up in February 1967. By mid-year the rate had reached 75 percent of its former volume.

Institutional building, another casualty of last year's credit shortage, quickly reasserted itself as soon as the long-term capital market eased because of the latent demand for educational and health facilities. Lower interest rates during the first quarter of 1967 allowed states and municipalities to increase borrowing to a record amount. By mid-1967 the rate of contracting for institutional buildings was right back on trend.

During 1968 gains in contract values for high school and college-level construction will offset the decline in elementary school building (enrollments are shifting heavily in favor of the higher ages). The result: a slight sag in physical volume and a one percent gain in contract values for 1968. Educational contract values are estimated at $5.2 billion for 1967.

Hospital construction, like educational building, rebounded swiftly in early 1967 and were above normal levels by mid year.

A return to the established five percent per year growth trend of the 1963-1966 period—a reflection of construction experience under all the public aid programs—is a guide to 1968 performance. Next year's resumption of previous growth will involve a better-than-average gain of close to 10 percent—but short of $2.0 billion. This year's construction contract values for hospital building will reach an estimated $1.3 billion.

Total institutional building contract values (including a few small categories not discussed above) should advance by four percent to $9.0 billion in 1968. According to preliminary estimates, institutional building contract values will total $8.6 billion this year.

With a record national defense commitment of more than $70 billion already locked in for fiscal 1968, it remains for Congress to set priorities among domestic spending alternatives. Maximum pressure is being exerted for reductions of most non-defense items, while debates over the size of next year's deficit and proposed taxation goes on.

Christie believes the key construction types in the community demand group can be expected to behave as follows during 1968:

- contract values for street, highway and bridge building (with allowance for some decline from the unusually high amount of bridge building during the past two years) should climb to $6.7 billion from 1967's estimated $6.4 billion—a five percent gain.

- construction of sewer and water systems will have another good year with sewer systems contributing most to the anticipated five percent gain. Construction contract values should reach $2.1 billion compared with the $2.0 billion expected during 1967.

OUR APOLOGIES for a misprint in the November issue which incorrectly identified Jeremiah Burns, the new President of the CPLIA, as a "clothing" contractor. As most of our readers should already know, Mr. Burns has been a prominent and respected lathing contractor in the City of New York for many years. Our sincere regrets for this typographical error.

LOCAL 207 BUILDS A NEW

VANCOUVER in British Columbia, is about halfway through the construction of its modern airport terminal. Feeling a need for a facility that would be able to cope with today's air travellers and be able to meet expansion at minimum cost, the city decided to do the job right. The new airport building is being built on a plot of land adjacent to the existing airport, but completely separate. When it's through, it will be one of the most modern terminals in the world.

Major factors in the construction, in addition to convenience and comfort of the air traveller, have been safety and economy, achieved through the use of lath and plaster construction including acoustic plaster finish in major areas, and metal lath base and gypsum plaster with portland cement in other areas.

AIRPORT FOR VANCOUVER

Members of Local 207, Vancouver, did all the work, and there was a surprisingly small force on the job. Mr. A. R. Crookes, Sales Manager of the Expanded Metal Company of Canada, who provided the illustrations for this article, points out that there were only 6 lathers working in early October on the job. "The work has progressed from the lathing and plastering side very well," he reported, "and at no time has this subcontractor held up the project." Expanded Metal provides the metal lath and accessories used on the job.

The lather foreman is Bob Buttle, and the lathing contractor is the joint venture of two contractors—Henry Hale and Ernest Damon—operating as Whitehale Joint Venture.

Architects are Thompson, Berwick and Pratt, and the general contractor is the Foundation Company of Canada.

APPRENTICESHIP AND THE GI BILL

A Message from the Federal Government's Apprenticeship Director

by HUGH C. MURPHY, Administrator

Bureau of Apprenticeship and Training, U. S. Department of Labor

The military and naval forces of our country are discharging veterans at the rate of 50,000 a month—more than half-a-million a year.

Opportunities for education and training have been opened for them to help in the conversion from military to productive civilian status.

Many of these returning veterans will not be able nor have the inclination to attend college. For them the skills of apprenticeship may be the key to a highly productive career and all the personal and professional satisfactions incident thereto.

In a sense, the returning veteran is a kind of windfall for industry. It is true that his military experience will be remote in varying degrees from the apprenticeable occupations. But on the other side, the veteran is a skilled man in his own right, accustomed to both the idea and fact of training. The discipline of learning is no stranger to him. For his two or more years of military service, he is a better man.

It would seem to me that one of the most effective means for resolving the continuing skilled manpower problem in the apprenticeable trades rests in the ranks of our returning veterans.

More than this, the returning veteran offers industry and labor a monumental and no more timely opportunity to dissipate the plague of skilled manpower shortages and simultaneously to reward those men who fought for us in one of late history's ugliest and dirtiest conflicts.

The returning veteran also provides the occasions for both labor and industry to meet their stated equal opportunity objectives. About 10,000 discharges every month will be Negroes or other minorities. The veteran, whatever his color, will be the first to acknowledge that the searing flares of Vietcong firepower somehow failed to make any ethnic distinctions in seeking out human targets.

Moreover, the returning veteran will be more amenable to apprenticeship because of the financial assistance provided in the Veterans' Pension and Readjustment Assistance Act of 1967. Regardless of the wages paid by an employer, this legislation initially authorizes a monthly training assistance allowance of $80 to the single veteran and $90 to $100 for the veteran with one or more dependents, with a sliding scale of assistance as they move up the financial ladder.

The veteran-apprentice will thus be in a better position to withstand the "leaner" period of apprenticeship. Because of this, he will be less distracted, more trainable, more single minded, and more determined. To the apprenticeship sponsor this will mean far fewer cancellations and a much higher completion rate.

Time has the universal habit of not standing still. On the other hand, all those conditions conducive to training in the craft skills are here now. There will hardly be a time more acceptable for concerted action in at least neutralizing the shortages of trained manpower skills. Neither will there likely be more suitable, or more desirable apprentice candidate than the Vietnam veteran.

A Citation for Hoyle Gilbert

In recent ceremonies in Washington, attended by representatives of the employers, the LIU, the actuaries and the accountants handling the Joint Pension Plan and Fund, former Trustee Hoyle Gilbert, shown here at the center with LIU General President Sal Maso, was honored for his contributions to the development of the fund. With Mr. Gilbert in the picture, in addition to the General President, are LIU Trustee Dave Richardson, a representative of the banking firm, Fund secretary Judy Mayberry, actuary Ben Salus, and Thomas McGlone, Secretary-Treasurer of the Fund.

Politics, Paychecks and You

A recent issue of COPE Memo (Oct. 2, 1967) warned that the U.S. Chamber of Commerce, National Association of Manufacturers and conservatives in Congress are mounting an all-out campaign against trade unions. "They're going for the jugular," the Memo stated.

It could as easily have said, "They're going for the pocketbook . . . yours."

For at the root of their attack is the fact that weakened unions will diminish the bargaining power of workers.

A case in point is the campaign to prohibit coordinated multi-union bargaining, embodied in a bill introduced by Sen. Strom Thurmond (R.-S.C.) and backed by the business associations.

This carries a high price tag on it for working people. It grows out of the coordinated 11-union negotiations with General Electric and Westinghouse last year.

Joint bargaining with these industrial giants involved some 200,000 union members. In the six years prior to 1966 negotiations, GE and Westinghouse workers had been hurt by hard-nosed "Boulwareism." In 1960, yearly wage increases and a cost-of-living escalator were lost. In 1963, already weak arbitration clauses were diluted. The companies waged campaigns for a downward reclassification of job rates, an end to incentive bonuses, institution of speed-ups. The grievance procedure became clogged.

The total six-year wage gain was only 10-12 percent, barely exceeding the living cost rise of 9½ percent over the same period. Wages and fringes combined rose only six cents a year. In comparable industries, in the same period, the annual hourly wage-fringe increase was nearly double, 10-14 cents an hour.

Joint, multi-union bargaining turned around the six-year pattern. The difference it made was dramatic, and rewarding:

- The 1966 agreement doubled the total gains of the contracts covering 1960-66.

- Important benefits lost in 1960 were restored. An annual wage increase was won, a partial cost-of-living escalator was established, inequity adjustments were negotiated.

- Pensions, insurance and vacations were substantially improved.

This is what multi-union bargaining achieved, and this is what aroused congressional conservatives and business leadership. Thurmond's bill is their retaliation.

As the October 2 Memo pointed out, the outcome of the conservative attack on multi-union bargaining and on unionism generally depends on the outcome of the 1968 elections. If conservatives succeed at the polls, their "labor law reform" package will succeed in the 91st Congress. If they go down at the polls, their package will go down with them.

They're already at work for 1968. Are you?

Warning!

A five-part series on "labor law reform" has been completed in the official publication of the National Association of Manufacturers.

The final wrap-up article, by William F. May, chairman of the NAM Industrial Relations Committee, sounds the call for action: "The time is now. Let it not be said that industry side-stepped the challenge for reform when both the need and the opportunity were so clear."

The key word is "opportunity." The article senses a climate of opinion today like that "which led to passage of Taft-Hartley in 1947 and Landrum-Griffin in 1959."

The "opportunity," though not spelled out, is election of a conservative Congress in 1968 that will enact "labor law reform."

Ontario Building Trades Council Tackles the Prefab Issue

A proposal for joint negotiations by unions in the construction industry was put forward at the recent Sarnia meeting of the Ontario Building and Construction Trades Council, as one way to avoid the "political" maneuvering by each union to make its raises bigger than another union. One delegate said that such haggling is basically "playing politics," and that it is necessary to be honest with the rank and file about it.

The proposal for joint negotiation was put in the form of a resolution, and approved by the delegates.

No immediate solution was found to the second major problem examined at the conference—prefabrication of building components, and perhaps even whole buildings units; There is much discussion, and some work going on today, in using a modular building concept including even the installation of whole rooms at a time. At Expo, in the spectacular Habitat, we saw what is possibly the forerunner of much new housing designed for solution of the urban renewal problem.

Already, in some parts of the United States for example, large lath panels are being shop-prefabricated for installation at the site, and there are new pre-lathed, self-contained utility buildings on the market that are virtually bolted together at the site, plastered in place with cement, and ready for use.

The building trades, in order to prepare for this kind of technology in in low-cost building structures, must move into the organization of factories where building units are prefabricated, delegates were told by James Black, co-ordinator for the AFL-CIO Building Trades Department in Canada. In anticipation of this problem, Canadian delegates, along with others, at the LIU Convention in Miami last fall, approved the resolution for the establishment of an industrial division for organizing purposes, to include in the potential membership of the LIU those who make, service, or handle products used in the lathing trade.

Black said that the construction industry is planning to increase the use of prefab components. His warning was underlined by the announcement of a two-year study by a University of Toronto research group aimed at finding new forms of urban housing that could be produced at lower unit costs than present forms.

The study is to be done within the framework of the present construction industry, but there is nothing to prevent it from going beyond it.

"Low rise housing", a press conference was told, "is virtually predestined for the most appropriate application of prefabrication methods."

Jim Black's view was that it is unrealistic to think that it would be possible to compel contractors "to disassemble factory built components and have them put together by craft workers on the site."

If the building trades do not prepare to move into the factories, the AFL-CIO representative thought that some unions would simply disappear.

A management representative from the London and District Construction Association put it another way. He told the convention that unions are pricing themselves out of the market. "That's why we have dying trades today," he said.

Elevator Accident Fatality

The accident in Jacksonville, Florida, which had already claimed the lives of seven lather members of Local No. 59, Jacksonville, Florida, over ten years ago, took the life of an eighth man just a few weeks ago. A total of 19 were either injured or killed in the accident.

Charles Nelson, a Jacksonville building tradesman, died after ten years of coma, during which doctors reported that only an occasional flutter of his eyelids and a low noise in his throat indicated consciousness.

Fred H. Cooligan, a retired member of Local No. 59, informed us of Mr. Nelson's death, and recalled the raising of a benefit fund for the families of the seven lathers who died instantly or shortly thereafter in the accident. About $3,000 was raised in about five minutes, he remembers, at the Long Beach Convention of the LIU.

The injured and killed men were through work for the day, and attempted to ride five stories down on the hoisting elevator which had been lifting marble slabs all day. The elevator plunged to the ground when the cable broke with the weight of the men.

ADAMSON LAW— 8-HOUR DAY FOR RAILROAD WORKERS

September 3, 1916

Legislation affecting railroad workers has been voluminous. One measure enacted September 13, 1916, the Adamson Law, aroused controversy and bitterness at the time.

This law provided for an eight-hour day, time and a half for overtime for employes on interstate railways—without a wage-cut. The law was challenged in the courts by the carriers. After waiting patiently for months, the rail workers demanded the institution of the eight-hour day and called a strike for March 17, 1917.

President Woodrow Wilson got a 24-hour postponement, whereupon the carriers agreed to the eight-hour day regardless of the pending court decision. The next day after agreeing to the shorter day, the United States Supreme Court in Wilson vs. New sustained the law and the power to regulate wages and hours in the railroad industry. The Supreme Court justices divided five to four in the epochal decision.

This was only one of several vital decisions affecting labor made by the Supreme Court in 1917, a year which was a period of several important victories in the high court in behalf of labor. Of all these, perhaps, the one upholding the Adamson law is best remembered and is indeed a landmark of labor, especially of railroad labor.
